The War on Coupons and Trading Stamps

ON April 22nd the American Newspaper Publishers' Association condemned the profit-distributing coupon plans and similar schemes, and now the American Fair Trade League has sent out a second letter pertaining to the campaign against coupons and trading stamps instituted by the League early this year.

This Excessiveness or Wart on the ordinary system of business first appeared on the surface in the United States—it has never become so popular or general in this country, but it is in evidence in every town of any size; for this reason it is instructive to see how in America, its birthplace, the trades of the country are turning against it.

The American Fair Trade League Committee say:—

"Our letter of inquiry of February 25th as to your attitude toward this agitation was prompted, as explained therein, by the close relation of the subject to the standard price cause. It would be impracticable and, in the case of many members, a violation of confidence to do more than summarise the replies to our inquiry:—

"Number of manufacturing members, 154; number using any kind of coupons, less than a dozen; number using any one band of coupons, less than half a dozen.

"With more than 50 per cent. of our members the question of coupons is largely academic because of the difficulty or inappropriateness of using them with their product. For instance, coupons are impracticable with such articles as automobiles, talking machines, vacuum cleaners, carpet sweepers, canned goods, &c.

"The word 'coupons' as herein used refers to forms used by manufacturers and enclosed in the package of their product; the term 'trading stamps' refers to forms given by retailers with consumer purchases.

"It was predicted in the former letter that the movement would become formidable—that retailers would be found substantially united in opposition to profit-sharing coupons, and that a sympathetic rebellion by the smaller merchants against trading stamps would occur.

"All of these expectations have been realised; the growth and influence of general trade sentiment is seen in the passage of resolutions by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association on April 22nd, condemning 'alleged profit-distributing coupon plans and similar schemes,' and asserting that they had attained a growth which made them 'a menace to legitimate business, and had inspired legislation prohibiting them in various States.' One week earlier, on April 15th, Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, made the declaration that 'after our present stocks containing profit-sharing coupons are exhausted, our retail and wholesale business will not carry any merchandise that would involve us in the distribution of profit-sharing coupons.' The national associations of small independent retailers in the grocery, drug, and tobacco lines are already actively agitating against trading stamps, and supporting antagonistic State legislation. Within the past three months they have been successful in the States of Indiana, Michigan, Oregon, Utah, and Washington, and Bills are pending, and likely to pass shortly, in California, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and other States."

Notes and Announcements

SIR ARTHUR QUILLER-COUCH, who is at present doing good work as a recruiting officer in the Duchy, has boldly made the War the background of his newest romance, "Nicky-Nan, Reservist." With his characteristic mixture of high seriousness and quaint humour, "Q" describes how the outbreak of war surprised a Cornish village and tested the quality of its inhabitants. "Q's" readers will hardly need to be told that the story does not belong to the same category as the so-called war novels of the moment. It is a humorous study of character, with the War deftly touched in as a revealing circumstance. "Nicky-Nan" was published on the 29th by Messrs. Blackwood, in whose magazine it ran as a very popular serial.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce the immediate publication of "I Accuse!" an English translation of "J'Accuse!" the book that everyone is enquiring for. "The man who wrote this book is a German."

Mr. H. Spencer Jones, of the Royal Observatory, contributes an extremely interesting and authoritative article on "The Structure of the Universe" to the July number of Science Progress, published by Mr. John Murray.

Major George Haven Putnam, the publisher, has the courage of his opinions over the War, and again and again he has written letters to the leading American papers, condemning the action of the Pan-Germans in making war on non-combatants and their atrocities generally. In a letter published in the Pall Mall Gazette of June 18th, 1915, he, with his three years' experience with Generals Sheridan, Sherman, &c., in the American Civil War, has no difficulty in entirely refuting the suggestion that the conduct of the American combatants was as bad as that of the Pan-Germans. We are also glad to see in the Westminster Gazette splendid testimony to the righteousness of the cause of the nations which are fighting

Germany and Austria; it is a report of the address of Mr. Jn. M. Zane, one of the most prominent lawyers in Chicago, and lecturer on law in the Chicago University—in which it may be said that he took as his text, "The superb endeavour of the Allies for the World's Liberty." All the neutral nations feel if Germany has poured such horrors on to little Belgium, with whom she had no quarrel and no reason for jealous rivalry, what would she do to us? Mr. Zane's address is one we wish every body could read—especially the Germans.

The Germans give out that they are short of copper, and publishers and booksellers are asked by the military authorities to hunt up all the old copper electros and half-tone blocks which they can find.

In the Cornhill for July there is the first part of an article by Dr. W. H. Fitchett on Wellington, entitled "A Great Soldier on His Battles"—very timely and interesting. But the most interesting, because most novel, account of those fine old times is Sir Henry Lucy's account of "Peace-time after War." On first reading the title we thought surely Sir Henry is not among those wearying prophets of what is to happen after this war! No; he takes the period of that brief era of peace proclaimed on April 25th, 1802, and tells us how the English world behaved itself—politically, commercially, and socially. It is very good reading.

Messrs. John Long will shortly publish a new novel entitled "The Despot," by Ellen Ada Smith.

In addition to the pensions just conferred on persons of note by the Government, it has awarded a grant of £100 to Mary C. Rowsell in consideration of her services to literature, "Educational, Historical, and Belles Lettres generally."

"Selina," by the author of "Emmy Lou," is a new novel announced for publication by Messrs. L. Appleton & Co.

Lord Curzon's new book, "Subjects of the Day" is to be published on July 5th by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd. It contains an Introduction by the Earl of Cromer, and is edited by Mr. Desmond Chapman-Huston.

Booksellers who have customers likely to be interested in antique furniture should, by all means, make a note of "Antique Furniture," by Fred. W. Burgess, just published by Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd. It is admirably illustrated, and covers the history of furniture in this country as no other single work does. This handy and handsome volume is, as we learn from the preface, the first of the "Home Connoisseur" Series, which is intended to cover the whole field of household curios.

"In Germany To-day" is the title of a series of careful studies from life by a neutral correspondent, which Messrs. Methuen are publishing this week.

We would recommend booksellers who have customers for angling books to tell them of "Clear Waters: Trout Days and Trout Ways in Wales," the West Country and the Scottish Borderland," by A. G. Bradley, published by Messrs. Constable. It is a well illustrated chatty account of reminiscences of good days with rod and line in some of the best scenery in the country. We once asked a very well-known angling writer, who had written only practical works on the art, why he did not write reminiscences of his fishing days of over half a century? He said, "Angling reminiscences are piffle." It was too sweeping a statement, but it certainly applies to a good deal of what is called angling literature, but it does not apply to "Clear Waters," by Mr. A. G. Bradley. We have fished most of the waters he refers to, and do not agree with all his views; but we believe very few anglers will not read him with real interest.

"The Battle Glory of Canada: being the Story of the Canadians at the Front, including the Battle of Ypres," is the title of a popular volume to be issued by the House of Cassell immediately. Mr. A. B. Tucker, the author, will tell the fine story of the Canadians, from the moment when the fleet of transports arrived off an English port, "somewhere in the Channel." The record then follows the famous Princess Patricia's and the first contingent through camp and march in England, and bivouac and battle in France and Flanders. It is meant to be a witness to the splendid loyalty of the sons of the Maple Leaf.

"Fate the Marplot" by F. Thicknesse-Woodington, a new novel to be published by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., on July 12th, is described as a rattling good story, with a thoroughly sound plot full of mystery and excitement. The heroine is an English girl, the villain an Austrian, and the action takes place on the Continent.

Messrs. Allen & Unwin will also publish on July 12th a new edition of three books by Mr. J. C. Squire. One is a volume of poems, "The Three Hills," and the other two are collections of parodies, "Steps to Parnassus," and "Imaginary Speeches." The latter book had a great success when it was first published in 1912. Its principal feature is a series of burlesque speeches hitting off the methods of various eminent politicians, including Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Balfour, and Sir F. E. Smith; and now that they are all a happy family on the Treasury Bench it is amusing to look back upon the kind of thing they were saying about each other in the years before the flood.

THE old-established stationery, fancy and toy business at 4, Manor Parade, High Street, Sutton, Surrey, has been purchased from Mr. E. B. Thompson by Mr. E. S. Savage, late of Oxford. The sale and transfer were effected by Messrs. F. T. Evans & Co., the trade valuers, of Cathedral House, Paternoster Row.

The Book Trade and the War

RAPP.—June 19th; killed in action in France, aged 20, Second-Lieut. Reginald Rapp, of the West Riding Regiment. He was a son of Mr. T. W. Rapp, of "The Library," Dundas Street, Saltburn-on-Sea, a very old subscriber to The Bookseller. In 1913, he obtained a scholarship at Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge; and when the War broke out he was reading for Holy Orders, with the object of working in the foreign mission field.—The Bookseller.

Mr. H. A. Bailey, of Bailey's Bookshop, Watford, after several attempts for various regiments, has now been accepted for the R.A.M.C.

Mr. R. H. Bryan, of the Kingston V.A.D., fifth son of Mr. W. C. Bryan, the bookseller, of Eden Street, left Kingston for France on Thursday, for service in connection with the British Red Cross Society. His brother Leonard has been serving with the Red Cross in France for some months, and another brother, Herbert, who went out with the R.A.M.C., was wounded while on active service on the battlefield, and is now in hospital at Durham.

The City of London Volunteer Corps

A NOVELTY in the shape of a night route march was carried out on Saturday night and Sunday morning last, when about 400 men and 13 officers paraded at Streatham Station, and marched to the C.L.V.C. Camp, at Woldingham.

An advance party of 40 had trained down to Woldingham, to prepare the camp, and then to defend it at dawn against the main body marching on it.

The "Marchers" left Streatham Station at 10.45 in full marching order (overcoat rolled, and carrying haversack and water bottle), and proceeded via Thornton Heath, Croydon and Purley, to Woldingham. The marching was excellent, and no casualties were reported, when, after a circuitous route, the attack on the camp was made about 3.30 a.m. The attack was eminently successful, although, in fairness to the defenders, it must be mentioned that they were up against overwhelming odds.

The camp was eventually reached at 4.15 a.m., and the members of the Corps were remarkably fit, considering that a pretty gruelling march of fifteen miles had been carried out. The excellent cook-house had some very good coffee ready, which was quickly served, and "lights out" sounded at 5 o'clock. Reveille was at 8; then breakfast, church parade, a short march out and field exercises until dinner-time. After dinner, there was a tent and kit inspection by the Sub-Commandant; and shortly afterwards tents were struck, the camp dismantled, and the majority left for London by the 5.45 train. For particulars, "How to join the Corps," apply to Mr. W. B. Hill (J. Burn & Co., Ltd.), 37, Kirby Street, E.C.; or at Headquarters, 3, Fleet Street, E.C.

To Antiquarian Booksellers

A PERSON giving the name of Robert Dennis, writing from 1, Stile Hall Parade, Chiswick, recently reported a book at 2s. 9d., and when it was ordered he replied that he had "sent books away and could not get the money, but that if the money were deposited with the Editor of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR the book would be sent." Our subscriber says, "As this seemed to me a reasonable request I sent him the 2s. 9d., with no result." This was on June 19th, and to the present time the book has not arrived. Upon making enquiries the following is the information obtained: No. 1, Stile Hall Parade is a stationer's and confectioner's shop, kept by a lady, who says she has been taking in letters for a man giving the name of Dennis, but that he has not called for the past ten days. Also, the local tax collector states that a person named Dennis has been on his black list since 1910, and that he could never be found, even by the Inland Revenue authorities. Our subscribers can draw their own conclusions, but if they will only refrain from sending money in advance to anybody no such cases will recur. In plain English, it is your own fault if you part with money until value has been received, and those who do so deserve what they don't get. As we have said before, we have authorised no one to have money sent to us on deposit, and Mr. "Robert Dennis" knows that very well.

Manchester and District Booksellers' and Stationers' Association

IN lieu of the usual Annual Picnic the Committee of the above Association arranged a short ramble, last Saturday, June 26th, through some of the most beautiful country within 30 miles of Manchester. By tram from Piccadilly to Hazelgrove, thence for a few yards along the road, and at once into leafy glens and vales. Owing to the torrential rains during the night and until ten o'clock in the morning the party was not a large one, but the Hon. Secretary, Mr. A. T. Kerslake (W. H. Smith & Son), had made an itinerary which developed into a complete success; the weather being perfect. Little streams were merry rivulets, but stones for fording were handy. The paths were clean and almost dry all the way. Dust was non-existent. Tea at a farm well out of the track of tourists was excellent. Afterwards the way led by easy stages through a succession of most charmingly varied landscapes, with views of Lyme Park and the Derbyshire hills. There was as much time for resting, by the banks of the many streams, as for walking, and the short distance travelled provided sufficient beauty to warrant a saunter of treble the mileage. Everybody was delighted with the little excursion, the only regret being that so many members who intended joining had been baulked by the rain. In addition to a goodly proportion of ladies and a few friends the party included the following officials: Messrs. F. W.

Baldwin (Sherratt & Hughes), J. Russell (A. & S. Walker, Ltd.), Mr. F. J. Barlow (S.P.C.K.) Hon. Treas.; Mr. Kerslake (Hon. Sec.); Mr. H. J. Billinge (Vice-Pres.) Cooper Dennison & Walkden Ltd.; Mr. F. Johnson (President), Williams & Norgate. The Association is in a flourishing condition and during the ensuing autumn and winter the Committee hope to extend its sphere of usefulness.

"Cambridge County Handbooks"

AT 1s. 6d. net the Cambridge County Handbooks printed and published by the Cambridge University Press, well edited and well illustrated, are a very attractive series—over thirty counties are now included. "Kissing goes by favour" and so does publishing county handbooks—how otherwise are we to account for the fact that in the "Cambridge County Handbooks" Cambridgeshire has more pages by over 100 than the other counties, and appears to be the only "handbook" with an Index. May we, on behalf of the thousands yet unborn, beg Mr. C. F. Clay to put just an Index of place names at the end of each new handbook? Why should the county of Cambridge be blessed with an Index of over 700 references and the other counties have none? If it is a question of expense then we are sure nine out of ten readers would prefer to do away with the diagram pages at the end in favour of an Index to all the places mentioned. It is true that some of the chief places are mentioned in alphabetical order in the text, but every place should be Indexed—at least, that is our view, and we only mention it because the books are so well done and attractive that it seems to be the only thorn on the rose.

The Book Monthly to be a Quarterly During the War

THE current number of the Book Monthly is issued for July, August and September, and from now until the end of the war the magazine will appear quarterly, at the same price of sixpence. Messrs. Cassell & Co. cease to be its publishers and it again becomes the direct responsibility of Mr. James Milne, its editor and founder. The next issue will be on October 1st. We hope with Mr. Milne that a victorious peace for the Allies will permit the re-issue of his valuable periodical as a monthly.

The Spirit of the Serb

MESSRS. NISBET have just published at 3d. net "The Spirit of the Serb," a lecture delivered by Mr. R. W. Seton-Watson, at King's College, London, on March 10th, 1915. It is an excellent study of Serbian national character and appeals for sympathy with Serbia and her Serbo-Croat and Slavonic kinsmen, and for welcome to the new State which is celebrating its baptism of fire as a worthy member of the new and free Europe that is yet to be. Mr. Watson is Hon. Secretary of the Serbian Relief Fund, of which Mr. Bertram Christian, of Messrs. Nisbet's, is Chairman.

"It is the Nation that is Roused Now"

MUCH the most interesting of monthly periodicals sent out by the publishing houses in order to more or less modestly cry their wares is The Periodical, which was first imagined and then materialised by Mr. Henry Frowde, and is now continued by Mr. Humphrey Milford. It is printed at Oxford by Frederick Hall, printer to the University, and reflects admirably each month all the many and varied literary activities of the Oxford University Press. In addition to ordinary bibliographical details, interesting extracts are given, e.g., from "Herd Instinct and the War," by Gilbert Murray, this:—

The Herd Instinct

"Man is by nature a gregarious animal and is swayed by Herd Instincts, as a gregarious animal must be; but of course they are greatly modified. . . . A dog in domesticated conditions is especially interesting. He has been taken away from his pack, but he retains his fundamental habits. He barks to call his mates on every emergency, even if barking frightens his prey away. He sniffs at everything when he is out walking, because he has wanted so long to smell his way home to the lost pack. His real pack is now artificial, grouped round his master. It will take in his master's friends and house-companions, including quite possibly various animals such as cats and rabbits. Meantime he rejects the strange man and cheerfully kills the strange cat or rabbit. His delightful friendliness and sympathy are of course due to his herd habits. A cat has no herd. She has always "walked alone." Now Man satisfies his Herd Instinct by many groups, mainly artificial. Like the dog, he may take in other animals. In ordinary life the group of which he is most conscious is his social class, especially if it is threatened in any way. Clergymen, land-owners, teachers, coal-miners tend, as the phrase is, to hang together. . . . But of all groups, far the strongest when it is once roused is the Nation, and it is the Nation that is roused now." . . .

"Crowding Memories of a Literary Life"

IN the Chicago Dial one of the leading contributors, Mr. Percy F. Bicknell, concludes a long and favourable review of Mr. Douglas Sladen's "Twenty Years of My Life," as follows:—

"The illustrations to the book, by the Japanese artist, Mr. Yoshio Markino, deserve more than perfunctory mention. Both his exquisite coloured drawings and his oddly effective portrait sketches are masterpieces in their peculiar kind, and would suffice by themselves to give character to the volume. Character, however, seems not to be lacking to its author, whose rambling but never tedious chapters will furnish more entertainment to the great public of 'general' readers than almost any other book of the season."

Torpedoing the Submarine Bogey

"THE WORLD'S WORK" has been exceedingly interesting all through the War. The July number just published by Mr. Wm. Heinemann, who takes a special personal interest in the navigation of this monthly on the stormy sea of journalism, is a good number all round. It is however particularly interesting by reason of a finely illustrated article entitled "The Problem of the Submarine," by Frederick A. Talbot, author of "Submarines in War." We hope it may be very widely read because it torpedoed the idea held in some pessimistic quarters that the submarine is going to blow the British Navy out of the water. Mr. Talbot confirms, what we have heard from other reliable quarters, viz., that we have sunk for good far more German pirates than people think. It is not possible, or rather it is not permitted to divulge "the dozen or more practical ways" which our naval officers have contrived for dealing with submarines. "It is the perfection of devices to this end which induced Mr. Churchill to remark, during his recent speech at Dundee, that "the submarine menace has been fixed within definite limits." We are glad to see Mr. Talbot favours the arming of our merchant ships, and says "There is one significant factor which is in powerful support of the arming faction. One British steamship line has its vessels provided with 4.7 inch guns, and up to the present this organisation has not lost a single vessel, despite the fact that its vessels pass freely through the submarine-infested zone and are not of high speed."

The naval historian of the future will certainly blame our Admiralty for not encouraging the armament of merchant and fishing vessels directly it was proved that the Germans intended to sink unarmed vessels and drown or kill their crews.

The Campaign in Defence of Net Prices in America

We are glad to see that our contemporary, the New York Publishers' Weekly makes a vigorous appeal to the booksellers of America to support the fight for maintenance of the net price. The P.W. says:—

"The prosperity, if not the very existence, of the American book trade, in the opinion of those who, by their close and long-continued familiarity with conditions therein, are best qualified to judge, depends upon the maintenance of fixed retail prices. Predatory price-cutting nearly wrecked the trade a dozen or more years ago, bringing scores of booksellers close to bankruptcy; it will, undoubtedly, if permitted, do the same thing again.

For that reason no duty of the trade is more urgent, no action its members can take more important, than to support every honest and efficient endeavour to secure by open and legal methods legislative endorsement of the principles of price maintenance. They have already received business and economic endorsement; but practical and theoretical knowledge are alike valueless commercially until they are translated into terms of law.

"Well planned efforts are being made by the business world to secure such legislation from Congress. Bills were introduced at the last session, and will be reintroduced in the new. A federal commission, especially empowered to investigate, and remedy or suggest remedies, for such business diseases as price-cutting has the whole subject under advisement. It is a time, the psychological time, for the book trade to put forward, not only a united, but an enthusiastic and energetic offensive.

Has it done so? In April last, the Board of Trade of the American Booksellers' Association sent Resolutions, embodying the sentiment of the trade on the subject of price maintenance to representative booksellers in 734 cities of the country, asking their co-operation in securing the endorsement of all the booksellers of their respective cities at once to those Resolutions. In the two months since 63 cities out of 734 have been heard from. Such a reply does not represent the sentiment of the trade. The Publishers' Weekly does not believe—the Board of Trade of the American Booksellers' Association does not believe—that anything other than sheer lack of complete realization of the trade's instant and personal responsibility in this matter is delaying these returns. It trusts that the Resolutions will be taken up this week by each recipient, signed and returned. We know how the trade feels on the subject of net prices; but we must prove to the outside world how it feels."

American Booksellers and Field Games

THE following is the programme (from The Publishers' Weekly) of the Field Day of New York booksellers, got up—or gotten up, as our American friends prefer to have it—by the Field Games Committee, and held on June 26th, 1915, at Grant City, Staten Island:—

"Baseball Game—starting at 2 p.m. The Baker & Taylor Co. vs. The American News Co. Guided under the expert management of Henry Giersberg, H. P. Burt and W. T. Haskell.

"Field Sports—Starting at 3.15 p.m. 100 yard dash, standing broad jump, running broad jump, fat man's race, putting the shot.

"For our lady friends we have arranged the following contests: 50 yard dash, standing broad jump, potato race, clothes-pin race.

"Our old friends, Messrs. A. Wessels, B. W. Huebsch, Charles Nelson and E. Byrne Hackett have entire charge of the arrangements for the field sports. They will act as judges, starters, &c. All who wish to enter the games can secure entry blanks by addressing Mr. A. Wessels, 354, Fourth Avenue, New York. No entry will be booked after June 21st.

"Dancing, afternoon and evening, under the competent direction of the past master in the Art, R. E. Sherwood, assisted by Frank Bruce and S. A. Jenkins.

"Bowling Contest from 4 to 5 p.m. and 8 to 9 p.m., conducted by our great bowling experts, August Gehrs, J. Ray Peck, Harry Bauer and J. K. Samson.

"Prizes will be awarded the winners of the field sports and high bowling score. There will also be a lady's and gentleman's prize drawn for at the dinner.

"Dinner de Luxe at 5.30 p.m. After an afternoon spent in the open, the dinner, which will be served at 5.30 p.m., which will undoubtedly prove a most welcome part of the program, as the Committee has every reason to believe that the dinner this year will be a big improvement over that of last.

"This is to be a real good time for those in the book trade and their friends. The members of the committees are working hard to make this a "Day of Days," and promise that all who attend will surely enjoy themselves."

The Chicago booksellers hold their Field Day on July 9th.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE

149, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

A Well Known English-born American Book Trade Representative

The Publishers' Weekly, of New York, has a sympathetic notice in connection with the death of Mr. Samuel Carson, one of the best known book trade salesmen of his time in America, who died at the age of 69, after a brief illness, at his home at Yonkers. He was born in London in 1846 and went to America at a very early age. He went through the Civil War, having enlisted when only 16 in the "Washington Greys." In his 55 years in the book trade he was first with "that famous old saint of the profession" A. D. F. Randolph; then with Sheldon & Co., Thomas Nelson & Sons, W. W. Harding; then for 14 years he was in business as a book jobber in San Francisco as Samuel Carson & Co. Afterwards he was with Lee & Shepard, then with Lovell, Coryell & Co., and finally in 1900 became head of the trade department of G. P. Putnam's Sons, from which position he retired three years ago.

During his unusually long connection with the book trade, covering a period of 55 years, he visited nearly every nook and corner of the country. He was noted among the distinguished looking men of the trade, always courtly in manner and enthusiastic in work. He is survived by five children, having made his home with his eldest son, Hogarth Carson, for some years past in Yonkers, N.Y.

"An Austrian Army Awfully Arrayed"

WE have to thank Mr. G. Morton, of Birkenhead, Mr. E. C. Hitchings, and others for further particulars. Mr. Hitchings gives the author as Mrs. Barbauld. None of the copies we have seen are identical. Mr. Morton, in sending a copy, says:—

"Will you please return it when quite finished with it, as it comes from an old cutting book of my father's and thus has a sentimental interest to me?"

"I find opposite to it in the index rerum four other lines that some of your readers may possibly care to have brought to mind:—

" 'Tis books will cause the flag of peace
Through Earth to be unfurled,
Produce 'The Parliament of Man,'
And federate the world.' "

Mr. W. H. Peet kindly sends a cutting from T. P.'s Weekly for September 12th, 1914, in which the Editor gives this statement:—"The Siege of Belgrade." This alliterative poem originally appeared in The Tripher of May 7th, 1817, and was republished in The Literary Gazette of December 23rd, 1820. Its authorship has been claimed for Alaric A. Watts by his son." We have sent our correspondent, Mr. F. W. D'Evelyn, all these particulars and are much obliged to our readers who have replied.

"The German-American Plot"

A New Book by Mr. Frederic Wm. Wile
WE never, if we can help it, miss the article, "Germany Day by Day," written by Mr. Frederic Wm. Wile for the Daily Mail; it is much the most interesting account of how things are going inside the terrific pan-Germanic iron fist which the Allies are up against all round pan-Germania. We are glad to hear from Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd., that they have in the press and will publish shortly "The German-American Plot," by Mr. Frederic William Wile, author of "Men Around the Kaiser." Mr. Wile has visited the United States twice since the War began, and on both occasions enjoyed quite special opportunities for studying the ins and outs of the great German propaganda campaign to capture the sympathy and support of the American people. His book will relate the impressions gathered by him on an investigation made less than three months ago. It tells of the origin and organisation of what he calls "The German System" in the United States, of its amazing "mobilisation" for the purposes of the War, of the ways and means adopted by Messrs. Bernstorff, Dernburg & Co., to blackmail the American people into sympathising with Kultur's cause, of the growing disgust which their effrontery caused throughout the country, and of the final and complete collapse of their far-flung and impudent plans. It becomes quite obvious, from reading Mr. Wile's narrative, that "Neutral America" has not succumbed to German pressure through any lack of effort on our enemy's part. The book concludes with some telling recommendations to the British Government and people of the attitude they ought to take if they sincerely desire to preserve the strong fabric of friendship which has been woven for their cause in the United States. "The German-American Plot" will be published at 1s., and should be read by all students of the international aspects of the War.

Whose new book, "The German-American Plot: the Record of a Great Failure," is to be published at 1s. net by C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd. It is a book which will have a great sale. Mr. Wile's articles, "Germany Day by Day," in the Daily Mail, have been one of the most interesting contributions to the literature of the War.

Dr. Johnson and the Booksellers

(From The Gentleman's Magazine,

MR. URBAN. June 20.

ACCORDING to the best accounts we have received of Dr. Johnson's life, it appears that pecuniary distresses were none the least of those calamities which disturbed his mind, and destroyed the equability of his temper. A detail of such instances would, indeed, be interesting only to our humanity; but the following letter, written by the Dr. when under arrest for a very trifling sum, appears to me worthy of being recorded in your Miscellany. Had the Dr. been alive, he would not have been ashamed to own it, nor offended at its being made public.

AMERUS.

SIR, Gough-square, March 16, 1756.
I AM obliged to intreat your assistance; I am now under an arrest for five pounds eighteen shillings. Mr. Strahan, from whom I should have received the necessary help in this case, is not at home, and I am afraid of not finding Mr. Millar. If you will be so good as to fend me this sum, I will very gratefully repay you, and add it to all former obligations. I am, Sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

SAM JOHNSON.

Sent six guineas. Witness William Richardson.

Note.—I have shewn the original of the above letter to your printer, that there may be no doubt of its authenticity. The witness was Mr. Richardson's nephew, and successor in his business.

A Good War Story

ALTHOUGH it is almost too good to be true, there is a capital story in The Atlantic Monthly for May, just published by Messrs. Constable & Co. It is an account of the days in Constantinople, before the world knew for certain how the Turkish cat would jump, entitled "My Friend the Turk," and is by Mr. H. G. Dwight, of the American Embassy. Constantinople was swarming with Germans, the Goeben and Breslau were nominally flying the Turkish flag, and it was a question how the British Naval Mission could clear out of the country before the Turks interned it. Mr. Dwight says the British naval officers "contrived to get themselves recalled in a manner which I hope is true. It ought to be, because a parson told me he suggested it. The naval mission expected to go, sooner or later, but wanted to be recalled before it was dismissed, and had no sure means of stating its case in a hurry to the Admiralty, mails and cables being very closely watched in those uncertain days. The parson accordingly proposed this cryptic telegram: 'Two Timothy four six seven wire twenty-one.' Which a properly brought-up Admiralty was able to read: 'For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.' And to answer in the sense of the last verse: 'Do thy diligence to come before winter. and Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.'"

We must confess, as we said before, it sounds a little too good to be true—for even a parson may be gifted with imagination.

Eubulus must be Fisher, Pudens, of course, is Churchill, Linus must be the Censor, and Claudia is to hoodwink the Turk.

"L'Angleterre et la Guerre"

UNDER this title, Mr. Wickham Steed, who for nearly twenty years has been the chief Foreign Correspondent of the Times—in fact, "The Thunderer's" Minister for Foreign Affairs—has published, through the Librairie Armand Colin, Paris, an interesting 50 centime brochure. His experiences as Times representative at Berlin, Rome and Vienna gave him exceptional facilities for getting information on international politics. He has no difficulty in showing that our statesmen ought not to have been taken in by German professions of friendship all the years she was secretly preparing for war. He says that calm, courteous and sincere Prince Lichnowsky was merely a blind to cover the subterranean work of M. de Kühlmann—the real German representative. In September, 1913, the author was in Constantinople, and was soon convinced that a general war was merely a matter of months—he says the Young Turks, and especially the Israelitish element among them, who direct the policy of the "Committee of Union and Progress," had been won over by the German powers and delivered Turkey into their hands.

"The Book of France"

DEAR SIR,—On behalf of the Honorary Committee we send a preliminary announcement of "The Book of France," and are asked to say that the Committee will be very grateful if you can give them your valuable assistance by arranging for its insertion in the advertisement columns of your journal.—Yours faithfully, MACMILLAN & Co., LTD.

[We are sure that British booksellers will do all they can to help this excellent movement. "The Book of France," in aid of the French Parliamentary Committee's Fund for the relief of the invaded departments of France, will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. on the French National Fête Day, July 14th, at the moderate price of five shillings. This unique volume will contain contributions by French authors and artists of the first eminence.

Among the illustrators figure Jacques Blanche, Charles Cottet, Devambez, Abel Faivre, and Lucien Simon; while the list of writers includes Maurice Barrès, Jacques Blanche, René Boylesve, Eugène Brieux, La Duchesse de Clermont-Tonnerre, François de Curel, Mary Duclaux, Anatole France, André Gide, Remy de Gourmont, Rudyard Kipling, Marie Lenèru, Pierre Loti, Pierre Mille, La Comtesse de Noailles, La Duchesse de Rohan, J. H. Rosny and Marcelle Tinayre.

English versions of the contributions by a group of eminent English writers will form a feature of the volume. The translations will be made by Miss Ethel Clifford, Sir Sidney Colvin, Lady Randolph Churchill, Mme. Mary Duclaux, Lady Frazer, Lady Glenconner, Edmund Gosse, Dr. Hartog, Thomas Hardy, Henry James, Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Pett Ridge, Madeleine Smith-Champion, Millicent Duchess of Sutherland, Mr. H. G. Wells, and Mrs. Margaret Woods.

Primarily intended to raise money for a cause that may with confidence be commended to the British public, it is also hoped that the book will serve to show what perhaps is not enough realised in this country, namely, the sorrows of France in the War, and the services she is rendering to the cause of civilisation.—ED., P.C.]

The Belgian Book Trade Relief Fund

SIR,—It has come to my knowledge that enquiries have been made in some quarters respecting the use of the Belgian Book Trade Relief Fund. The avowed object of the Fund was to "assist the work of re-organisation" of the Belgian Book trade, and it was decided by the Committee after very careful consideration that the opportunity had not yet arisen for this purpose. The Fund now amounts to £1,300, and further subscriptions are cordially invited.—I am, yours truly,

JAMES H. BLACKWOOD

A Real Live Bookworm

SIR,—More years ago than I care to remember, and (unfortunately) some years after the late Mr. Blades published his work "The Enemies of Books,"* I stumbled across a specimen of the genus "book-worm" in an old law folio of the seventeenth century which I purchased at Messrs. Hodgson's. The late Sir Richard Garnett was then the Keeper of Printed Books at the British Museum, and I presented the "worm" to him. Of its ultimate fate I possess no further knowledge.

Last Saturday I happened to purchase from Messrs. Bailey Bros., of Newington Butts, a copy of Flaxman's "Lectures on Sculpture, 1829," bound in hf. russia, and on examining the volume at home I found, to my surprise, a fine specimen of the "worm" on the front end-paper, which I still have in my possession. (The "worm," of course, is implied.) N.B.—I have the book also.

Now, I believe I am the only bookseller who has even discovered a specimen of this insect, and I should like, if possible, to obtain some particulars about it, i.e., its genus, method of propagation, &c., and to that end shall be extremely obliged if you can find room for this scribble in your valuable journal, of which, as a very old bookseller, I have, of course, been a reader through all its changes and variations.

Thanking you in anticipation.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

FRED. MARCHMONT.

An Anecdote touching Jacob Tonson's Skull

SIR,—I send you a little anecdote about Jacob Tonson's skull.—Respectfully, R. WILKES, Bookseller.

22, Newman Street,
Oxford Street,
September 13th.

"When Collinwood the bookseller of 138 Strand (Jacob Tonson's old house) was churchwarden of St. Mary's, where Tonson was buried, he had the vault opened and took out the skull and exhibited it in his shop—this was about 1824 or 5—but afterwards returned it to the vault. The alterations recently made in the exterior of the church render the vaults easy of access, so if any people should like to see that curious literary relic the sexton could readily oblige them. Garrett Murphy, Mr. Collinwood's shopman, is, or was, in St. Martin's Workhouse and would, if applied to, give the particulars of that extraordinary exhumation."

[We do not know what year it was Mr. Wilkes sent this anecdote to the P.C.,

The Army and Denny's Annual List of Cheap Books

R. B. Marston, Esq.,
The Editor, PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, Adelphi, W.C.

DEAR SIR,—In our new list of cheap books just issued, a copy of which we enclose, the literature of our Allies is strongly represented.

For sixpence, or a shilling, there is a selection to be made from the best works of the following authors: Cellini, Voltaire, Mazzini, Balzac, Dumas, Erckmann-Chatrian, Hugo, Daudet, Tolstoy, Dostoieffsky, Turgenev, Jules Verne, Dante, Maxim Gorky, Anatole France, &c.

A pleasing feature in regard to this class of publication has been the exceedingly large number supplied for the use of our Army and Navy.

The books are portable, easily packed with other things, and light to hold.

There are nearly 7,000 titles from which to select.—Yours faithfully,
June 29th. A. & F. DENNY.

[It is a most valuable list of a great deal of the world's best literature at the world's very lowest prices; it includes the famous "World's Classics," "Everyman's Library," "Nelson's Libraries," "Collins' Series," "Murray's Shilling Library," and others.—ED.]

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Burns & Oates, Ltd.—
"Memorials of Robert Hugh Benson," by Blanche Warre Cornish, Shane Leslie, and Other of His Friends. A prettily-got-up and all-too-short book which will be eagerly read by Monsignor Benson's many admirers. A brief recital of the chief events of his life is followed by a number of personal impressions, anecdotes and quotations from the well-known books. Interleaved are many illustrations, chiefly photographs.

From the Same.—"Poems," by Gilbert Keith Chesterton. More newspapers and periodicals than it is practicable to enumerate have been scoured for the short poems of G. K. C. Here they all are, neatly arranged in one modest volume. They are gay or forceful, religious or political, but always the rhythm swings well, similes are apt, and references pointed. If they escape greatness they are nevertheless heartening and big in treatment, and although hardly any one poem gives a sense of perfection there are many joyous or fervent lines that will live in the reader's mind for a long time. A most attractive photograph of the famous journalist is reproduced as frontispiece.

From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd.—
"In a Desert Land," by Valentina Hawtreay. An unusual and striking book. Miss Hawtreay has let her thoughts dwell on the whole history of an English family and especially upon a thread of unexpressed genius which, appearing now in this century and now in that, played havoc with such lives as it touched. A beginning is made with the marriage of Isabel de Bray to Thomas Hyde in 1308, whose son James took to wife one Eleanor, the first possessor of the disturbing streak. Eleanor's son Tom is turned from friar to fool by the strange heritage, which makes its next venture in Tudor days in the person of Jane Hyde, whose thwarted desires lead to suicide. So the history is carried on, the same life of a steady-going, typically English family disturbed every now and again by an element of upheaval, a throw-back to long-dead Eleanor Hyde. The family is a sturdy entity, a tree with roots in the fourteenth century and branches in the twentieth. Its chronicler sees it in its continuity and her ability conveys her vivid impressions to her readers. "In a Desert Land" is a book to read with pleasure and remember for a long time.

From Messrs. Duckworth & Co.—"Germany and Eastern Europe," by Lewis B. Namier, B.A. With an Introduction by H. A. L. Fisher. Mr. Namier's reading of the causes of the present War is different from that accepted by most people. To him Germany is not the prime mover. He looks to the Balkan unrest and especially to Austrian possessions in the Balkans as being wholly responsible for the world-wide conflagration. In a book hardly longer than a pamphlet he expounds his views which, being founded on a first-hand and intimate knowledge of the Slav peoples, should be accorded careful consideration.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—
"Sea-Salt and Cordite," by Patrick Vaux. Under this title are collected a great number of very short stories all taking some aspect of Naval life for their subject. They are outspoken, breezy and at times brutal; most of them illustrative of that article of the Navy's creed which states that the cause and the ship are more than life, or reputation, or friendships, or enmities.

From Messrs. Hutchinson & Co.—"His German Wife," by Douglas Sladen. Mr. Douglas Sladen shows a good deal of trust in his public in offering at the present moment a novel like "His German Wife." For not only is the best type of English gentlepeople mirrored in his pages but also, and in an equally engaging manner, the best type of German "Junker." Erna, a German baroness of ancient lineage but empty purse, comes to England in the spring of 1914 to act as companion to Mrs. Isherwood, a well-bred woman of the English upper middle class. She falls in love with and marries her employer's son, a captain of artillery. In the momentous first week of August the couple are honeymooning in a delightful Germany, enjoying the society of military officers who, when the blow falls, summon their "noblesse oblige" to aid the enemy to return to his own country. Back in England, Erna accompanies her husband to the garrison town where he is stationed. Here, while the Army is decent to her, the populace hounds her as a German spy. In rage she flies back to Germany, there to undergo the counterpart of her English experience. Her high-born German friends are as charming as ever but the lower orders see in her the wife of an English officer and lose no opportunity of forcing upon her notice their "Hymns of Hate." Finally she returns once more to England and takes refuge with her English father-in-law, a man of gentle and tolerant outlook. The book is written with all Mr. Douglas Sladen's well-known lightness of touch and is a complete entertainment, quite apart from its very topical theme.

From Messrs. P. S. King & Son, Ltd.—"The Measurement of Social Phenomena," by A. L. Bowley. Mr. Bowley has taken stock of all the recent sociological writings and investigations, has classified the information arrived at, and now pigeon-holes his results in nine chapters and an appendix. Social workers with orderly minds will find his book of value, and all readers with a taste for statistics should revel in its pages.

From Mr. John Lane—"Merry Andrew," by Keble Howard. Andrew Dick, the principal character in this entertaining biography of the struggles and trials of an unsuccessful Oxford under-graduate, must have been dubbed "Merry" by the author in an ironical sense. He has wasted his years at Oxford, under the impression that he is the son of a rich man. Called to his father's death-bed, he lies to him as to his having obtained his degree, and then discovers that his father's reputed wealth is a myth. He has to struggle for a living, and it is the account of this struggle in London, in the stuffy offices of fraudulent journalists, and in the position of assistant master of a "Do-the-Boys Hall" in the provinces, with all its mean and sordid surroundings and humbug, that give the story its interest. It may be said to be a good modern example of the Dickens school. Its moral is that Oxford education is a sort of whitened sepulchre, showing a fair, imposing side to the world, but inside, only crammers' dead bones. Unhappy Andrew is soon made to experience the disadvantages of having been at Oxford. Except for a few momentary lapses into kissing common-place maidens, the love story is chiefly the exchange of a few letters with a young lady, who alternately spurs Andrew on and heads him off from the goal of matrimony. Some of the dialogues are delightful.

From the Same—"Jaffery," by William J. Locke. Very charmingly dedicated to his wife, Mr. Locke's new story gives the impression of being to some extent autobiographical and a picture of his own home life; it is all very pleasant, and in parts not a little tragic. The characters stand out in a very wonderful fashion—especially Jaffery, the big man, big-voiced and big-hearted, as unconventional as a baby. He makes the most astounding sacrifices on the altar of his love for a woman, and when she at last tells him she will be his wife and try to love him, he finds his tremendous love has vanished; and he turns from her and takes to his enormous breast the other woman—a wild, young Balkan widow, daughter of a Chicago pork butcher—who is certainly more suited to his temperament. We leave them—or the author does—out in the Balkans, doing their bit for their countries, perfectly happy, for "a more radiantly mated pair the earth cannot produce." A book in a hundred.

From Messrs. Alexander Moring, Ltd.—"Song in the Night: a Little Anthology of Love and Death," chosen and arranged by Mary Warrack; with three coloured illustrations from paintings by Phoebe Anna Traquair. Miss Warrack has drawn for the most part upon well-known poets in compiling her "Anthology of Love and Death." George Herbert is here and Robert Louis Stevenson, the Brownings, the Rossettis and Lord Tennyson. There are also some lately written verses on the new armies by Katharine Tynan and a few translations of Tuscan love songs that will be new to the majority of readers. The selections have been thoughtfully made, and together with Miss Traquair's richly-coloured pre-Raphaelite illustrations make an attractive volume. The proceeds of sale are to be given to the Everyman Fund for Belgian Relief and Reconstruction.

From Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.—"In Nature's Ways," by Marcus Woodward. Mr. Woodward unburdens himself of quantities of information concerning birds, rodents and gypsies. He uses a simple, vivid style and constant illustrations of his subjects drawn by J. A. Shepherd. The book is one that would instantly appeal to a child and admirably fulfils its intention of forming an introduction to White's Selborne.

From Mr. Elliot Stock—"The Battle of the Lord," by Ven. Basil Wilberforce. Archdeacon Wilberforce is still one of the greatest living preachers, and everything he has to say is provocative of deep thought. This volume of sermons on the War is certain to secure a great circle of readers, for those characteristics of courageous and original expression for which Dr. Wilberforce is deservedly famous are particularly noticeable, in a book which we consider one of the most valuable of the many religious works which the War has called forth.

From Mr. Arthur H. Stockwell—"Month by Month in the Country," by Arthur E. Wigston. Most of us have a love of Nature and a vague desire to cultivate our knowledge of her ways. Indolence or lack of leisure usually prevent the desire from becoming a pleasurable reality. Mr. Wigston has an eye both to our native indolence and our love of outdoor life, and has framed a little book which can be read in a couple of hours and which gives all the points of country lore likely to be remembered by an average man. He takes each month in turn, and describes the attributes and progress of vegetable and animal life in a manner that will appeal alike to child and adult readers.

From the Student Christian Movement—"A Book of Prayers for Students." The students in question are members of the Student Christian Movement. The prayers drawn up for them are arranged in convenient order to form daily services for a week, litanies and special prayers on various subjects.

From Messrs. R. & T. Washbourne, Ltd.—"Manual of the Sodality of Our Lady," by S.P.B.V.M. After a brief history of the Jesuitical and sixteenth century origin of the lay order known as the Sodality of Our Lady are given the general rules to be observed in founding a branch society. A later chapter deals with the indulgences and privileges obtainable by members, and at the end of the manual forms of prayer to be used on various occasions find place.

From the Same—"The Friar Preacher: Yesterday and To-day," translated from the French of Père Jacquin, O.P., by Father Hugh Pope, O.P. A short account of the origins, objects and ideals of the Dominican Order. The translation is excellent.

From the Same—"A Book of Answered Prayers," by O. K. Parr. The object of this little work is to teach the value of direct and definite prayer. An account is given of answers to prayers offered by pious Roman Catholics in a private oratory. Many of the illustrations are very helpful.

From the Same—"Friends and Apostles of the Sacred Heart," by P. F. Chandlery. This is an account of a number of incidents and sayings associated with the lives of votaries of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. The book is handy in form and is calculated to be useful to devout Catholics.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind,
and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books,
from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each
Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arndel Prints are included.
The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Cliffe says:—"It is the best,
bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue
of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

International Law and the Great War

— By —

COLEMAN PHILLIPSON,
M.A., LL.D., Litt.D., Barrister-at-Law, Author of "The International Law and Custom of Ancient Greece."

K.C.B., LL.D.

Demy 8vo, cloth. 15s. net.

The book deals concisely and clearly with numerous matters of International Law that have arisen during the present war. It appeals not only to those taking an interest in the development of the law of nations and in international politics; it is indispensable also to general readers who have been following the momentous events of the Continental and the naval war.

Publishers' Circular

YOUR Help is Solicited

MR. G. H. WHITAKER, Editor of The Bookseller, and Mr. R. B. Marston, Editor of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR AND BOOKSELLERS' RECORD, have been invited by the Publishers' Association to assist in the production and publication, early in November, of a representative illustrated Christmas catalogue of books.

The issue of such an official illustrated catalogue by the Publishers' Association about the time when for over half-a-century the illustrated Christmas issues of the book trade papers have appeared is obviously a serious matter for the latter. But these are serious times for all of us, and having been asked to co-operate in a scheme the object of which is to help the whole book trade, Mr. R. B. Marston and Mr. G. H. Whitaker have agreed to do so to the best of their ability. Having themselves made sacrifices more serious than many may suppose, they can appeal with all the more confidence on the one hand to publishers to advertise nobly, and on the other to booksellers to be generous, in fact magnanimous, in buying copies, and above all immediately to send clear orders in writing for the full number of copies they can use, at the nominal price of 20s. per 100, to

Mr. Wm. Poulten,
Secretary,

The Publishers' Association,
Stationers' Hall, London, E.C.

The Committee of the Publishers' Association which has the matter in hand, and has already devoted a great deal of time and thought to it, estimates that the production of this fine work, the sole object of which is to induce the public to buy more books, will cost between two and three thousand pounds.

We have had opportunities of discussing this catalogue with some of our publishers of greatest experience, and their view is that it will be most useful, and some are prepared to show that they have the courage of their opinion by taking £50 or even £100 of advertising space. In their own interests the publishers will do all they can to make the general public aware of the existence of this fine illustrated trade Christmas list. They have agreed to distribute broadcast in the autumn through their publications an announcement of the fact that the catalogue is to appear and urging readers to ask their booksellers for it.

It is confidently anticipated that the circulation of this co-operation book trade illustrated catalogue will be very large—how large depends mainly on the support received from the booksellers. Surely even in these war times no bookseller would grudge paying 20s. for 100 copies of this most attractive catalogue, for which price he can have his name and address printed as sole imprint on the cover. We believe that to give the smallest business a chance even as few as 50 copies, with imprint, will be supplied.

Complaints have at times been heard of publishers going direct to the public and ignoring the retail and wholesale booksellers. Well, here is a genuine and very costly attempt on the part of the leading publishers to help the booksellers to sell books by means of an attractive setting-forth of the Christmas books of 1915 with specimens of the illustrations, and with lists of the books of the year, &c., classified and indexed.

On one of our advertisement pages will be found some further particulars. But the points we want to impress on our readers are that it is to their own best interests to support this "Help Ourselves" movement, and to do it Now, and not to "wait and see"—as when you see it it will be too late to get copies.

The number to be printed depends on the orders received in advance, as the hundreds of pounds' worth of text paper and paper for the illustrations have to be specially made, which will take some weeks, and the production of the catalogue must occupy many weeks of hard work. It will be impossible to supply more than the quantity arranged for in advance.

Booksellers will see how much the publishers are relying on their goodwill to help this experiment, and will, we hope, show the same by sending their orders as soon as possible to Mr. Poulten as noted above, indicating the agent through whom the parcel is to be sent, &c.

Considering that it would be too onerous a burden on those concerned to have to open thousands of accounts for small amounts, it will be understood that orders should be accompanied by cash, or at any rate that booksellers will remit cash on being advised that the catalogues are ready.

MESSRS. GEORGE ALLEN & UNWIN, LTD., have invested £1,000 in the War Loan. Some people would take the lot—if they had the chance. We would.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish this month "The House Fly, A Slayer of Men," by F. W. Fitzsimons, F.Z.S., with illustrations. The house fly is probably more dangerous to human life indirectly than all the other flies and gnats and mosquitoes put together. This year the London house fly appears to be afraid of Zeppelins. At any rate, so far he has been conspicuous by his absence. But his big cousin, the blue-bottle, has been more in evidence than usual. Messrs. Longmans will also publish "The Origin of Artillery," by Lieut.-Col. Henry W. L. Hime, and "In Mr. Knox's Country," the new book by E. Æ. Somerville and Martin Ross, the authors of the very successful "Some Experiences of an Irish R.M." Mr. Knox's country is that district of South-Western Ireland which was hunted by the hounds of which Flurry Knox was the M.F.H. Some new friends will be met with in that cheerful country, and many old ones, amongst them the narrator, Major Sinclair Yeates, R.M., Mrs. Knox of Aussolas, and Mr. and Mrs. Flurry Knox. There are eight illustrations in colour by E. Æ. Somerville.

The Right Hon. Viscount Bryce recently delivered the Creighton Lecture at the University of London, entitled "Race Sentiment as a Factor in History." The University of London Press announce the immediate publication of the lecture at one shilling net, which is obtainable from their publishers, Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, of Warwick Square, E.C.

"Last Pages from a Journal," with other papers, by Mark Rutherford, edited by his wife, will be published next week by Mr. Humphrey Milford, Oxford University Press. The work is divided into three parts—strictly last pages written during the last years of the author's life, other papers of earlier date but mostly revised in those last years, and notes—and is uniform with the other books by Mark Rutherford, previously published by Mr. Milford.

Miss S. Macnaughtan's new novel entitled "Some Elderly People and Their Young Friends," which completes its serial course in the Queen this week, will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. in volume form on the 15th instant. It is a kindly satire in which neither ancient nor modern are too ruthlessly treated. Miss Macnaughtan has been serving at the Front since September last, but is in England for a short time, and is lecturing on "Pictures and Stories of the War" with a view to emphasising the need for the most strenuous exertions of all workers at home.

Mr. Ian Malcolm, M.P., has been serving in the British Red Cross since the outbreak of the War, and has seen many things and many men in a very interesting light. His war pictures behind the lines are to be published before long with illustrations from original documents by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.

It is seventeen years since a volume of "Essays in Church Reform" was issued under the general editorship of the present Bishop of Oxford. Mr. Douglas Eyre has arranged with those of the original writers who still live to revise their contributions, has caused new essays to be added, and the revised version—priced at half-a-crown—will be issued this month by Mr. Murray under the title of "The Reform of the Church of England."

Lord Esher has contributed a preface to a little book by Mr. C. Ernest Fayle, which Mr. Murray will shortly publish, entitled "The Great Settlement." As its name implies, the volume treats of problems to be settled when the Great War is over. Although the War is not yet won—and its only end can be victorious to us—the many problems—territorial, colonial, economic, fiscal, concerning armaments and so forth—that it raises cannot be too soon considered. We must not "muddle through" afterwards. Meanwhile in this book is "light and leading" that should help.

Her Majesty the Queen of the Belgians has graciously accepted a copy of "Field Hospital and Flying Column," by Violetta Thurstan. This book is described in the sub-title as "The Journal of an English Nursing Sister in Belgium and Russia; including hospital work at Charleroi, Brussels and Warsaw, and experiences at the bombardment of Lodz, and by the trenches at Radzivilow."

Messrs. Putnams report the sixty-fifth impression printing of Mrs. Barclay's "Rosary." Mr. Clement Shorter will have a fit when he reads this.

Mr. Van Wyck Brooks, a young American writer who is already known to English readers through his study of John Addington Symonds, has attempted in a new volume an interpretation of the work and personality of Mr. H. G. Wells. His book, "The World of H. G. Wells," is published by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.

A novel by a well-known writer has been announced in several papers as coming out under the title of "The Green Ray." Messrs. Sampson Low inform us that this title is their property, as for many years they have issued a popular romance by Jules Verne under this title. We are not sure that there is much copyright in titles, but it is always well to avoid duplicating them.

Messrs. Gowans & Gray, Ltd., are to be congratulated on the attractive get up of their "New Sixpenny Series"—6d. net, we are glad to say. No. 5 has a challenge in its very title, which runs, "The Twelve Best Short Stories in the French Language." Not the verdict of even twelve of the most famous members of the French Academy would be accepted on all sides in such a selection. Nor would broad unfettered judgment agree that the twelve best short stories in the French language all appeared after the eighteenth century, and can be included in a view which "never loses sight of any moral proprieties."

Of special interest among the new books in Messrs. Dent's admirable Wayfarer's Library is Mr. A. G. Gardiner's book "The War Lords." This is an entirely new book and not a reprint, as is the case with many of the volumes in Wayfarer's Library. The author has written the book since the outbreak of the War, and in it he treats of the origins, issues and conduct of the War in the light of the personalities of the principal actors, and their influence upon the world tragedy of to-day. Other books in this issue are the second volume of the Story of the Regiments, "The Seaforth Highlanders," by F. W. Walker; "Once Upon a Time," by H. B. Marriott Watson; "The Serious Wooing," by John Oliver Hobbes; "Dancing Days," by J. J. Bell.

Messrs. Hugh Rees, Ltd., will shortly publish an English translation by Professor Spenser Wilkinson, of Colonel Colin's "The Great Battles of History."

Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Sons, Ltd., have brought out more than 100 different sets of six of their excellent picture postcards in colours, in oilette, and photogravure—viz., 10 different Royalty packets, 30 different Navy packets, 70 different Army packets, also aviation and Boy Scouts are represented. We are sending the cards they sent us to one of our big hospitals where there are many wounded men—they appreciate these things to the full.

Mr. Unwin will publish on July 19th Dr. Coleman Phillipson's "International Law and the Great War," to which Sir John Macdonell contributes an Introduction. The book deals concisely and clearly with numerous matters of international law that have arisen during the present War.

Messrs. Methuen published on July 8th a new book by Mr. H. G. Wells, entitled "Bealby." This new novel is described by its publishers as "a feast of fast and furious fun."

A book is about to be issued in this country by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., entitled "Germany Embattled," by Oswald G. Villard, President of the New York Evening Post. After living and studying in Germany and counting eight of his own near relations in the German army, the conclusion the author arrives at is that it would be best even for Germany that she should be defeated in the war. At the same time, he writes with great sympathy for the German people as distinguished from the German Government.

The Bermuda Copyright Act

THE Bermuda Copyright Act, 1914, relating to the importation of copyright works into the Bermuda Islands, provides that copies made out of the Bermuda Islands of any work in which copyright subsists, which, if made in those islands would infringe copyright, and as to which the owner of the copyright gives notice in writing by himself or his agent to the Receiver-General that he is desirous that such copies should not be imported into those islands, shall not be so imported, and if imported, shall, subject to the provisions of the Act, be forfeited, and may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of as the Receiver-General shall direct.

Before detaining any such copies, or taking any further proceedings with a view to the forfeiture thereof, the Receiver-General may require the regulations to be made under the Act, whether as to information, conditions, or other matters, to be complied with, and may satisfy himself in accordance with those regulations that the copies are such as are prohibited by the Act to be imported.

The Governor-General is empowered to make regulations, either general or special, and such regulations may provide, inter alia, for reimbursements to the Government of all expenses and damages incurred in respect of any detention made on the information of the Receiver-General, and of any proceedings consequent on such detention.

Penalties are also prescribed for dealing with infringing copies of copyright works.

[We are indebted to The Publishers' Weekly for this information. We were not aware that it required any special Act to keep pirated editions of works enjoying British copyright out of any Imperial British Dominion.—Ed. P.C.]

For Citizens of no Mean City

SIR LAURENCE GOMME is contributing an interesting preface to Mr. Frederic Swann's "Primer of London Citizenship," which Messrs. King, of Westminster, will publish shortly. Mr. Swann's work has been designed as a short sketch of the government of the Empire's capital, specially written for students in evening institutes, &c. In the words of Sir Laurence Gomme, this little volume "contains an account of all the essential facts, and is written in so charmingly simple a style that no one can be misled by its statements."

Briefly, it is intended to explain the unique system of local government in force in London, to elucidate some of its intricacies, to point out some of its defects, to examine those measures that have been proposed for its simplification and improvement, and last but not least, to arouse—especially in young readers—some sense of the wonder and majesty of London, some desire to learn about its municipal institutions, and some appreciation of the high privilege of sharing in the responsibilities attaching to citizenship of so great and glorious a city.

The Book Trade and the War

CAPTAIN R. G. LONGMAN, one of the partners in Longmans, Green & Co., and his brother, Major H. K. Longman, who went into the Army after leaving Cambridge, left for the front on July 7th with their regiment, the Gordon Highlanders. They have the hearty good wishes of all branches of the book trade.

We regret to hear from an old friend and subscriber to the P.C., Mr. W. F. Henderson of Edinburgh, that his son has died from wounds received in action at the Dardanelles. The following notice is from The Scotsman July 3rd, 1915:—"Word has been received that Sergeant William Ewart Henderson, 1/5th Royal Scots, has died from wounds received at the Dardanelles. Sergeant Henderson

SERGEANT WM EWART HENDERSON
1/5th ROYAL SCOTS

Died of wounds received at the Dardanelles

was a son of Mr. W. F. Henderson, bookseller and publisher, George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh, and was a well-known athlete. A member of the Waverley and of the Edinburgh Harriers, he was appointed assistant secretary of the Athletic Association of the battalion. He was the winner of many prizes for running and shooting. Sergeant Henderson's death occurred just the day before his twenty-third birthday. Writing to the Rev. Dr. Salmond a few days ago he said:—"Though there appears to be a dearth of Presbyterian chaplains out here, we have had divine service twice, each occasion being the signal for an enemy's bombardment. Trusting to be soon offering worship in the more peaceful circumstances of the family pew in Auld Reekie."

Mr. Henderson and his family will have the very sincere sympathy of all in the book trade. In a private note Mr. H. says: "It is a great blow to me, he was all a son should be or could be"—simple words, but a thousand could not better them.

The Distinguished Conduct Medal has been awarded to Corporal G. Harris, 7th Brigade R.F.A. (London Division), who is an assistant in Mr. Murray's House.

"La Guerre à Liège"

Pages of an Eye-Witness

M. CÉLESTIN DEMBLON, who is member for Liège in the Belgian Parliament, Professor of History and French Literature in the New University of Brussels, and author of many works, has just published* a most interesting and valuable little book entitled "La Guerre à Liège." It is prefaced by a few pages of "Avant-propos," which describe briefly "What Belgium is"; then the events which drew the eyes of the world on Liège are described with power and feeling by a literary artist who understands. We have no space to quote at any length, but here is a picture of the terrific German gun which literally ate up the "impregnable" Belgian and French fortresses:—

LE "420" ET LES FORTS.

La prise du dernier fort fut quelque chose de terrible.

Comme nous étions, quelques amis et moi, près du square Saint-Pierre, nous vîmes tout à coup déboucher par la rue Bruxelles, au milieu de soldats allemands, un pièce d'artillerie si colossale que nous n'en pouvions croire nos yeux. C'était l'un des huit canons gigantesques que les Allemands ont qualifié de "surprise de la guerre": les "420!" Leur fabrication, connue seulement de l'empereur et de quelques intimes, avait été, disait-on, tenue secrète.

Le monstre de métal avançait, en deux parties, traînées, si j'ai bonne mémoire, par 36 chevaux. Le pavé en tremblait. La foule restait muette de consternation à l'aspect de ce phénomène attirail. Lentement, il traversa la place Saint-Lambert devant le théâtre du Gymnase et le Grand Hôtel dit Charlemagne, tourna place Verte et place du Théâtre—puis s'engagea sur les boulevards de la Sauvenière et d'Avroy, attirant partout quantité de curieux sur son lourd et lent passage. Les éléphants équipés d'Annibal n'étonneront pas plus les Romains! On eût dit quelque monstre antédiluvien pétrifié. Les soldats l'accompagnaient roidement, avec un solemnité presque religieuse. Le Belial des canons!

Certainly the war, among all its so-called literature, will not produce much more striking than this loving tribute to the proud part played by Liège and her forts, until they fell down before the roaring of this modern Belial!

The New Dutch Copyright

"The Worst Calamity that ever befell the Dutch Book Trade"

IN consequence of the agitation against it the Dutch Government is to reconsider the Dutch Copyright Law of 1912. That act was, to the dismay of nearly all Dutch publishers, made retroactive and unless its retroactivity is killed "thousands of translated works will become valueless and the Dutch publishers will lose the greater part of their capital." For generations Dutch publishers pirated the literature of the rest of the world—taking what they liked and only paying for illustrations and for advanced sheets in the case of very important works, so that they could get a Dutch edition out before a rival and call it an authorized edition. In the old wood-cut days it was the illustrations of a great book of travel and discovery, for instance, which protected it to some extent in Holland, because a set of electros of the foreign illustrations could be purchased at a cheaper rate than pirated copies could be made; but the modern art of photo-engraving altered all this or to a great extent. The Dutch book-trade desired to relinquish the profession of piracy which they said was thrust on them, they clamoured for copyright chiefly to protect foreign authors and artists against Dutch literary submarines; the Government appears to have been shocked at what it learned and told the publishers they must not only give up piracy in future but also pay royalties on the works they had taken in the past. As the whole Dutch book-trade appears to be "agin the Government"—doubtless the latter will have to get out or get under.

P.S.—Since this was in type we have received Het Auteursrecht, the Dutch publishers' copyright organ, from which we gather that the Dutch Government has listened to reason as presented to them by the Dutch book trade. It reminds one of Æsop's fable of the frogs who prayed to Jupiter to give them a better king than King Log, and when Jupiter sent them King Stork they said it was the worst calamity that had ever befallen them.

Cambridge Farm Institute Series

WE are glad to see that the Cambridge Press is to do a new series of aids to agriculture; the general editors are T. B. Wood, M.A., and E. J. Russell, D.Sc. The first volume is "Farm Accounts," by C. S. Orwin, Hon. M.A. (Oxon.), Director of the Institute for Research in Agricultural Economics in the University of Oxford. The book (crown 8vo., 3s. net) is intended to assist farmers and agricultural students along a new road to success by the systematic study of the economics of farming. The author has had experience of accounts suited to farming practice during a considerable period as agent on a property of some 22,000 acres, with farms of all sizes, from 1,100 acres to 12 acres, in hand at various times; he has also examined candidates in book-keeping from nearly every agricultural college and University department in the British Isles, and he has had the opportunity of going through the accounts of many practical farmers.

In the economics of the United Kingdom nothing has been so neglected by the State for 70 years as agriculture. If there had been a naval coalition against us instead of with us we should have been starved out months ago.

Literary Profits

MISS BRADDON'S fortune of over £68,000 is one of the largest sums ever left by a novelist. Those with a taste for statistics will probably have worked out for themselves that it represents approximately a thousand pounds for each novel written by her, which is considerably in excess of the average return. Dickens, it may be mentioned, left £80,000, and Trollope £70,000. A few of our popular writers of the day must have made more than Miss Braddon, notably Sir James Barrie. But then Sir James, like Mr. Arnold Bennett, is a playwright as well as a novelist, and the profits from a modern successful play are well beyond the Johnsonian dreams of avarice.—Globe, July 5th, 1915.

Lord Roberts Memorial Fund

New War Portrait Stamps Just Issued.

THE fourth sheet of stamp-portraits in colour, issued on behalf of the Lord Roberts Memorial Fund for Disabled Soldiers and Sailors, has just been published, and includes the Prince of Wales, General Sir Ian Hamilton, Princess Patricia of Connaught, The Mikado, Sir Edward Grey, General Sir Leslie Rundle, General Foch, and other celebrities of the War—that of the Prince of Wales being undoubtedly one of the most successful miniature portraits yet produced.

Considering the very great importance of extending a helping hand to those gallant men "broke in the war," when they return to civil life, the increasing popularity of these portrait stamps is very gratifying to note.

The first four sheets are now on sale, and when the issue is completed there will be 144 different stamps in all, issued in sheets of twelve, gummed and perforated, at 1s. each sheet.

Orders should be placed either with the Lord Roberts Memorial Fund, 122, Brompton Road, London, S.W., or with the publishers, Messrs. Fawcett & Co., 125, Strand, London, W.C.

With the aid of the artistic albums which have been specially prepared and designed to mount the series, it is safe to say that these War Portraits will form a lasting and interesting memento of the great world struggle, that will be treasured and appreciated by all.

Mr. G. K. Chesterton has written an introduction to a volume entitled "Bohemia's Claim for Freedom," which will be published immediately by Messrs. Chatto & Windus. The book will be fully illustrated.

Details of Bookbinding Described in New Four-Volume American Work*

THE majority of works on bookbinding have been devoted to the historical and artistic aspects of the art. In particular has there been a scarcity of works on bookbinding by machinery. From the Inland Printer Co. of Chicago there has now come, however, a comprehensive treatment of bookbinding both by machinery and by hand, designed both for the buyer of binding and the bookbinder. The author is John J. Pleger, who has been in charge of several large establishments and was founder, foreman, and instructor of the bindery of the Government Bureau of Printing at Manila.

The work is published in four volumes, presumably to give persons interested in certain branches of the trade the chance to buy the part dealing with those branches. This method of publication has caused the duplication of certain portions of Parts II and III. For instance, the information on gathering and collating given in Part II is repeated in Part III, and the same applies to information on cutting and trimming and glue, gum and paste.

Part I deals with paper-ruling, with especial emphasis on pen-ruling. Various machines are described, lists of ruling terms, inks, &c., and there are careful descriptions of the technique of setting up pen-ruling machines and their care.

Part II, which opens with instructions to printers concerning make-up and printing and a list of binding terms, is divided into two main sections, paper operations and manifold work. Section one covers instructions for jogging and counting, folding, punching, eyeletting, and crimping, with illustrations of various machines for these purposes. Regarding bundling, the author says: "Solidarity of the paper is the most essential feature of a perfectly bound book. The smashing takes out the impression made by the press. The air is forced from between the folded sheets, and so allows them to be flat. A book which is not properly smashed will, after the book is trimmed, show starts, and this, too, no matter how accurate the trimming may be. It is impossible to gild a book if not smashed or thoroughly pressed," &c.

To facilitate gathering the author advises printing a four-point rule in the marginal fold, step fashion, which practically eliminates the necessity of collating. Under the heading stitching, hand-stitching and various methods of stitching by machine are described.

The second portion of the book, dealing with manifolding, takes up perforating, automatic numbering and paging, pamphlet and quarter binding, cutting and trimming by machines having one or two knives, and by continuous trimmers, and finally glue and paste. "The trimming of letterpress work," says Mr. Pleger, "should be standardised so that paper-covered books are trimmed a trifle larger to permit a retrim when books are returned for a more substantial cover." He warns against sour paste, "as the fermentation is injurious to the leather, and invites the growth of moulds and bacteria."

Part III begins with over 200 binding definitions. Not all the definitions are entirely satisfactory, thus, for instance, sprinkled calf-skin is explained as "calf-skin treated with acid," which definition could be applied equally well to tree calf. Forwarding preliminaries are dealt with in this volume. The section on end-papers describes the several methods of making end-papers by hand and by machinery. Information on edge decoration and pressing is followed by sections on rounding and backing by hand and machines. Here, speaking of gluing the backs, Mr. Pleger says, "the best flexible glue should be used, as on the gluing of the backs of the signatures depends the entire strength of subsequent operations." Two pages are devoted to book-cloth and nine to leather and imitation leather. Case-making and casing-in by hand are thoroughly described, as well as job and blank forwarding, and finishing.

Part IV, on edge-gilding, marbling, and hand-tooling, is a satisfactory elementary text-book of these subjects. In the section on edge-gilding the author says: "Extreme solidness is absolutely necessary in edge-gilding, and all books should be thoroughly pressed for at least twenty-four hours before sewing. To neglect this will cause the lustre and brilliancy of the edge to vanish after another pressing. . . . The sticking of leaves in edge-gilding can be avoided if the edges of the books are given a filler before putting them in the gilding press." The section on marbling is illustrated in colour. The part devoted to hand-tooling describes the various sizes of gauges and lines, numerous hand-stamps, and the practical work involved in blind and gold-tooling.—New York Publishers' Weekly.

Love-scenes in Fiction

IN The British Review there are some interesting notes on "Love-Scenes in Fiction," by Wilfrid L. Randell—e.g., this on Jane Eyre's:—

"In certain circles, to confess ignorance of her work (Charlotte Brontë's), or to express any distaste for it, requires an appreciable amount of courage. It is the business of the critic, however, in his indefatigable search for comparisons, contrasts, and illustrations, to drink from many streams whose waters are not particularly refreshing, and in 'Jane Eyre,' highly though it be lauded, is a 'love' scene so unreal as to be frankly laughable. The pompous St. John, sitting by a rill, musing aloud to his sedate companion, remarks: 'I shall see it again in dreams, when I sleep by the Ganges: and again in a more remote hour, when another slumber overcomes me—on the shore of a darker stream.' He is on the point of going to the East as a missionary, and he speaks further words in the same blithe strain, until Jane 'felt as if an awful charm was framing round and gathering over' her; 'I trembled,' she writes, 'to hear some fatal word spoken which would at once declare and rivet the spell.' Awful charm, in truth! And, in due course, the 'fatal word' is uttered:—

'Jane, come with me to India; come as my helpmeet and fellow-labourer. . . . God and nature intended you for a missionary's wife. It is not personal, but mental, endowments they have given you; you are formed for labour, not for love. A missionary's wife you must and shall be.'

Then come two pages of a fluent, semi-religious pomposity which seems to have vastly impressed the submissive Jane. The ardent lover gives her a lecture on humility worthy of an intellectual Uriah Heep, and assures her lengthily that he has watched the object of his pale, unearthly passion in her duties at the village school, and has studied her for ten months. He has found her punctual, upright, tactful, self-sacrificing, tractable, assiduous; one begins to fear that he will exhaust a thesaurus, for just when the end seems near he bursts forth afresh in a pæan of workmanlike adulation. 'Jane,' he cries enthusiastically, 'you are docile, diligent, disinterested, faithful, constant, and courageous; very gentle and very heroic; cease to mistrust yourself—I can trust you unreservedly. As a conductress of Indian schools, and a helper among Indian women, your assistance to me will be invaluable.' Thus arrives the tremendous climax; and we are left feeling that surely no lover ever more urgently needed some judicious instruction in the arts of love. The whole scene bears no stamp of genius, brings no illusion to the reader; it is simply bathos, and the character of the fatuous St. John is incredible."

An Opening for British Toys in Brazil

BRAZIL has always been a large importer of toys of all descriptions, and the bulk of the trade has been held by Germany. France has received a small share of the business, and the United States has furnished certain classes of these goods.

Dolls of all sizes seem to predominate in the displays in local toy shops. The demand for china dolls, owing to their relatively high prices, is limited, but rubber, papier maché, and celluloid dolls (the latter are being successfully introduced from the United States) are sold extensively. Teddy bears and other animals of all descriptions seem to appeal strongly to the children here. Such games as lotto, steeplechase, &c., find a fair demand. Directions and rules for these games should be printed in Portuguese. Velocipedes, tricycles, and children's foot-propelled small automobiles are finding favour. The endless variety of smaller toys, such as crayon and water-colour sets, tin soldiers, sets for playing in the sand on the seashore, mechanical toys, rubber balls of all sizes, &c., find a ready sale. Children's books should, of course, be printed in Portuguese to be saleable in Brazil.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE

149, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

Maps

MESSRS. GEORGE PHILIP & SON, LTD., will publish on July 15th, No. 3 of their Large Scale Strategic War Maps, the Southern (Italian) Frontier area, with a large scale inset of the Dardanelles and the Sea of Marmora.

The map will be coloured to distinguish mountains, forests, fortified areas, &c., as in the case of the Western and Eastern areas respectively, which have secured such a full measure of approbation from the Press as well as from our foremost generals, Sir John French, Sir Douglas Haig, and others.

The map will be priced uniformly with others of the Series, viz., 2s. 6d. net on paper, 6s. net on cloth, each supplied folded in envelope case with complete companion index.

The Quack Novel

"THE quack novel," says Owen Wister in an article on "Quack Novels and Democracy," in the June Atlantic Monthly, "is a thing which looks like a book, and which is compounded, advertised, and marketed in precisely the same fashion as Castoria, Wine of Cardui, Alcola, Mrs. Summer's free-to-you-my-sister Harmless Headache Remedy, Viavi Tablettes and other patent medicines, harmful and harmless." Mr. Wister, thereupon, boldly naming names as he advances, demolishes one by one some of the "quack novels" of the last few years, drawing conclusions concerning shams and sentimentalism which he skilfully applies to wider issues of our present-day democracy. The bookseller will find the article both amusing and interesting.

Trade Notes

MR. E. L. MORICE asks us kindly to notify his removal to 39, Museum Street.

MR. J. DEW, Manager of Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co., Ltd., asks us to give publicity to the fact that he is not the J. Dew referred to in an article in John Bull dated July 3rd.

MESSRS. MELVILLE & MULLEN PROPTY., LTD., 262 & 264, Collins Street, Melbourne, write: "Our agreement with Messrs. Whitcombe & Tombs, Ltd., under which they were appointed to act as our London buying agents, will expire at the end of June, 1915, and will not be renewed. We shall, therefore, ask you to make the necessary alterations in your books, so that all communications will reach us through their proper channels. In future, Mr. John Clark, of Ludgate Square, will act as our agent in London, and we shall be glad if you will submit all samples of new books to this gentleman's discretion, and accept his orders on our behalf."

THE annual dinner to the literary and artistic contributors to "Printers' Pie" will not be given this year by Mr. W. Hugh Spottiswoode, owing to the War.

A CASE of great interest to the stationery and publishing trades will be tried shortly in the London Courts—the case of alleged libel of Messrs. Wolff & Co., formerly Hausmann & Wolff, by Messrs. J. Baker & Son, the well-known wholesale stationers and publishers, of Clifton and Bristol.

MR. A. M. BURGHESS writes: "I think you may be willing to print the names of the firms who have responded to the paragraph in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, May 21st. They are as follows: John Murray; Rivingtons; Macmillan & Co.; Wells, Gardner, Darton & Co.; Fisher Unwin; Sir William Robertson Nicoll; Rev. F. T. Foakes-Jackson, Jesus College, Cambridge; Rev. Thomas Birkett Dover; Mrs. S. H. Sadler; Mr. Percy Russell; Holmes & Son; Alfred Wilson, Gracechurch Street; John Walker, Warwick Lane; Huke's Library, Chester; Lucy's Library, Teignmouth; and Richard Herting & Co., Bunhill Row. Further contributions will be duly announced."

AN urgent appeal for funds for the North Wales Nursing Association is being made, on behalf of the Committee, by Mr. W. A. Foster, of the well-known firm of Jarvis & Foster, booksellers and stationers, Bangor, who has been appointed hon. financial secretary. Mr. Foster has been remarkably successful in his appeals to the charitable.

Bookwormiana

SIR,—May I be allowed to answer Mr. F. Marchmont's query re "Book Worm"? For the past twenty-five years I have come across a few of these alive from old books; the latest was a find of four in the back of a Latin tome of 1483, last year. These I took to Dr. Lascelles, of Harrow School, and they are now bottled in spirit in the museum. There are four species of this insect, three of them coming under my knowledge within the time named. I have had them under the microscope, and there are two species with black heads, which resemble a gimlet in every respect, hence the clean bore that they unfortunately leave in the volume.

There are several species of the "Anobium," and one of the best known of this species is the "Death Watch Beetle," "Anobium tessellatum," which not only attacks books, but bores furniture and woodwork in houses. "Anthrenus Musæorum," or "Museum Beetle," the larvæ of which are very destructive, and have to be carefully watched. The "Ptinidæ" are small insects, and in the larval stage "Ptinus fur" is very destructive. The genus "Dermestes" are beetles of small size, but the larvæ are very destructive, and apart from this form attacking books, we have one of the species found in cheese.

You will notice that the whole of the larvæ attacking books are of the "beetle" tribe, or "Coleopterous" insects, and do not come from the moth in any way.

Their method of propagation is a difficult one, as they do not seem to appear in a book for a considerable time, and then they always come from the paste used, so that I believe, after careful study for many years, they are the result of a minute egg in the flour, which is evidently laid in the corn, probably when growing, from a beetle, and which comes into being, after the paste has done its work and deteriorated to such an extent that they are free to germinate.

To-day this will not happen, as it is chemically treated, and is therefore avoided.

Trusting this will answer our friend's request, and with kind regards,

I am, dear sir,

Yours obediently,

J. PENNELL.

Rob. Rivi re & Son,
29-33, Heddons Street,
*Regent Street, W.

[Much obliged to Mr. Pennell. Probably the colour of any particular bookworm depends on the kind of literature he has been digesting.—ED. P.C.]

DEAR SIR,—I have just read in your issue of July 3rd a letter headed "A Real Live Bookworm." It may interest your correspondent to hear that the tiny creature mentioned above is a member of the family "Ptinid ," a rather numerous and destructive group of Coleopterous insects of a greyish-brown hue, with a few markings of a somewhat lighter shade, much the same colour as the material on which they feed, and this is doubtless the reason they are so seldom seen, but the searcher will find them in old houses and furniture, rotten palings, and decayed trees. Their presence is betrayed by the tiny round holes which they and their larv  perforate, and the fine powder of gnawed wood, &c., with which the holes are filled, is a sign that our pet books and furniture are in danger. Some of these beetles feed upon collections of dried plants, butterflies, skins, &c. The "Anobium Striatum" is the insect that bores into our chairs and tables, and, alas! our books, and when they have eaten and waxed fat, and the appointed time is arrived, they make themselves houses, spinning a soft silky substance mixed with the material on which they have been feeding, into a cocoon, in which they enclose themselves, and in which they change into the pup  and await their transformation into the perfect insect. In the hottest time of the summer there emerges from each cocoon a little beetle, firm and oval in form, and usually short and obtuse at each end; his head is small, and sinks into the thorax as far as the eyes, and his antenn  are moderately long. He moves very slowly, and seldom uses his wings, and when touched he counterfeits death by withdrawing his head and antenn  and contracting his legs, and will suffer himself to be torn to pieces rather than show any sign of life. "Anobium Striatum" and "Anobium Tessellatum," better known among the superstitious as the "Death Watch," occasion much alarm to ignorant people by the noise they make at the season of pairing, signalling to each other by striking their jaws upon the object on which they are standing. The sound, resembling the ticking of a watch, is thought to foretell a death in the family of the hearer within a period of twelve months. Thus the messenger of life is mistaken for the herald of death. There are several other insects that do much damage to books, among them a beetle of the family "Dermestes," and an ant, "Termes putatorium."

In reference to the "Ptinid ," see Dufour, in Annales Sc. Nat. 1828 (internal anatomy of "Anobium Striatum"); Latreille, Mem. on "Anobium Striatum," in Rapport de Trav. Soc. Philomat, 1799-1800; Carpenter, in Gill's "Technological Repository."

Yours faithfully,

HELEN OUGHTON.

Betchworth Cottage,
Falkland Road, Dorking.

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent, Mr. Marchmont, gave a case in which he found one of these unacceptable mites in a book, and believes he is the only one who has seen them.

Perhaps it may interest your readers to know that some eight years ago, when on a visit to Belfast, I picked up a small Catholic Church Service on account of its uncommon appearance. I took it home, put it amongst my treasures, and on opening it some twelve months afterwards, I found one of these cream-coloured monsters fully alive amongst the leaves of the book. I put it under a small microscope, and examined it. Unfortunately, I dropped it, and have never seen it since, unless it was one I found in another book some few months ago with life extinct (although I am afraid it was not the same as this was), amongst some books which I had recently purchased. If it was, he had been a great traveller, having journeyed from Leicester to Scarborough in luggage vans, boxes, &c., hence my doubt.

Though not a naturalist, the tribe appeared to me to belong to the same family which you find amongst cheese and meat, when you see these articles alive and running home.

The two which I have mentioned were about an eighth of an inch long, of a creamy white appearance, and if I remember rightly from observations under the microscope, they seemed to be of the centipede variety. Not being a naturalist, however, perhaps some of your readers will know more about this matter than I do. My object in naming these facts is to show that these vile creatures are not so rare as Mr. Marchmont imagines.

Should I come across another, I shall do my best to preserve him for future diversion.

Yours faithfully,

A. B. COPLEY.

[We fear it is not much use to recommend anglers to use bookworms as bait! —ED. P.C.]

SIR,—Mr. Marchmont seems to have found a most interesting little chap, and it is to be hoped will be able to keep him warm and well on a bit of the Flaxman fly-leaf, or whatever a good doctor or entomologist might prescribe.

Some years ago I found one in the larval stage. It seemed to have a white body and pink head, and collapsed into powder on being touched. "Anobium" is what the naturalists appear to have named it. The French, wrongly I think, say it shams being dead; anyway, I think mine died honestly.

Yours truly,

S. COTTERELL.

From The Cambridge University Press.

—"Electrical Engineering," by T. C. Baillie, M.A., D.Sc., A.M.I.E.E.; Vol. 1, Introductory. In this, the first volume of his projected series, Mr. Baillie supplies an attractively written historical introduction and a subsequent text-book for the elementary courses in electrical engineering. Students will find the author's explanations clear and his diagrams helpful. Teachers cannot do better than make use of his book for class purposes.

From the Same.—"Business Methods and the War," by Lawrence R. Dicksee, M.Com., F.C.A. The four lectures contained in Mr. Dicksee's "Business Methods and the War" were delivered at the London School of Economics in the early weeks of the present year. They deal with the alterations in business methods necessitated by the War; and point out many ways by which the British commercial man should profit by his present experiences. The subject is approached in a thoroughly wide-awake manner that should attract the attention of many go-ahead men in the business world.

From Messrs. Constable.—"Mothers and Children," by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. Among the great number of books written in these latter days on the rearing of children none can be more heartily recommended to parents than Mrs. Fisher's "Mothers and Children." The authoress is fully alive to the changed environment of the twentieth century child and she realises that on reaching adult life more demands will be made on its intellectual and nervous energy than has been the case in any previous generation. Her chapters on morals and obedience show real insight into child nature and suggest practical and wise methods of treatment, while her clear-sighted analysis of the modern mother's position in society leads to a section of advice that is helpful, cheery and thoroughly sane.

From the Same.—"Hyssop," by M. T. H. Sadler. "Hyssop" is mainly a tale of Oxford. Philip Murray, neither very handsome, very clever, very able in any direction nor the reverse of these things, manages to come near his desires, but never near enough for success. Limited income, his mother is offered for him position in the American business of an uncle; she replies that the acceptance of the offer will depend on the brilliancy of his college career. The quite good college career is not sufficiently good to warrant the refusal of the American offer, and, full of rebellion, the youth is dispatched to New York. Before leaving England, he has fallen in love and has made respectable headway with the object of his affections,

The Book Trade Co-operative Christmas Illustrated Catalogue & Record for 1915

THE COMING SEASON IS NOT GOING TO BE AN EASY ONE for the Book Trade. General pre-occupation with affairs of the day, coupled with high taxes and increase in the cost of living is bound to tell on the trade. Can we turn that to our advantage? Can we persuade the public to purchase books rather than less useful and less permanent things?

▮ The Publishers' Association believes that the BEST WAY TO MEET THE CONDITIONS IS TO UNITE in a CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT to place before the public AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE IN NOVEMBER a catalogue which will not only prove specially attractive, but will also SAVE EXPENSE TO ALL CONCERNED WITH THE SALE OF BOOKS.

▮ By CONCENTRATION ON ONE JOINT ENTERPRISE, efficiency and increased trading results can be obtained with a saving of time and money to all concerned.

▮ THIS APPLIES TO THE BOOKSELLER just as much as to the publisher, for he will have at his disposal AT MUCH BELOW COST PRICE, a catalogue that he can be proud to place in the hands of his clients and will not have to send out many different lists in order to keep his customers informed of the activities of the book trade.

▮ This Catalogue, ISSUED OFFICIALLY BY THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION, will afford a splendid chance of proving that the Book trade really can co-operate, as indeed it must if trade is to be increased, or even maintained at pre-war conditions.

 YOU can most materially assist in shaping this new Trade Venture, and in making it a success by at once informing Mr. Wm. Poulten, Secretary, The Publishers' Association, Stationers' Hall, London, E.C.; how many copies you will be able to use.

See also Leading Article in P.C. this week.

but here again he is thwarted by an unscrupulous and more dashing rival. The novel reveals an understanding of undergraduate life and, in spite of a curiously detached and pessimistic style, endows all its characters with life and sincerity.

From Messrs. Everett & Co., Ltd.—“Germany's Vanishing Colonies,” by Gordon Le Sueur. Few observers of European tendencies have been sufficiently awake to Germany's colonial expansion. Having noticed that Germans as individuals show no such colonising ability as ourselves, the matter has been dismissed even by competent authorities as one of minor importance. At the present moment, however, none of the adventures of Germany are of subsidiary interest. All, and especially the German system of honeycombing the world with German men and German methods, have become of the most vital importance. There is therefore room for Mr. Le Sueur's book and for many others on the same theme. Mr. Le Sueur, who knows his Africa well, deals chiefly with German territorial aims in that continent. He uses many maps and tells a plain, unvarnished tale.

From Messrs. John Long, Ltd.—“The Courts of Love,” by Farren Le Breton. “The Courts of Love” is not precisely a story for the “jeune fille.” Its slender and improbable plot is used as a peg on which to hang a detailed description of a liaison between an English girl and the Governor of a Russian prison. The reader is expected to suppose that a pure and innocent maiden prefers prostitution to prison life, and that Russian colonels, even when both gentlemanly and high-minded, are in the habit of selecting mistresses from among the hapless female political prisoners.

From Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Ltd.—“Rabindranath Tagore,” by Ernest Rhys. The breath of peace is felt in all the writings of Rabindranath Tagore, Indian poet and Nature lover—an intense calm which at the present time seems to belong to a far-off age. Little more than a year ago the artistic groups in London were sitting at his feet, making themselves familiar with the Hindoo philosopher's hitherto unknown books and reveling in the “higher thought.” Since those days much has been written of Tagore, but it has been left to Mr. Rhys to present some sort of connected account of the poet's life and upbringing. Evidently there has been little incident to collect, for the historical part of Mr. Rhys' book is its slightest portion. Tagore, born in Calcutta, grew up in a lonely, motherless atmosphere, and at the threshold of manhood determined to embrace a life of poverty and simplicity. He retired to Shanti Niketan and opened a school for boys modelled on his own ideas of education, a school which has proved wonderfully successful. In the intervals of teaching, his books and poems have been written. Mr. Rhys deals at some length with each work and illustrates his biographical study with photographic reproductions.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.—“The Persistent Lovers,” by A. Hamilton Gibbs. Mr. Gibbs' cheery, slangy, clean-natured young men and women are a perpetual delight. In his latest novel, a group of these charming people cluster around a penniless hero, son of a poor clergyman, and a wealthy heroine, daughter of a ducal house. The penniless hero, who has taken his Oxford degree, and therefore learnt nothing of commercial value, worries his way through various uncongenial London clerkships, and fetches up on a Devonshire fruit farm.

The titled heroine, after doing vigorous battle with her refractory parents, finally ends by running away from both Grosvenor Square and a handsome income to join her lover in his honeysuckle-covered labourer's cottage. There Dick Ardley-Manners and Lady Audley Beaumont live happily ever after.

From Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.—“The Spirit of England,” by the Right Hon. George W. E. Russell. Mr. Russell's kindly, humane and wise essay writing needs, at this time of day, no introduction to the average reader. An enormous public follows his work in the columns of the daily press and gains therefrom an impetus to their own feelings of tolerance, sympathy and dignity. The thirty-five causeries contained in “The Spirit of England,” all dealing with war-time themes, are consonant with their author's well-known style and will give delight to all those who become lucky possessors of the volume.

From the University Tutorial Press, Ltd.—“Continuous Current Electrical Engineering,” by W. Tolme MacCall, M.Sc., A.M.I.E.E. Armed with a comprehensive text book of this kind, the student of continuous current electrical engineering will need little other literary help. From its pages he can absorb a sufficient amount of electrical science to furnish him with the necessary theoretical basis for his engineering practice, while the practical side of continuous current engineering is dealt with very fully. All the class work required in the usual County Council three years' course is covered and the author has also kept in mind the needs of shift engineers and test-room staffs. The mathematical work is fairly simple and a large number of worked examples are given. Mention must also be made of the useful fact that the symbols used agree almost completely with those recommended by the International Electro-technical Commission of January, 1914.

From Messrs. Watts & Co.—“Myth and Legend in the Bible,” by Keighley Snowden. Mr. Snowden makes no profession of putting any new knowledge before the public; he has written “for ordinary readers,” and gives in popular form the results of the researches of more profound students. He contends that the facts contained in his book have not been popularised; whether or not his setting forth of them will make them more widely accepted we are unable to say. As a practised journalist, however, Mr. Snowden has the enviable art of making everything he writes deeply interesting, and it is impossible for him to be dull. Among other subjects, he writes on the dawn of Hebraism, priest lore and folk lore, the deluge, the death of Moses, and what he calls “the Creation myth.”

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate.—“Mutual Influence,” by Sir Francis Younghusband. The author is one of the number of thoughtful people who have lost belief in orthodox religion, but yet feel deeply the need of some religious force in the individual and in human society. In his search for such a satisfaction of the religious instinct, the author has arrived at the conclusion that the case is met by a kind of deification of public opinion. Matthew Arnold's “power not ourselves which makes for righteousness” is thus improved upon, and the power which makes for righteousness becomes a part of ourselves, the creation of our own consciousness of what is proper and fitting. How such worship can stir emotion is not clear, but perhaps the emotional is also to be discarded, as obsolete.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

UNWIN'S CORNER (3)

The German Peril

Ever since the rise of Bismarck, Mr. Harrison has written and spoken on the ever-growing menace of German Militarism to the peace of Europe and the existence of our Empire. In this volume he collects and analyses the various essays and addresses in which for fifty years he has sought to rouse English opinion to prepare to defend itself from the German attack.

French Sculpture of the Thirteenth Century

A Work made Invaluable by War

MR. PHILIP LEE WARNER, publisher to the Medici Society, Ltd., has just published No. 1 of a new series, called "The Medici Portfolios." The size is 7½ × 10 inches; and the price of No. 1, with fifty plates and twenty-four pages of text, in a portfolio, is 7s. 6d. net. The title of this part, complete in itself, is "French Sculpture of the Thirteenth Century: Seventy-eight Examples of Masterpieces of Medieval Art, Illustrating the Works at Reims, and Showing their Place in the History of Sculpture"; with an Introduction and Notes by Arthur Gardner, M.A., F.S.A.

One of the things which nearly all the world regrets is the extinction by German barbarity of so much of the world's art treasures—which had been spared for so many centuries, even by war and revolution. In an admirable Introduction, the author points out what irreparable damage has been done. By the publisher's permission, we are able to give a long extract from what struck us, when we read it, as being a most illuminating account of what has been destroyed, and why its destruction is so deplorable.

What "Kultur" has Destroyed

"The bombardment of Reims Cathedral has drawn attention to the wonderful art of the thirteenth century in which France is so rich, and it seems an opportunity to put in the hands of the art-loving public in a cheap and handy form a series of illustrations which will enable the sculpture of this epoch to be studied with more convenience than has hitherto been possible in this country. Reims was particularly rich in sculpture, and the destruction and mutilation of its glorious statues is peculiarly unfortunate, as they were our best examples of the highest achievements of the Gothic craftsmen, and nowhere else, since the destruction of most of the Paris statues at the Revolution, could so large a number of works be found showing the most perfect development of medieval art. In the accompanying photographs special care has been taken to illustrate these figures fully, and a representative selection of other works of the same century has been added, which will enable their position in the history of art to be clearly traced.

"To appreciate medieval sculpture properly two points should be remembered. Firstly, it was religious art. It was not set up merely to look pretty, but had a definite religious function to perform. Ruskin has eloquently described the stone 'Bible of Amiens'; and a still ampler illustrated Bible may be found in the porches of Chartres. It is not merely that Bible scenes are depicted, but they are selected and arranged in accordance with the elaborate theological teaching of the time. The whole of the history of the world, natural phenomena, the works of man, the arts and sciences are all worked up into an elaborate theological scheme leading up to and consummated in the divine mystery of the Redemption. The inspiration of this noble ideal, this simplicity and directness of aim produced an art which for truth and purity and singleness of purpose has never been surpassed.

"Secondly, it was building-stone sculpture. The medieval figure-carver worked in the same stone that the church was built of, and we must not expect to find in his productions the polished surfaces and delicate rendering of texture seen in the marble masterpieces of Greece or Italy. His work must be judged by other standards, and has its own merits and its own beauty. It forms actually a part of the building it adorns, and the way in which each figure fits its niche and harmonises with its surroundings will always excite our admiration. Take a statue from its proper position and it loses half its value, but in its own place it is inimitable. Faults of anatomy, exaggerated proportions, little conventionalities may often be found, but they hardly detract from the value of the work. The sculptor was not thinking of such trifles, but had more important matters to interest him. The earlier statues that line the sides of the great portals may be stiff and strangely proportioned, but these very faults seem to fit them the better for their architectural functions. Set against and forming part of the shafts of the porch, these apostles and saints are actually, as well as figuratively, the pillars of the Church, and even later on, when the sculptors had attained complete technical mastery of their craft, they never seem to forget these architectural requirements; medieval statues rarely adopt contorted or striking attitudes, and even when grouped together they merely turn to one another with a quiet gesture. How truly they fit their place in the building will be easily realised if we try to replace one of them by a modern figure, even from the hand of a capable artist. The latter never seems at home in its niche, its very correctness and technical perfection unfitting it to form part of a harmonious whole, as the ancient works do without effort."

The permanent photographic reproductions are admirable, and we have much pleasure in calling the attention of booksellers in all parts of the Empire to this most valuable memorial of "the best examples of the highest achievements of the Gothic craftsmen . . . showing the most perfect development of medieval art."

Notes and Announcements

M. GREGOR ALEXINSKY'S book, "Russia and the Great War," which Mr. Unwin will publish on July 19th, is of the greatest interest at the present time, when the eyes of the world are turned on the Russian forces, and speculation is rife in regard to the future intentions of Russia. Mr. Alexinsky, whose previous work, "Modern Russia," showed how intimate was his knowledge of our great Ally, is an ex-Deputy to the Duma and a revolutionary exile. He is, however, an ardent patriot, and his hopes of the future of democracy in Russia after the War are high. His new book describes what the foreign policy of Russia has been since the Russo-Japanese War, deals with the struggle between Russia and Austria over the Balkans, the efforts of Germany to make Russia a sort of economic colony, the internal life of Russia before the War, and the people of Russia when confronted with the War. It explains why the Russian soldier has fought better against Germany and Austria than against the Japanese, gives an estimate of the probable results of the War in Russia, and sketches out the probable future relations—not only of Russia and England, but of Russia and Europe at large.

A hearty welcome is sure to be accorded wherever it is seen to a new and cheaper edition (very neat in navy-blue cloth, at 1s. net) of "War Songs," selected by Christopher Stone, with an introduction by General Sir Ian Hamilton. The despatches of our splendid British Commander in the Dardanelles have been read with pride by millions in all parts of the Empire; and his name and his delightful account of soldiers' songs, and what the soldier really likes to sing, lend great additional interest to Mr. Stone's judicious selection of old favourites.

Mr. Murray is publishing at once the shilling edition of Mr. Vachell's novel "Quinney's," a human story which already has endeared itself to many thousands of readers and play-goers.

Reality is the note of the times. This truth is illustrated by the success of Mr. A. F. Graves' soldier-poem "The Long Retreat." Although published but a fortnight ago a third impression has already been put in hand. Even doggerel may have its day—when it is built of experience and sincerity as is this little book, which Mr. Murray publishes.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's list already includes over forty books connected with the War—which are included in a pamphlet entitled "Literature on the War."

Richard Marsh's new story, entitled "Love in Fetters," to be published immediately by the House of Cassell, concerns itself with the amazing happenings of an Englishman at the hands of a French adventurer, and is located in a French chateau.

We regret to see from the Publishers' Weekly that "the most popular book or pamphlet in Spain dealing with the War, according to the Spanish booksellers' records, has been George Bernard Shaw's 'Common-Sense About the War.' In its Spanish version it has sold better throughout Spain than any other publication which the War has brought to light."

Why does the Poetry Review, edited by Stephen Phillips, come out in such a dull, sombre, dirty Prussian blue cover? For only about six months of London daylight is it possible to read the print on it. Poets are indispensable—districts which true poets have dwelt in are hallowed for ever. Sun, moon and stars, earth, sky and nature all take on new values and aspects when we look at them through the poet's eyes. For this reason, we wish well to any effort to secure, as Matthew Arnold said, "a clearer, deeper sense of the best in poetry and of the strength and joy to be drawn from it"—which is the object of the Poetry Society and of its organ, the Poetry Review, published by Mr. Erskine Macdonald, 16, Featherstone Buildings, London. Poets would not be poets if they were practical, so we are unable to tell from any information we can find in it whether it appears monthly, quarterly, or only when the spirit moves it; nor can we tell whether it is supplied to the public, or the price; still, the full membership fee includes a copy of the journal and the annual subscription is only 7s. 6d. with 2s. 6d. entrance fee. If the Society has no agent in America, may we suggest the Thomas Y. Crowell Company. We see they advertise themselves as "Headquarters for Poets." The August number, in spite of the War, is enlarged to 128 pages; but this is mainly due to more than half of it being taken up by a terrible poetic play, "Ivan the Terrible," by Horace Priestley; seventy pages of blank verse, and seventy minor poets, all wanting to know the reason why their poems are pigeon-holed.

Mr. T. Fisher Unwin will bring out on July 19th a shilling book of "War Cartoons," by Mr. D. H. Souter, an Australian artist. Mr. Souter's cartoons have been a feature of the Stock and Station Journal (Sydney) since the beginning of the War, and have excited widespread interest in Australia. They are of interest, not only from an artistic point of view, but as showing the attitude of Australians towards the War.

A shilling book entitled "All about the German Navy," by Fred T. Jane, has just been published by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd. It contains maps showing German arsenals, Cuxhaven, Keil and Wilhelmshaven districts, flags and uniforms.

Messrs. Nelson have added to their "Collection Nelson" of standard French writers "Poésies" of Alfred de Vigny, 373 pages in a charming cloth binding, delicately printed in gold and colours. The price is only 1s. here, 1.25 fr. abroad. This "Collection" must be a great success, for already over 70 volumes have appeared in it. Another new volume in the same series is "La Comtesse Pauline de Beaumont," by A. Bardoux. This is published by Messrs. Nelson and Messrs. Calmann-Levy. It comprises nearly 400 pages. Another Nelson book, most timely, most acceptable, is "The Pleasant Land of France," by R. E. Prothero, the land on which and for which French blood is being poured every hour of every day—and British blood also. In this country for 10d. Messrs. Nelson offer you the "Lettres Persanes" and "Grandeur et Décadence des Romains," &c., by Montesquieu. The volume comprises over 540 pages of good paper and print in cloth. Messrs. Nelson do give good value for money.

Messrs. Cassell are inaugurating a new series of Two Shilling Net Novels, and they commenced the re-issue in the ever-popular format by the publication of "The Yellow God," by H. Rider Haggard. In this story he takes us to the heart of Darkest Africa, where "the land of gold" is re-discovered by the hero. Asika ranks with Ayesha for her combination of peerless beauty and inhuman cruelty.

A series of handy books at a popular price narrating in vigorous style the glorious deeds of Britain's fighting regiments should prove invaluable as a stimulus to recruiting. Messrs. Charles P. Sisley Ltd., of 35, Craven Street, W.C., who have had in preparation for some months "The Stories of our Regiments" evidently think so. All the best known regiments will in time be included in the series, which are to be produced at a popular price, and the first four titles will be the Grenadiers, the Black Watch, the Buffs and the Northumberland Fusiliers.

"Easy Turkish for our Men Abroad and How to Pronounce It," by A. Raffi, is a 6d. net booklet which will be of great use to our men who are doing such tremendous fighting in the East. It is published by Messrs. Kegan Paul.

If you do not see the Review of Reviews as a rule, see it as an exception. Get the July, 1915, number to see the reproductions of German illustrated spite against this country and Italy, especially the picture of Judas Italiano betraying his country—according to Lustige Blätter of Berlin—to Sir Edward Grey (pictured as Caiaphas the High Priest) for 30 million pieces of silver. Sir Edward is supposed not to waste smiles, except when a trout or salmon breaks him, but he is less human than we believe him to be if he does not smile at this picture and some others. We have never denied to the German a certain sense of humour, often of a Rabelaisian touch, e.g., Ulk's clever picture of Pan-Germany saying to Italy, "Do you also want to get a bloody nose?"

Most subjects of King George V must have felt as Mr. T. A. Cook says in his most interesting little work on "Kultur and Catastrophe," just published by Mr. Murray: "In spite of everything, I am glad to have been alive when England answered the call of honour, and every Englishman of fighting age was either working for his country or marching with her colours." But why does Mr. Cook refer to our whole complex conglomerate Empire as though it were all England and every man an Englishman? Is Botha an Englishman? Personally, being English-born, we should naturally be quite satisfied that our particular national name should cover Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Canadians, Australasians, Indians, South Africans. All the same, it is short-sighted policy and creates irritation, far more than appears on the surface. We have heard Canadian soldiers—and some, too, who were born in England—strongly resent the use of "English" and "England" to cover things British. At the beginning of the War our great London journals began by referring to great English victories and British retreats, but the protests they got astonished them, and now one rarely sees this mistake made. Some people of English birth get quite angry when it is pointed out to them that, while absolutely loyal and patriotic in the largest sense, our Scottish, Welsh, Irish, and other fellow-subjects do not prefer to be called English; some of them even feel that it is a sort of judgment on us that the Huns only want their "Gott" to "strafe England." Mr. Cook has much to say on this German hate, and says it most effectively. We wonder what he thinks of our War Office allowing the sons of German haters of England getting commissions in our Army and Navy, in some cases under names which have an English, or rather British, sound, but which cover true German hearts. We can understand why such men try to get into our Army and Navy, but we cannot understand why we permit them to do so.

The Rev. J. Stuart Holden, M.A., has been appointed Editor of The Christian, and has already taken up his duties. The Christian is one of the oldest existing religious journals, having been founded over 54 years ago. Its directors include Mr. George E. Morgan, M.A., chairman; Dr. F. B. Meyer, Pastor D. J. Findlay, Mr. G. Wilson Heath, F.R.G.S., and Mr. S. Cope Morgan, B.A. The last-named director is serving at present as a Captain in the South Wales Borderers, and represents the third generation in the firm of Morgan & Scott, Ltd., being a grandson of the founder, the late Mr. R. Cope Morgan. The Christian has as widely scattered a constituency of readers as any journal in the world. Hundreds of thousands of pounds have been entrusted to it by readers for various societies. Its note in war-time is one of Christian confidence.

"The Forest of Swords," by Joseph A. Altscheler, author of "The Guns of Europe," was published by D. Appleton & Company on the 15th inst.

Messrs. W. & A. K. Johnson have brought out a War Map of Belgium and North-East France, showing main roads and railways, on a scale of nine miles to the inch, printed in colours. It delineates a bit of the earth which is for ever hallowed in British history, and where we all seem to feel that tremendous events are casting their shadows before them.

Messrs. Gale & Polden, Ltd., of 2, Amen Corner, have just published "Marching Terms and Evolutions," by Herbert E. Naylor, with over 80 diagrams. It appears to be intended chiefly for the use of gymnastic teachers, but if their marching terms are not the same as those used in the Army, then it is only another specimen of the way we muddle through, and of how things taught have to be unlearned very often.

"Rank at a Glance in the Army and Navy," just published by Messrs. George Philip & Son, Ltd., gives in colour illustrations of over 300 badges, &c., used in our Army and Navy to eye-mark the different units. With this book and a first-class memory and good eyesight you may be able to tell "Rank at a Glance."

The July No. of The Studio keeps up the reputation of that fine illustrated magazine of fine and applied art—even in these rough times for all but the art of war. Among the contents may be mentioned an article by D. Croal on "The Paris Salon of Fifty Years Ago," with twenty-two illustrations, including reproductions of the work of men who have since become world-famous, e.g., J. F. Millet, Meissonier, and Corot. Then there are ten pictures, or rather reflections of them, from the Spring Exhibition of the International Society—one in colour. French art is largely represented in this issue of our finest art publication.

National Book Trade Provident Society

Excellent Effect of The Odd Volume The N.B.T.P.S. and the War Loan

A MEETING of the Committee of Management of the above society was held in the Registered Offices of the Society at 6.30 p.m., on July 8th, 1915.

Eleven applications for membership in the Insurance Division were approved, and one in the General Division.

The Secretary reported receipt of donations as follows: Messrs. Methuen & Co., £21; Messrs. Mylechreest, £1 rs.

A letter was read from the honorary solicitor to the Society stating that there would be paid to the Society shortly the first instalment of the legacy which had been left to the Society by reason of the pleasure the testator had derived from the Odd Volume. This first instalment will amount to £300 in cash and £450 in debenture stock in railway and other companies.

The Committee decided to invest a further £500 in the new War Loan and to exercise the option of converting the £500 in the old War Loan already held by the Society.

The Book Trade and the War

MESSRS. COMBRIDGES, of Hove, are keeping places open for the seven members of their staff serving in the Army. Every assistant of military age in their employment who has not joined the Colours has a medical certificate of exemption. They are proud to record these facts.

Lord Curzon's Translations of War and other Poems sold in aid of the Belgian Relief Fund

A GOODLY little volume, gotten up (as our American friends say) with Mr. John Lane's accustomed good taste, is "War Poems and other Translations" by Lord Curzon of Kedleston. All the profit arising from its sale—and we hope it will be great—is to go to the Belgian Relief Fund. In fact, the book, not the translations, owes its existence to the fact that Lord Curzon had contributed to the Observer translations of "some of the beautiful and touching poems on the European War and the sufferings of his country" which the Belgian poet, M. Emile Cammaerts, had published in that paper. Not always can one endorse the pleas of friends put forward by authors as an excuse for publication, but in this case we believe the general verdict will be one of full approval. Lord Curzon has the very rare gift of being able to translate not only the words, but also the poetry of the original, and we thank him for having added "several other translations which have at different times lent distraction to my leisure hours."

It is all the more pleasing to find in each case the original as well as the translation, so that on one page we have the original verses—Greek, Latin, French, &c.—and opposite Lord Curzon's rendering. In some instances the original is prose; in fact, the whole book makes one refuse to believe that the author is content to transmute other people's ideas into another language. This charming little volume will, we hope, be over-matched some day by one giving us the author's original verse.

A military work which Booksellers should note

WE have received from the office, 241, West 37th Street, New York City, No. 1 of Vol. I of the new review entitled International Military Digest, a monthly review of the current literature of military science, also in quarterly and annual cumulation. The editors-in-chief are Colonel C. de W. Wilcox and Lt.-Col. E. R. Stuart, both Professors at the U.S. Military Academy, with a staff of seventeen associate editors, all American Army officers and the editorial offices are at West Point, N.Y. The subscription price is $5 per year, including the quarterly and annual cumulations. In America the word military is used to include naval warfare much more than in this country, and although all the editors belong to the Army, we see that naval operations are mentioned but very inadequately. For instance, all we find under Falkland Islands is a short statement from a German service paper to the effect that in the naval engagement there we had a three to one superiority over the Germans, whereas when they beat us off Coronel "the opposing sides were about equal in strength." If this is a specimen of the reliability of this Digest it will soon torpedo itself. The names Krueger, Gruber, Sohlberg among the editors do not inspire confidence in impartial digestion. It is true an editorial note informs us that the digests are merely condensed statements of the original articles, and that any editorial comment is enclosed in brackets," but this does not excuse the publication of palpably false statements without comment. We had expected great things of this American commentary on the War, which tells us that it aims at becoming a current cyclopædia of military science.

Perhaps we are making too much of this startling statement, and it may be set right in subsequent issues. We hope so, as on the whole the work strikes us as being well done and of the greatest interest. It is not pleasant to read the opinion of E. C. Crossman in the Scientific American that the Germans have the best rifle and the British the worst. The initial velocities are given as approximately 2,900 for the German latest type of Mauser, used also in Austria and Japan; 2,400 for the English rifle used by the regulars and France; and 2,000 for the rifles supplied to English Territorials and to the Russian Army. This digest is a work our Army officers cannot afford to ignore.

A deaf America

A BOOK of great interest at the present time is Hudson Maxim's "Defenseless America," which Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton have just published.

The author takes a very pessimistic view of American unpreparedness for war. He says: "The eloquent words of wisdom of Lord Roberts, Admiral Mahan, Homer Lea, and all real friends of peace and advocates of the only way of maintaining peace—by being prepared against war—have fallen on a deaf America."

Sales

MESSRS. SOTHEY have recently sold the following books and manuscripts, the property of George A. Gutch, deceased, Mrs. H. Miller, deceased, &c. :—

A Collection of Manuscripts of Poems by Authors of the 17th century in a contemporary hand, £25; R. L. Stevenson's Works, Edinburgh edition, 33 vols., 1894-'03, £39; Kipling's Works, 28 vols., 1897-8, £20; Chaucer's Works, Kelmscott Press edition, 1896, £46; Tennyson's Ballads and other Poems, 1880, proof copy with auto. corrections by the author, £79; W. Morris' "Love is Enough," printed on vellum, in an embroidered cover by Miss May Morris, £29; Annals of Sporting and Fancy Subjects, 13 vols., 1822-8, £24 10s.; Piranesi Vedute di Roma, 2 vols., c. 1779, £26 10s.; Houghton's Gallery, 2 vols., 1788, £33; Lawrance's Collection of Roses from Nature, 1799, £48.

The following papers of George, Earl Macartney, 1737-1806, were the property of C. G. Macartney, Esq.: Papers relating to Russia, £31; to India, £30; to Macartney's Mission to China, 1792-4, £39; to Irish Affairs, 1769-71, £26; and a large number relating to the Cape of Good Hope, £114 10s.

Regimental histories and "Scotland for Ever!"

As a rule regimental histories are semi-private publications, and the existing ones are practically all out of print. Expensively got up and issued at a high price they did not cater for our friend "the man in the street." Perhaps, also, the story told had too much of the flavour of a dry chronicle. It required some of the dash of our older war correspondents. Messrs. Dent have bravely stepped into the breach with their "Story of the Regiments" in the Wayfarer's Library, and "The Black Watch," by Cope Cornford and F. W. Walker is an excellent start to this new series.

Another first-rate little book just published by Maclehose at 1s. is "The Story of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders," by J. H. Stevenson. Here we have attractively written books on two popular regiments, and issued at a cheap price, and the bookseller hoped there would be a large demand for them. But no! the sale is decidedly slow, and he wonders what the fate will be of the more ambitious series which Mr. Lawrence Weaver is preparing for the proprietors of Country Life.

"Scotland for Ever" being a record of the Scottish Regiments, is meeting with a much better reception. Here we have a happy combination of an adequate history of the achievements of the various regiments, and vivid selections from Napier, Archibald Forbes and other members of the daring brotherhood. This, coupled with reproductions in colours of famous battle pictures and the interest in the Scottish Branch of the British Red Cross Society, to whose funds the profits go, no doubt account for its popularity. The statement from Parry's "Victoria Cross" that at Dargai

"Piper Milne was shot in the bagpipes," though quite correct, reminds us of another statement involving the Highlander's anatomy made by an Irish gentleman, who declared that as brave a heart beat under an Irish tunic as under a Highland philabeg.

Mrs. Creed believes in the Old Country

MRS. CREED, the author of "An Australian Girl in London," who is known under the pseudonym of Louise Mack, sailed recently on the s.s. Malwa for Australia, where she has gone to fulfil an engagement to lecture all over the country. She left with her publisher, Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, a manuscript of her experiences, which he will publish almost immediately under the title of "A Woman's Experiences in the Great War." She writes as follows to Mr. Unwin from Malta:—"We are in the Mediterranean now, near Malta. Very exciting time in the Channel, but the Admiralty granted us an escort, and we had a destroyer on each side of us almost into the Bay of Biscay. It was very comforting to have their protection. They steamed along at either side of us, about a quarter of a mile distant, and the submarines that were waiting for us let us alone so far. To realise what England has been doing on the seas you really need to come a trip like this round the world. It is brought home to you when you see these great ships carrying passengers, mails, troops, with the utmost sang froid all over the seas."

Experts on Rifles

"RIFLES and Ammunition, and Practical Rifle Shooting," a new volume by Lieut. H. Ommundsen and Ernest H. Robinson, is announced for publication next week by the House of Cassell. Lieut. Ommundsen, who is probably the best service rifle shot in the Empire, is now "somewhere near the firing line." Ommundsen has won the Service Rifle Championship Aggregate five times, the Gold Cross of the Grand Aggregate, and is a King's Prize Winner. Robinson, his co-author, was a member of the English VIII which shot in the Classic Elcho Shield Match in 1913 and 1914, and is a winner of the Hopton Cup and Match Rifle Champion. It is a rare thing for rifle shots of such standing to combine in a work of this character, but the combination of experts lead us to expect the fullest and most authoritative work on the subject. The first part of the volume will treat of the beginnings of the rifle as a sporting and then as a war weapon, and its evolution will be fully traced. Chapters dealing in a critical way with modern military rifles and ammunition will be included. The second part will be devoted to the practical side of rifle shooting on the range, in the field and in war. A most exhaustive set of photographic illustrations will be incorporated in "Rifles and Ammunition."

We hope that an American correspondent of The Scientific American is wrong in his statement that our army has the worst and Germany the best service rifle.

The New English-French Conversational Dictionary

MR. RICHARD JASCHKE, of 75, Charing Cross Road, has brought out a second edition of his excellent little French-English Conversational Dictionary, with very considerable improvements. This new dictionary is a combination of the dictionary proper and the phrase book. As a dictionary it supplies a carefully-selected vocabulary of serviceable words; as a conversation book it introduces—under key-words such as bill of fare, bookseller, dressmaker, hospital, hotel, lawn tennis, letters, millinery, motor-bus, music, post office, railway, servant, shop, telephone, theatre—useful phrases and information of a varied nature. It numbers 712 pages, is beautifully printed by Messrs. T. & A. Constable (who, for that matter, always do print beautifully), and at 2s. 6d. it is a little wonder for the money. Mr. Jaschke has also, uniform with it, English-German, English-Spanish, English-Italian, and English-Arabic dictionaries on the same conversational lines.

Nelson, Norfolk and Norwich

MR. GEO. A. STEPHEN, F.L.A., librarian of the ancient city of Norwich, has just brought out, through the Public Library Committee, a catalogue of the books, pamphlets, articles, and engravings relating to Nelson in the Norwich Public Library. Apparently it is No. 1 of similar brochures dealing with Norfolk celebrities. In a prefatory note Mr. Stephen tells us that Lord Nelson is "Norfolk's most illustrious seaman"—yes, and England's and Britain's and the world's. He quotes Tennyson's lines as follows:—

"Thine island loves thee well, though famous man,
The greatest sailor since the world began,"
and we were going to put "sic" after "though"—but doubtless it has had that effect already on Mr. Stephen, if not on his printer. This very useful brochure catalogues 218 books, 39 pamphlets, 81 articles, and 31 prints. By permission of Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co. the fine and most pleasing portrait of Nelson in 1798, from Mahan's "Nelson," is given as a frontispiece. What would Nelson have thought of war as carried on by aquatic vermin and aerial baby-killers?

FIGHTING in the air doesn't necessarily raise the plane of modern warfare.—Wall Street Journal.

UNPREPAREDNESS may be defined as a system for making two dollars do the work of one.—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Bryan's successive statements make it increasingly evident that he resigned in a fit of passionate admiration for Mr. Wilson.—New York Evening Post.

Though an advocate of peace, Bryan seems singularly unable to hold his own.—Philadelphia North American.

Another "strictly neutral" newspaper is announced. It is to be conducted by Messrs. Schweitzer, Kipper, Weiss, & Stoehr.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Some newspapers are still demanding the cessation of the German submarine warfare, but the United States has asked only that the submarines confine their activities to warfare.—Philadelphia North American.

Trade Notes

MESSRS. COMBRIDGES, of 56, Church Road, Hove, inform us that they have taken additional premises at 70, Church Road, Hove, and propose to transfer to that address their second-hand and antiquarian book department.

THE stationery, fancy goods and printing business at 148, Stroud Green Road, which for many years has been successfully carried on by Messrs. E. & S. Butler, and latterly by the late S. Butler, has been acquired by Mr. E. W. Sproll. The valuation between the parties was conducted by Messrs. F. T. Evans & Co., Trade Valuers, 8, Paternoster Row, E.C.

MR. W. SEVIOUR, well known in the book trade, who was with Messrs. W. Collins & Co., has joined Messrs. Jno. F. Shaw & Co., Pilgrim Street. His numerous friends will wish him all success in his new sphere.

"T.P.'S JOURNAL OF GREAT DEEDS," edited by T. P. O'Connor, will, in future, appear monthly instead of weekly.

Letters to the Editor

The sex of Queen Elizabeth

DEAR SIR,—We have had an inquiry for one of Mr. Bram Stoker's novels which contains a query as to the sex of Queen Elizabeth. Can you help us? Thanking you in anticipation, we beg to remain, yours faithfully,

W. & G. FOYLE (per W. A. Foyle).
121-123, Charing Cross Road,
July 10th

[Are Messrs. Foyle trying to pull our leg—or Queen Elizabeth's? Queen Bess could kick like "Lizzie," and it's a good thing for Messrs. Foyle that she is not on the throne still.—ED.]

How an old Bookseller spends his holiday

SIR,—I am venturing to send you, under separate cover, a copy of a poster, in order that you may see how a bookseller spends his holidays. I have now sported the pennon of the Caravan Club (28, Charing Cross Road) in seventeen counties, and my wife, family, and self have met everywhere with warm welcomes and hearty au revoirs. My connection with the profession dates back forty years, and, like the old soap-boiler of the fable, although I am a retired bookseller, I like "to sniff the boilings." Only to-day I was called upon to value a small private library of 700 odd vols.

Apologising for this bookseller's Apologia pro vita sua, I remain, Yours faithfully,

WM. ROGER JONES.

Caravan "Dormouse," Rowlands Castle, Hants,
July 6th.

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Priests and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

Publishers' Circular

The Book of France*

UNDOUBTEDLY "The Book of France" owes much of its success as well as much of its intrinsic value to the fact that its publishers are Messrs. Macmillan, and that Sir Frederick Macmillan is a member of the Committee. The presence of contributions by Hardy and Kipling—the best known names in it—may be safely credited to Sir Frederick's influence. The Editor has also to acknowledge the generosity of Messrs. Macmillan in handing over all profit for "the relief of French sufferers from German barbarity."

We hope our book trade will help France by helping its sale all they can.

There are many interesting contributions. A little essay on Great Britain by T. H. Rosny Aîné, translated by Thomas Hardy (we have the French first and then the English), ends as follows:—

... But the Allies will not be conquered. Heroic France has returned. England, the undaunted, out of her soil has miraculously caused armies to spring. Russia stands ready for gigantic battle.

Once again England shall be happy England. From this terrific ordeal she will come forth greater, fairer, more beloved.

The contribution we like best is that entitled "The Background of a Victory" (translation), by Madame Mary Duclaux. But how could a translation have such delightful bits of local war colour as these two extracts?—

It was the next day, I think, that at the street corner I saw an English soldier kneeling by the kerbstone, mending his bike. He looked up at me with such understanding, friendly eyes that I stopped and spoke to him.

"Are we getting the best of it?" said I. "Is there much danger?"

"Well, Miss," said he, "it's like this: The place is full up with Generals; and I don't know how it is, but I've always noticed where there's so many Generals there's not much danger!"

I went home comforted.

But the next morning (Sunday, September 6th, 1914) I woke to the muffled roar of distant cannon—the battle was at Coulommiers, at La

* "The Book of France," in aid of the French Parliamentary Committee's Fund for the Relief of the Invaded Departments. Edited by Winifred Stephens. Published under the auspices of an honorary committee presided over by his Excellency Monsieur Paul Cambon. Macmillan & Co., Ltd., London; Edouard Champion, Paris. 1915.

Ferté, at Provins, more than twenty miles away, but along these rolling plains the sound reverberated uninterruptedly. Throb, thud, plop; the dismal sound seemed to echo in one's heart—it was the encounter doubtless which would decide the fate of Paris. I went out into the road and saw there a douce, demure young Highlander taking his Sunday afternoon's walk as quietly as if he had been in Glasgow.

"How are things going?" said I. "Do you think the Germans are coming?"

"I've been hearing, Matam, that the Chermans will have been hating a pit of a set-back," said he.

And it was in this modest manner that I heard of the victory of the Marne.

If this is a translation from the French, did that young Highlander translate his own idiom?—for we'll be hanged if any Frenchwoman who didn't understand English could understand Scotch! Surely Mary Duclaux has modestly and charmingly translated no other body but her main sel.

Sir John French and his Boys in Melun last September

Is not this a charming bit?

On Wednesday, September 2nd, 1914, the maid who brought my breakfast informed me that the English had arrived in the night. The Staff was there with Sir John French; the aviation camp was already being set out some half a mile beyond the town gates, and the British troops were to be seen in the streets, alert, nimble, brisk, lively, clean and bright, as though they were not still, as it were, singed by the hell-fire of Charleroi and broken by the fatigues of the retreat from Mons. The very sight and sound of them was a tonic. In the twinkling of an eye the reputation of their race was changed: "The English love a laugh!" said the good people of Melun.

Of course, in the great French fortnightly, the Revue des deux Mondes, there have been articles on the War in every number since it broke out, and it has been a very great pleasure to find many references to the good qualities of our fighting men in France. As Mary Duclaux says, the reputation of our race has changed; after a thousand years of supposing that we are triste, morne, that we even take our pleasures sadly, the French, to their astonishment, find our men as this writer so well describes them in the passage quoted above. We have read many similar passages in the Revue written by Frenchmen for Frenchmen, and evidently spontaneous, not mere compliment.

Notes and Announcements

THE Right Hon. Mr. Herbert Samuel, who, as President of the Local Government Board, was closely interested in the social conditions of maternity among the poor, contributes a preface to a volume of letters written by working women to be published immediately by Messrs. Bell under the title of "Maternity." The book is the outcome of an extensive enquiry carried out by the Women's Co-operative Guild, and the letters form an impressive indication of the urgency of the problem.

"Sicilian Studies," a volume of essays and stories by the Hon. Alexander Nelson Hood, is announced by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin. Mr. Nelson Hood, who is Treasurer to Her Majesty the Queen, is a great authority on Sicily. He holds the family estates in Sicily with the title of the Duke of Bronte, which was conferred on Lord Nelson by the King of Naples after the Battle of the Nile.

Dr. Haydn Brown, whose new book, "The Secret of Human Power," is announced by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., is a well-known specialist on mental diseases.

In Göncharov's famous novel "Oblo-mov," the author has created a type which is said to have taken a place in Russian literature as firmly as that taken by Pecksniff in English literature and Tartuffe in the literature of France. The work has been translated from the Russian by Mr. C. J. Hogarth for an English edition, which Messrs. George Allen & Unwin will publish shortly.

Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. are publishing immediately a new volume in their A B C Series, entitled the "A B C of Heraldry," by Guy Cadogan Rothery. This book traces the evolution of heraldry from its origin in ancient tribal totemism to the present day. The work is illustrated with coloured plates and over 274 illustrations in line and half-tone.

Italy in the Middle Ages, when there was war between Pope and Emperor, is the scene of Hamilton Drummond's new story, "Greater than the Greatest," a thrilling narrative of love and adventure, in which the interest never flags. Stanley Paul & Co. are the publishers.

A new novel by Phoebe Gray, entitled "Little Sir Galahad," will be published shortly by Stanley Paul & Co.

"It Happened in Egypt," by Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Williamson, is a story for those who travel in Egypt and for home-dwellers too, told in the popular manner of those authors. It is to be issued by Messrs. Methuen.

"We feel that almost at any moment Cathedrals may be called upon to justify their existence, and the decree may go forth 'Cut it down, why cumbereth it the ground?'" So writes the Rev. W. C. G. Newbolt, M.A., in "The Living Power of a Cathedral," which has just been published by Messrs. A. R. Mowbray & Co., Ltd. The object of the little book is to make out as good a case as possible for the continued existence of the Cathedral. It came with rather a shock to us to find a pillar of the Church talking as though it were common talk among all the pillars that there might be an earthquake "at any moment." But the actual buildings need have no fear; they have justified their existence and become national heritages; the human tenants are those to fear the earthquake, if anybody; certainly at any time the alternative form of the vox Dei may call them to account, especially in the time of readjustments after this War. Probably that is the time which the author, who is a Canon and Chancellor of St. Paul's, has in mind. Canon Newbolt is earnestly and refreshingly outspoken, e.g., page 54: "It becomes a fixed custom, reaching down to the humblest official, that no one will attend the Cathedral unless he is obliged to; and that voluntary attendance is passimi exempli and unnecessary." No wonder we hear of great cracks appearing in St. Paul's.

A delightful book to have a pipe over—or even a cigar—is "The Pleasant Land of France," by R. E. Prothero. A pocket edition of it at 1s. net has just been published by Messrs. Nelson, and we heartily join in Mr. Punch's pæan of praise. By the way, it is pleasant to think that Mr. Punch is still Mr. Punch—he has never been knighted, tho' he has helped to knight so many. But there is no dignity equal to gracing him properly: he prefers to remain the greatest commoner:—

"You know the France that men call gay,
The 'Entente Cordiale' France you know;
You've witnessed (from the train) the way
Her far-flung fields and orchards blow.
But would you fan to flame the glow
Born of this scanty passing glance?
Go, then, to Mr. Prothero—
His book, 'The Pleasant Land of France.'"

We have heard so much about French thrift, especially in what is called intensive culture of the land, that we could hardly believe the statement on page 64 that in France "the average yield of wheat per acre is only half that of England." But Mr. Prothero evidently writes of what he knows.

Mr. G. D. H. Cole, whose recent study of "The World of Labour" attracted much attention, has just completed a book on "Labour and the War," which Messrs. Bell will publish immediately. In it he surveys the Labour attitude to war in general. There has been a widespread demand for a cheaper edition of "The World of Labour," and Messrs. Bell have, therefore, arranged to re-issue the book in popular style shortly.

Mr. Russell Markland has collated an anthology of poems on Belgium, which Mr. Erskine MacDonald is about to publish under the title of "The Glory of Belgium: A Tribute and a Chronicle," in aid of the Belgian Repatriation Fund, in explanation of which Mons. Emile Cammaerts supplies a special introduction. The contributors include: Laurence Binyon, John Drinkwater, A. P. Graves, Wilfrid Blair, Coulson Kernahan, G. K. Chesterton, Mary F. Robinson, Stephen Phillips, F. W. Bourdillon, the Marquess of Crewe, William Archer, W. J. Courthope, William Watson, W. G. Hole, Gertrude Ford, F. Langbridge, and many others.

Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Sons, Ltd. have just published the best and cheapest photogravure portraits of the Royal Family that we have seen. The full size of the plate is 25 × 20; and of the engraved work, 15 × 9. The retail price is 1s. net (plain photogravure); and 2s. 6d. net, hand-coloured. The Royal Family have all so endeared themselves to the whole nation and Empire that it is very gratifying to have such charming portraits of them in permanent photogravure; there are two of His Majesty the King—one in naval and one in military uniform; one of Her Majesty the Queen; one of the Prince of Wales; one of Prince Albert; and one of Princess Mary. When we look at them, we think of the many thousands of men of all races who have felt, in meeting death, that they were fighting for sovereigns and an Empire worthy of the sacrifice.

War book exhibition

AN exhibition of books, pamphlets, maps, prints, &c., connected with the War will be a prominent feature of the Annual Conference of the Library Association to be held at Caxton Hall during the week beginning the 30th August. The Conference this year is to be entirely of a business character, and to be devoted to papers and discussions on certain topics of library administration, the report of the Carnegie Trustees, and the effect of the War on books and libraries. The ordinary exhibition of recent publications connected with the Association's monthly catalogue of Best Books will be held, and the War exhibition will be associated with this. The exhibition will be strictly select, but will cover every aspect of the War and the diplomatic, social, and military questions involved, not excepting historical and descriptive works, the publication of which has been prompted by recent events. It will also, so far as possible, comprise foreign publications. It will be open free to the public on Tuesday, the 31st August. The exhibition will be organised by the general editor of "Best Books," Dr. E. A. Baker, and the editor of the Historical Section, Mr. W. E. Doubleday.

Shore's Book Parlour

WE have frequently and with pleasure reviewed books by Mr. W. Teignmouth Shore, and now we hear that he has added to his activities "Shore's Book Parlour," the new second-hand book store at 21, Sicilian Avenue, Bloomsbury. There he is reviving the old-time and pleasant personal relations between author, bookseller, and book buyer. It is an interesting experiment, and Mr. Shore's business experience should prove invaluable to him.

The future of Notes and Queries

ALL the friends of Notes and Queries will have heard with regret that the very useful and interesting little paper has suffered from the War so severely that its continued existence is threatened. The following extracts are from the frank statement published in the issue of Notes and Queries for July 17th, 1915:—

"THE FUTURE OF 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"

"The volume just begun will close our eleventh series, ushering in the General Index, which makes available, as a record of work done and information found, our correspondence of the last six years. As our readers know, these eleven series cover a period of sixty-six years. The question before us is whether or not this eleventh General Index shall be the last; and, if not the last, whether or not there shall be some diminution in our little paper to correspond with the rather direful pressure of the times.

"The fall is, of course, more than easy to understand. The time, money, and thought of numbers of our readers have new and most urgent claims upon them; and, no doubt, many to whom N. and Q. is still of use, now read it in a library instead of acquiring it for themselves. But it is equally plain that the paper cannot be continued indefinitely at a yearly loss of about £200—even if the deficit go no lower.

"It is, we think, for our readers and correspondents, regular or occasional, to decide whether or no N. and Q. is worth carrying through the War, in the hope of its regaining its normal footing when renewed peace has produced a sufficient effect. If it is not worth while, there is no more to say; if it is, the question arises how the thing is to be done.

"Obviously, the best way all round would be by an increase in the number of direct yearly subscribers, and it seems to us that a more extended support on the part of public libraries and institutes should be one way of getting this increased subscription: Would it be possible for any of our present subscribers to enlist the interest of others—to duplicate their subscription and give the additional copies to a library or institute—or, if they have influence with any library, society or university, to induce this body to subscribe, or to subscribe for more copies? We do not mean that a simple donation towards expenses from a well-wisher would not be gratefully received, but we are sure of the sympathy of our correspondents in our preference for some secure increase of circulation.

"Another way of 'carrying on' would be to reduce the size of the paper. This would, no doubt, be better than bringing it to an end; but it is already a little difficult—for want of space—to do justice to the material we receive, and if our space be yet more restricted, our usefulness would, we believe, be even more than proportionately lessened.

"We are confident that in laying our difficulty before our readers we can count, if not on their power to assist us in these trying times, yet on their assured goodwill."

All his life Mr. John C. Francis has been intimately connected with the book trade; and he and his father before him have times out of number been thanked at trade meetings and in reports for their goodwill towards the book trade, as well as for substantial financial support, extending over more than half-a-century. We are all feeling "the direful pressure of the times," but we feel confident that all who can do so will lend N. and Q. a helping hand. Mr. Francis has doubtless considered, though he does not mention it, the alternatives of fortnightly or monthly issues instead of weekly during the War.

"The Marseillaise" and Rouget de L'Isle

"LE MASQUE DE FER," writing in the Figaro, says: "That fine artist, Alfred B. Bénard, a short time before his death, had written a most valuable history of the author and of the marvellous hymn, 'The Marseillaise'; his granddaughters have conceived the doubly pious idea of publishing the volume in memory of their grandfather and for the benefit of the fraternity of the artists. The book is on sale at the Librairie Fontaine, Rue de Laborde, Paris."

Attempted suppression of "J'Accuse!"

Le Figaro states that all copies of the book "J'Accuse!" have been seized at the kiosks and railway stations in Switzerland by order of the military authorities. A protest has been lodged against this action.

In Holland the first edition of 10,000 copies has been at once exhausted and the sales of the French edition are very great.

The English edition, which Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will issue immediately both here and in America, promises to rival even the famous "Bernhardi" in sales.

Fenimore Cooper at the Front!

A LIBRARY for Italian soldiers is in formation at the Biblioteca di Brera, Milan, whence several thousands of volumes have already been despatched to the Front. The Secolo states: "Gifts of books for our soldiers continue to come in. On July 10th the Biblioteca di Brera had a consignment of an entire edition of 5,000 copies of an Italian translation of Fenimore Cooper's popular romance, 'The Red Rover.' This edition, made at the exclusive cost of Signor Roberto Chiappa, bears in every copy the dedication: 'Roberto Chiappa offers this edition to the integrity and dignity of our country.' The generous and genial effort cannot but be received gratefully by our soldiers, and it is not improbable that it will be imitated by some other Milanese publisher or bookseller. The No. 3 Subcommittee of the Office No. 5 of the Central Committee of Assistance for the War will make, through the Biblioteca di Brera, a large distribution of these copies in the military hospitals of Milan, as well as those of the cities situated within the war zone."

The "Red Rover" was published in 1827.

Literary Notes

(From Life.)

MR. E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, owing to a slight indisposition, has completed but one novel within the past few days.

Mr. Rudyard Kipling is engaged in revising and extending his far-flung battle line to meet the exigencies of the present season.

Mr. Henry James has made excellent progress in the past month with his new novel, having completed the forty-third clause of the first sentence.

Mr. Bernard Shaw, it is understood, proposes to dramatise himself. Mr. Anthony Comstock will be asked to condemn some particular word or phrase to be used as a catch phrase by the heroine.

It is reported on good authority that someone has discovered in the imperial library at Petrograd the manuscript of an early Russian novel which had a happy ending.

Dinner hour closing

(From THE EASTBOURNE GAZETTE, July 21st, 1915.)

"FOLLOWING the very sensible example set by traders in other towns, some of the Eastbourne shopkeepers have decided to close their premises from 1.15 to 2.30 p.m., and in some cases the arrangement came into effect on Monday last. The advantages of this perfectly voluntary scheme must be apparent to everyone. Hitherto many of the tradesmen and their assistants have suffered a great deal of inconvenience and hardship through not being able to dine at the same hour as the other members of their families. The point of view of the customers is that when they go to a place of business they prefer to find the whole staff on duty, as the absence of the head of any department may lead to irritating misunderstanding and delay. Members of the Booksellers', Stationers', and Newsagents' Society decided at their recent business meeting to take the lead in this reform, which has so much to commend it that the only wonder is that it has been so long deferred. It will be, we hope, a source of pleasure to customers to accord their willing and cheerful co-operation. The stationers and newsagents have to work very hard, and they would be saved a great deal of trouble if people would make a point of ordering and paying in advance for all newspapers and periodicals. Many of the shops have lost the services of assistants who are serving in His Majesty's Forces, and this fact has had much to do with bringing about the reform decided upon. The example set by the stationers and booksellers should be widely followed. The time for closing seems to have been wisely chosen. In France the tradesmen seem to have realised long ago the wisdom of dining in comfort, and in the towns on the Riviera the banks close from noon till 2 p.m.

"A Far Country"

By THE AMERICAN WINSTON CHURCHILL

WE, unfortunately, object to being instructed when we want to be amused, and confess we could not get very far into "A Far Country." That clever American serio-humorous weekly, Life, is a good judge of the social and political life of its country, and therefore its notice of Mr. Churchill's new book is probably adequate:—

"The theme of Winston Churchill's 'A Far Country' (Macmillan, $1.50) is the Prodigal-Son-like history of America during the past quarter-century: its impatient casting loose from Victorian restraints; its headlong self-confidence in the pursuit of wealth; its riotous living and moral bankruptcy; the dawning of a chastened sanity; and the character of its present impulses toward return. This theme is developed in the form of an autobiography, supposedly written by a man nearing fifty, a successful corporation lawyer and political opportunist, an instrument played upon by the times. Mr. Churchill is an able and honest student of his times and his country. He is tremendously earnest in his interest. More than any other American writer of fiction of the day, he has earned the right to talk to us seriously about ourselves. And in 'A Far Country' he does so. As a novel—a literary art form—the book is indefensibly discursive and long drawn out. But as a form of fictionalized address, it unflaggingly holds the interest and the attention."

The book notices in Life are crisp and clever, without being too clever.

Information about a Millais drawing and engraving wanted

MR. GILBERT DALZIEL, of "Dalkeith," 107, Fellows Road, N.W., says he will be greatly obliged to any of our readers who can tell him in what publication an engraving appeared made from a drawing by John Everett Millais entitled "St. Agnes' Eve." Mr. Dalziel says:—"The print which I now have before me has evidently been torn from a book; the measurement of the actual paper is 6 in. by 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ in., the picture itself is 4 $\frac{5}{8}$ by nearly 4 in., and there is nothing printed on the back. I incline to the belief that it is a wood-engraving, and the engraver's name to me reads something like 'Ahyer,' but this is by no means distinct. In the right-hand corner of the design Millais' initials 'J. E. M.' are quite clear, and with them the year 1854. The underlines in type read:—

'St. Agnes' Eve

(From a Drawing by J. E. Millais, R.A.)

"Deep on the convent roof the snows

Are sparkling to the moon;

My breath to heaven like vapour goes,

Tennyson: 'St. Agnes' Eve.'

"The design is quite different to Millais' illustration in the 'Moxon' Tennyson, published in 1857, of the same subject, which latter was engraved on wood by the Brothers Dalziel. In some respects I think the earlier design is the finer of the two. In parts it is suggestive of Dante Rossetti, and also of Frederick Sandys. Bearing the year 1854 suggests that the design must have been made before the 'Moxon' design, but as the underline says, 'J. E. Millais, R.A.' the work in which the print in question appeared could not have been published until 1864, or after, as it was only in 1864 that Millais was made a Royal Academician. If any of the readers of your esteemed journal could kindly tell me where the print first appeared and how the drawing came to be made, I should be very grateful. The underline says, "From a drawing by." It does not say "drawn by."

As there appears to be some confusion in regard to the title of Archibald Marshall's new novel, Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. call attention to the fact that the title first used, namely, "The Old Order Changeth," was altered almost on the eve of publication to "Rank and Riches."

Booksellers' Red Cross week

OUR readers will be interested to know that one result of the Booksellers' Red Cross Week recently arranged by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton for the benefit of the Red Cross Society, is the presentation to the Red Cross Society of a £400 motor ambulance.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton are issuing at once a new popular shilling edition of "The Way of the Red Cross," with preface by Queen Alexandra—the publication of which has already produced nearly £1,000 for the Red Cross Fund.

Professor Saintsbury

FOLLOWING the announcement of Professor George Saintsbury's retirement from the Chair of English Literature in the University of Edinburgh, it is interesting to note that he has just delivered to Messrs. Bell the MS. of a volume on the "Augustan" age in English literature, which they will publish early in the autumn.

Letters to the Editor

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.

The real live Bookworm and how to fight him

DEAR SIR,—I should be surprised if Mr. Marchmont's claim to be the only bookseller who has ever observed a specimen of this insect is not disputed, as it indicates a curious state of unobservance in the trade. The bookworm is not the rara avis ("uttering his woodnotes wild;" as Andrew Lang has it) that the scanty references would lead one to infer, and I dare say every librarian, second-hand bookseller, or book auctioneer who has observed the ravages of this pest could fairly easily have verified its existence by examining the volume more closely. Its presence is indicated by dusty powder, and often the end paper lifted from the board by a penknife reveals the marauder.

The question has already been raised in your columns when you reported the capture of "a real right specimen" by Mr. C. D. Raymer, of Minneapolis, but the insect described seemed more like the silver fish insect than the bookworm, as Mr. Edward Step pointed out in your issue of October 15th, 1904.

As a matter of fact, there is no bookworm, but the larva of several insects, mostly Coleoptera, are usually referred to by this term.

The Rev. J. F. X. O'Connor, S.J., of New York, has microscopically examined seventy-two specimens of several insects found in books, of such a character as to be classified under the general name, and allocates them as follows:—

- I. Sitodrepa panicea (larva).
 - II. Attagenus pello (larva).
 - III. Sitodrepa panicea (full-grown insect).
 - IV. Lepisma saccharina.
 - V. Ptinus fur.
 - VI. Dermestes lardarius.
 - VII. Anthrenus varius (larva);
- to which may be added Ptinus dubius,

Hypothenemus eruditus, Celetes eruditus, Psocus domesticus, amabilis, geologus.

The Coleoptera are beetles, which lay eggs in suitable positions and on dusty, neglected books, and, given favourable conditions, these hatch out small weevil-like things called larvæ, which, continuing through their successive changes in life, eventually emerge beetles, and proceed to perpetuate the species. They do most damage to books, all preserved material, wheat and stored grain, leather, &c., when in the larval stage, as they are armed with most powerful biting mandibles (jaws), with which they pierce and tunnel.

O'Connor describes Sitodrepa panicea as the most voracious of these beetles, and others agree that it is the most common library pest. It is a small brown insect, about one-tenth of an inch in size.

The larva is a soft, white, six-legged "worm," about the same size, covered with bristles, which moves very slowly.

Ptinus fur is very common in old books, boring galleries often through large volumes. The larva resembles the above, but is black-headed and no bristles. (Larva and pupa described by De Geer (1753), vol. 4, plate 10.)

The Dermestica and Attagenus megatoma, pelleo, feed chiefly on dry animal matter, leather, fur, plants, collections of moths and butterflies; the larvæ, being unable to bore galleries through paper, are usually responsible for the rougher marks made upon leather covers.

Hypothenemus bore in wooden covers.

Lepisma saccharina (mentioned by Blades) is cone shaped, of a silver grey shade, with three thick tails and two horns, and is often found in the attics of houses about old window casings and loosened wallpaper. It is large enough to be examined by a glass when caught. It does not burrow, and is found among old loose paper only. This silver-scaled insect glides so swiftly it is known as the silver fish.

"One of the best ways of ridding books of the pests is to subject the volumes," says Professor C. V. Riley, of Washington, "to a considerable heat in the baking oven, being careful, however, not to burn the leather brittle. It would be even better to place them in a water-tight box and to sink them in hot water. To prevent attack, use corrosive sublimate in the binder's paste, &c.; see article in 'American Entomologist,' Vol. II, 1870."

Another good remedy is a small uncorked bottle of bisulphide of carbon, which, allowed to evaporate, will kill every living thing, whether in the form of egg, larva, pupa, or imago, but care must be taken, as it is explosive and poisonous when mixed with air.

Camphor, benzine, turpentine, and disinfecting cones made chiefly of naphthalene are also used.

I trust the above information may be of interest to Mr. Marchmont, and for further information would refer him to O'Connor's "Facts about Bookworms," 1898 (Suckling & Co.); U.S. Entomological Commission and Department of Agriculture Reports; Packard's "Guide to Study of Insects," &c.—Yours sincerely, (John Smith & Son (Glas.), Ltd.).

JAMES ANDERSON

Title of book, &c., wanted

DEAR SIR,—Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son, of Liverpool, suggested that I might apply to you, giving such description of the contents as I can, on the off-chance of your being able to recognise the book in question.

It consisted of a number of short stories, the majority being of the "detective" order, and purporting to be written by a railway dining-car attendant, in whose saloon or train many of the incidents were supposed to have occurred, the narrator always co-operating with the police in bringing the wrong-doers to book.

One of the stories was called "The Green Chartreuse," and another something about "The Clacton Supper Train."

Would you also kindly say if two other books, which I understand are now out of print, "The Golden Sceptre," by Gerald H. Thornhill, and "Claud Duval of '95," by Fergus Hume, are to be had either secondhand (or in any other way), and if so, at about what price, and in what condition? Also another called "Diana Marberg, the Oracle of Madox Street," a series of short stories which originally came out, I think, in Pearson's Magazine.—Yours faithfully,

GEORGE MILNE.

The sex of Queen Elizabeth

DEAR MR. MARSTON,—The reference is to a book by the late Bram Stoker, "Famous Impostors," cr. 8vo., cloth gilt. It is not a novel but a series of historical essays. It was "remaindered" a year or so ago by either Messrs. Glaisher, of Holborn, or Mr. John Grant, of Edinburgh and a copy could probably still be obtained from one of these firms, price somewhere round 2s. The impression I had on reading the Elizabethan essay was that the personage in question was at any rate not of the usual feminine type (indeed, history proves this), but was perhaps hermaphroditic.—Yours truly,

J. M. MORTON.

1, Duke Street, Brighton.

[We should have thought that the late Mr. Bram Stoker, who was a charming man, would not have given credence or circulation to those old wives' stories about one who was in many ways the greatest Queen of history: respected and feared abroad, loved at home, Elizabeth was the inspiration of her country and time. It was one of Mrs. Gallup's foolish inventions to try to make her out to be the mother of Bacon and ergo Shakespeare. All the same, if she had been their mother, it could only have added to her glory. We have to thank many correspondents for kindly writing to say that the work Messrs. Foyle want is "Famous Impostors," by Bram Stoker, published by Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson.—ED.]

SIR,—In these blood-curdling times the most of our book cult I am sure enjoyed that piece of editorial daintiness emanating from Mr. W. A. Foyle's query. No doubt by this time some of Mr. B. S.'s readers will have solved the puzzle; then the imperial legs will have vibrated satisfactorily. As supplementary thereto may I say that in society we still possess groups of learned historic pundits who lovingly adore the great Queen, who in a womanly sense at least, loved her distinguished lovers, and who even enthrone the lady as the maternal agent of our great Lord Bacon's personality. The Times some time ago permitted letter exchanges upon this interesting query, and such statements invested motherhood in England with a vivid and general interest. Surely we have in this view a very felicitous exhibition of "leg pulling" in relation to "sex."

Again, despite the nightly vigils of German spy-officers, the latest Admiralty "symbol" of our illustrious Queen was safely conveyed to her destined position in Turkish waters, where the music of her thunderous growls overawed those ancient battlements, which so long had obstructed the genial forces of civilisation. Having thus entered life-work, I understand it is surmised some four or five newly created sisters will soon join her, and hence constitute a daring and formidable family in Britain's mighty sea power. So again Queen Elizabeth's leg has really been pulled in a right way. —Yours, &c.,

The British Service Rifle not the worst but the best

SIR,—By an odd coincidence there appears on the same page of your last week's issue a criticism of the British Service rifle by my friend Mr. E. C. Crossman, the well-known American expert, and a preliminary notice of the book "Rifles and Ammunition," which Mr. Ommundsen and myself have written. You quote Crossman's article in The Scientific American to the effect that he considers the Germans have the best rifle and the British the worst.

Now, Sir, we—that is to say, Mr. Ommundsen and myself—have given a great deal of thought to the writing of a critical survey of modern military rifles, which we think accurately sums up the relative merits of all rifles and small arms of the military powers, and in order to refute Mr. Crossman's contention, may I have leave to quote a few lines from that particular chapter in our book?

"The British habit of subjecting anything British to a severe course of fault-finding has been responsible for the gradual forming of the opinion that the Empire is the worst provided for as regards small arms of any of the Powers. In the year or eighteen months before the outbreak of war, the hint that the War Office was experimenting with a new rifle roused popular interest, and many questions were asked in Parliament and many letters written to newspapers. The burden of most of the Parliamentary answers and most of the letters was that the British Service rifle was bad, the bolt, in any case, was unscientific, and would not stand the high pressures necessary for the high velocities demanded by the most up-to-date practice; the short rifle did not shoot well.

"Then came the outbreak of the Great War, and Britain had to go in with the arms she had—only to find out in a very short time that, instead of being the worst small arm in use, the short Lee-Enfield was the best. Actual war tests proved that a 'weak and unscientific' bolt may have advantages not possessed by stronger action designed on lines which meet the approval of engineers. The bolt action of the British rifle can be worked at very high speed, and this speed is possible without any serious sacrifice of strength or accuracy.

"One of the criticisms against the British Service rifle is that the lugs which lock the bolt against the shock of discharge are placed so far back on the bolt that there are several inches of unsupported metal between the bolt-head and the lugs, and that the slightest irregularity in the seating of the lugs on the resistance shoulder and resistance grooves allows this unsupported metal to play sideways, and causes irregularities in the shooting. The body of the action is also complained about on the score that it is weak. From a mechanical point of view, both these condemnations must be supported by the critic; but a careful engineer who bears in mind how successfully the short Lee-Enfield has borne the severest test any rifle has yet been put to, may be allowed to emphasise the fact that both body and bolt of the British Service rifle are difficult and expensive to machine, and that, in the first instance, complaints as to the lack of scientific design in our rifle have come from manufacturers."

I may add that the German rifle is not without its faults, though the Mauser action itself is a remarkably good one.—Yours truly,

ERNEST H. ROBINSON.

[We are very glad to have this favourable testimony to the good qualities of the rifle our men have to depend on, but Mr. Robinson does not touch on the initial velocity question. Is it true that the German military Mauser has an initial velocity of 2,900 as compared with 2,400 for the rifle used by our Regulars and 2,000 by the rifle of the Territorials? Of course, greater initial velocity is not everything, but it is a big advantage, other things being equal, which perhaps they cannot be.—ED.]

The Poetry Review

SIR,—It is difficult to appreciate the captious spirit of the writer of the note on The Poetry Review in the current issue of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR. He is evidently as little acquainted with your columns as he is with The Poetry Review. You have, on various occasions, been good enough to mention that this year The Poetry Review—formerly a monthly—is being issued as a bi-monthly, and this is known to all in the trade, and is an arrangement that has worked very well. The current number is labelled, not August only, as your contributor suggests, but "July-August," and very conspicuously at the foot of the front cover appears the price, 1s. net, and Messrs. W. H. Smith, the Times Book Club, Mr. Denny, Messrs. Bumpus, Messrs. Hatchard, Mr. Glover, and, in fact, all the leading booksellers in London and the provinces would be able to tell him that they supply it to the public at this price. Why, oh why, dear PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, be so wilfully ignorant on a matter of common knowledge, and why represent The Poetry Review as being a magazine of and for minor poets? It deals now and has done for the last six years, with poetry and the uses and appreciation of it.—Yours faithfully,

ERSKINE MACDONALD, Publisher.

[We must not put the blame on any of our reviewers. It was a dark, thundery day when we noticed The Poetry Review; in full sunshine we must admit that one can read the larger type on the dirty, dark blue cover—there ought to be a law against the use of such papers for printing on—all very well for poets on Parnassus basking in the sunshine, but for dingy London offices they are unfair handicaps to eyesight. Yes, in full sunshine we admit you can find that the price is "One Shilling Net," also that on the left-hand top corner of the front page is the word "July," and on the opposite corner the word "August." The words are not put together, "July-August," and if you see August on a magazine you do not look further as a rule. An advertisement of the Review on the back of its own latest issue refers only to "monthly" parts. We cannot be expected to remember the hundreds of free advertisements we give to publishers; it is bad enough to have to give them in these hard times, without having to remember them; besides, if we have published a statement from Mr. Erskine Macdonald to the effect that The Poetry Review is now a "Bi-monthly" we should have been uncertain if it appeared twice a month or once in two months. "The Concise Oxford Dictionary," based on "The Oxford Dictionary," refers to the ambiguity attached to the use of the French-Latin prefix "Bi," and instances "Bi-monthly" as something appearing twice in a month. Probably most people use it and read it as meaning once in two months, but it will be seen we have good authority for our view, i.e., that it is an ambiguous term. We do not object to Mr. Macdonald advertising the names of the well-known firms which sell his review, because poetry wants all the help it can get. As for Mr. Macdonald's charge that we have represented The Poetry Review as being a magazine of and for minor poets; well, it is, say, poetic license on the part of Mr. McD.; all we said was: "The August number, in spite of the War, is enlarged to 128 pages; but this is mainly due to more than half of it being taken up by a terrible poetic play, 'Ivan the Terrible,' by Horace Priestley; seventy pages of blank verse, and seventy minor poets, all wanting to know the reason why their poems are pigeon-holed." We did not even suggest that Mr. Stephen Phillips would use the poems of the minor poets; but anybody can see what we suggested. We said we wished "well," not ill to The Poetry Review, and that is why we have given it so much notice.—ED.]

"French Sculpture of the Thirteenth Century"

DEAR SIR,—In your review of "French Sculpture of the Thirteenth Century" you have overlooked one technical point which, I think, should be emphasised by booksellers when bringing the publication before intending purchasers, viz., the "photographic reproductions" are in collotype, consequently the paper is permanent and a magnifying glass can be used on details by the student.—I am, yours faithfully,

✦ By CONCENTRATION ON ONE JOINT ENTERPRISE, efficiency and increased trading results can be obtained with a saving of time and money to all concerned.

✦ THIS APPLIES TO THE BOOKSELLER just as much as to the publisher, for he will have at his disposal AT MUCH BELOW COST PRICE, a catalogue that he can be proud to place in the hands of his clients and will not have to send out many different lists in order to keep his customers informed of the activities of the book trade.

✦ This Catalogue, ISSUED OFFICIALLY BY THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION, will afford a splendid chance of proving that the Book trade really can co-operate, as indeed it must if trade is to be increased, or even maintained at pre-war conditions.

 YOU can most materially assist in shaping this new Trade Venture, and in making it a success by at once informing Mr. Wm. Poulten, Secretary, The Publishers' Association, Stationers' Hall Court, London, E.C., how many copies you will be able to use.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

UNWIN'S CORNER (5)

THE SOUL of EUROPE

The course of the great European war has brought surprises which remind us how little the peoples of Europe know each other. Germany has stumbled into a tragedy largely through its ignorance of moral factors—of the spirit of Belgium, for instance, and the moral temper of England. Serbia and Russia have equally surprised friend and foe, and the unanimity of the German people in an evil mood is still a matter of conjecture. There is need for a special psychological study of each of the fighting nations, in the spirit of the modern science of the psychology of peoples. Mr. Joseph McCabe, a student of a Belgian University, a well-known interpreter of German literature, and a former resident in France, besides being a world-wide traveller and master of many languages, has undertaken this work. In a series of studies he passes the belligerent nations in review, and brings out the character of each, especially in its relation to the war. Particular attention is paid to the elucidation of the character of the Kaiser, the Tsar, and King Albert.

Publishers' Circular

The Publishers' Association

MR. REGINALD J. SMITH, K.C. (President) took the chair on Thursday, July 22nd, at a special meeting of the Association held at Stationers' Hall to consider the proposed new Christmas Catalogue and other matters of interest to the trade. The following gentlemen were also present:—C. A. Ashley (Wells, Gardner, Darton & Co.), H. A. Bartlett (George Newnes, Ltd.), Edward Bell, Adam Black, J. H. Blackwood, C. Boon, H. I. Cape (Duckworth & Co.), C. F. Clay (Cambridge University Press), J. Cooper (W. & R. Chambers), C. C. Darton, T. R. Davies (J. W. Arrowsmith, Ltd.), A. B. Glen (William Collins, Sons & Co.), Sir Home Gordon (Williams & Norgate), F. G. Green (Dean & Son), J. W. Harden (Rivington's), G. G. Harrap, William Heinemann, C. Huntington (G. P. Putnam's Sons), B. Ince (Cambridge University Press), Robb Lawson (Cassell & Co.), A. G. Lewis (T. Fisher Unwin, Ltd.), C. J. Longman, D. Macmillan, A. H. Meiklejohn, W. M. Meredith (Constable & Co.), F. H. Miles (Simpkin & Co.), H. S. Milford (Oxford University Press), John Murray, A. Pitman, F. J. Rymer (Sampson Low & Co.), H. Scheurmier (T. Nelson & Sons), R. Scott, H. Shaylor (Simpkin & Co.), J. Shaylor (Simpkin & Co.), E. H. Smith (Religious Tract Society), A. F. Sowter (C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd.), P. Spalding (Chatto & Windus), Arthur Spurgeon (Cassell & Co.), E. Stanford, W. Symons (Blackie & Son), W. Tyrrell (Sampson Low & Co.), P. Lee Warner (Medici Society, Ltd.), G. H. Whitaker, G. A. Whitworth (Chatto & Windus), B. W. Willett (John Lane), G. S. Williams, and William Poulten (Secretary).

The Association Christmas Catalogue

At the request of the President, Mr. Meredith explained the further steps which had been taken for the publication of the Christmas Catalogue for the trade. Since the last meeting dummy catalogues had been prepared and sent to booksellers who wished to see them. The object of the Catalogue was to try and put into the hands of booksellers, and particularly the smaller booksellers who could not afford great expense in the matter, some means of increasing not only their own sales in competition with others, but of increasing the sale of books generally, as opposed to other less worthy objects sold largely at Christmas time. They were very much encouraged by the reception given to the scheme. Of course, owing to the abnormal conditions which prevailed, they could not expect very large numbers this year, but it looked as if the minimum of 30,000 copies which they were aiming at would be secured. Next year, no doubt the number would be largely increased, and his personal opinion was that when the time came this year many booksellers would be wishing they had taken more copies. They were basing their calculations on ninety-six pages of advertisements and ninety-six pages of text. From the rough calculations he had made he did not see how the advertisements would be got into ninety-six pages, but if they ran to over 100 pages it would mean a corresponding decrease in the cost. On the basis of an edition of 30,000 copies, it was proposed to charge £7 per page for advertisements, and if there was any margin, it would be returned to advertisers pro rata. Every advertiser would be entitled to sixteen four-line entries per page in the body of the Catalogue. The body of the Catalogue would be divided into three parts. The first would deal with the current season's books, the second with standard editions, and the third would be a very complete index, which would also include the advertisements.

Answering a number of questions, Mr. Meredith said that those who did not advertise would have no right to entries of books in the Catalogue. Close upon 20,000 copies had been already ordered. He agreed that the success of the scheme depended on whether the booksellers distributed the Catalogues, but seeing that they were paying for them at the rate of 20s. per 100, he did not think the booksellers would waste them.

Mr. John Murray proposed "That the Christmas Catalogue is approved by the meeting, and that the Council be requested to go forward on the lines indicated." Mr. Clay seconded the motion, and it was carried nem. con.

National Book Fortnight

Mr. Spurgeon proposed the adoption of the scheme of the Trade Committee for a National Book Fortnight. He explained that the idea was to make a great effort during the month of November to bring home to the people of the United Kingdom the desirability of buying books for Christmas presents. Last year the scheme was developed on very modest lines, and from what then resulted he thought they could expect quite a satisfactory outcome of the more elaborate scheme of organisation this year. In the United States publishers had been so convinced of the desirability of advertising books in the way that other people advertised their merchandise, that they had joined together and taken large spaces in the chief newspapers, and had simply advertised books, with no reference to the publishers or the titles of particular books. He felt that until the trade broke away from the old-fashioned idea that people would come and seek them out, they would not sell books as other people sold their particular wares. One of the objects of the scheme was to try and accustom the general public to spend money on books for Christmas presents. They had tentatively arranged with a large number of the leading London and provincial daily newspapers to devote a page on one day in each of the two weeks decided on, to the subject of books. There would be two double columns for advertisements on each page, and the rest of the page would be devoted to the general question of books.

In answer to questions, Mr. Spurgeon said the charges for advertisements would be the rates charged by the newspapers. The Association would be responsible for the advertisements, and unless they got the advertisements they would not proceed. It was simply a scheme brought forward by the Trade Committee with the idea of helping the trade, but if it fell through, no one would feel hurt.

Mr. Meredith pointed out that the Trade Committee was appointed to devise methods of helping the trade, but they could only advise. The Association was not a trading concern, and could take no risk either in regard to the Christmas Catalogue or the National Book Fortnight.

Mr. Heinemann remarked that it was simply a matter of business, and unless they considered it good business, naturally they would not go in for it.

The resolution was carried.

The Australasian Market of American Books

The President:—I am anxious to say a few words, with all the emphasis at my command, regarding the position of this Council. The Publishers' Association has for nearly twenty years been doing modest and good work in many ways, as I can testify, notably in the successful introduction of the net system, which has been the salvation of the booksellers. That good work will continue if we can ensure it. And we are now taking steps to make the extent and character of the work better known among our constituents, so that the efforts we have been making—perhaps all too silently and modestly—may be the better realised with the usefulness of our work.

But I want to add a word of very earnest caution. The Council find themselves between two fires. On the one hand they have the enthusiasts, who are anxious to enforce every decision of the body upon each and every member. But this is a thing impossible, for we have no "sanction," in the lawyer's phrase, no penalty or punishment with which to enforce any decree. We can only stand upon the public opinion of the members of the Publishers' Association. We have no coercion. On the other hand, we have those who are anxious to preserve the absolute liberty of action of their firms. This freedom the Publishers' Association have from the outset always recognised. I would only ask members to exercise that liberty with all consideration to the wishes of their fellow members. It is only by such restraint being exercised on both sides that the usefulness, indeed, the existence of the Publishers' Association, can in my opinion be preserved.

Let me briefly recite the story of the Australasian question, which is an apt illustration to my meaning. You will remember that at our last general meeting the question of us English publishers taking American books without the Australasian territory was raised, and all present, I think I may say, with one accord, decided that it would be wrong to do this, and agreed to sign a declaration not to do it. Unfortunately my friend, Sir Frederick Macmillan, was unable to be present that day, or he would doubtless have told the meeting the position of his firm, which takes only American books which are published by the Macmillan Co., of New York, and consequently considers itself, not without reason, as outside the purview of the general agreement. Similarly with one or two other firms, like Appleton and Putnam's. Now the position to-day is that fifty-one firms in all have signed, five have signed with reservations, and nineteen remain to be convinced by unanimity. I repeat that there is no question of any kind of coercion being exercised; there is simply a margin of unanimity wanting. I cannot believe that a policy which is otherwise prudent and patriotic and right is doomed to fail for want of the margin of unanimity, in the circumstances which I have tried to explain succinctly, but I hope accurately.

I must now leave the matter in the hands of the meeting, ending, as I began, with an earnest plea for unity. Cannot we, a body, modest but representative, "give and take" as do other bodies in our nation to-day? These are not days for us publishers in which we can afford to lose even the smallest market: we need all the markets available to us, every one of them. Let us then "give and take" to one another's scruples, always remembering that with us—in the ultimate result—coercion is impossible.

Mr. John Murray pointed out that the question was whether it was worth while trying to save the Australasian market, which was a growing one. He appealed to members to be prepared to sacrifice something for the general good.

Further discussion took place on the matter, but no resolution was proposed.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. CONSTABLE have nearly ready Captain Whiffen's book, "The North-West Amazons," Captain Whiffen's observations of the Indian tribes inhabiting the lands watered by the North-West Amazons are unique in their scope and detail. His book is a record of personal study of the subject during several months actually spent among the cannibal tribes, and his extensive information will be of value alike to geographer, historian, anthropologist and student of primitive religions, especially as, so far as the Putumayo districts are concerned, recent events may have so reacted on the native tribes that it may be difficult in the near future to supplement our knowledge by further record of the Indians, as known and studied by Captain Whiffen. Numerous illustrations and maps, a vocabulary and tables of scientific notes complete Captain Whiffen's pioneer achievement.

Book-lovers always rejoice to hear of the help given by books to soldiers in and out of the trenches. Mr. Robert Blatchford sent a copy of Mr. Henry Baerlein's "Diwan of Abu'l Ala," from Mr. Murray's "Wisdom of the East Series," to a soldier friend. Says the recipient, in a communication written in a dug-out: "I have glanced through the verses and I am so interested that I am going to take each one and 'thrash it out.' In the trenches, one has a good deal of spare time, and the weary hours will pass in silent enjoyment with 'Abu'l Ala.' My platoon sergeant is at present deeply absorbed in 'Omar.' He has caught the 'Omar' fever, as it were, and is to be heard muttering something about 'a loaf of bread and thou' while on night duty."

Nothing succeeds like success—a statement as true in war-time as out of it. The shilling edition of Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter's novel, "Freckles" has proved so triumphant that a fourth large impression is now called for, and it is only six weeks since this edition was launched. This brings the total sales of the book to very near the million copies.

Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd., have just published three timely books, viz: "War Thoughts of an Optimist," by B. A. Gauld; "A Short History of Modern Europe," by James Oliphant, and "Political Economy of War," by F. W. Hurst.

F. Bancroft's new book "Money's Worth," which Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton have arranged to publish early in August, is a long novel dealing with life in South Africa.

Messrs. Methuen will publish on August 5th, W. Pett Ridge's new book, "The Kennedy People."

The famous Canadian novelist, Ralph Connor (the Rev. Chas. W. Gordon, D.D.), is now in England. He has come over as chaplain to one of the Canadian contingents, and expects shortly to go to the Front.

Messrs. John Long, Ltd., will shortly publish a new novel entitled, "The Enchanting Distance," by Lilian Arnold, author of "The Storm Dog," &c. We are informed that this is a love story, in the development of which it becomes apparent that the most passionate attachments are rarely based on pure reason.

"King of Kulturia," a satire upon Germany's greed for monopoly in everything, is the title of a rs. net work which the Walter Scott Publishing Co., Ltd., have issued. It is from the pen of Mr. W. Hugh Higginbottom, the artist.

Messrs. Smith, Elder announce already a second edition of "The Irish Nuns at Ypres," by D.M.C., O.S.B.; of "Some Elderly People and their Young Friends," by S. Macnaughtan; and of Conan Doyle's new "Sherlock Holmes" story, "The Valley of Fear."

The Postal Service at the Front

THERE is a true ring of sentiment in a paper on "Home Ties in the Trenches," in the August Windsor Magazine, which surveys both the splendid loyalty of our fighting men to the best traditions of our British life and the constant interest taken in their welfare by non-combatants at home. Some of the true stories told in the course of this article will not soon pass from the memory. The contributor says:—

"This postal service means so much that a brief outline of it is necessary. A head post office is set up in a town well removed from 'trouble.' This base feeds the field post office, which is often a tent, a ruined barn, or even the open wayside, with folding tables and stools for the sorters. Sometimes these come under fire without a moment's warning, and must needs remove pell-mell to a postal dug-out underground, where bursting shrapnel will not interfere with the work.

"Two letters for Private S——.' His sergeant sighs as he puts them in the rack, knowing the man buried barely a dozen paces from the sorter's chair. Such letters are marked 'Deceased' and returned to the sender. Other addressees are wounded, and so may be sought along a well-known line, from the regimental aid-post to the base hospital in Wimereux or Boulogne.

"There are few more fascinating sights than a big field post office. Here is a huge welter of visible kindness, soon to be flowing through fifty miles of mazy ditches, where hundreds of thousands of men dream of home, wondering whether they'll ever see it again. The scene is, perhaps, a deserted factory, with two hundred hands dealing with a specially heavy mail. At the pile of bags are nimble khaki figures, stooping, sitting, kneeling.

"Some are slashing open the sacks and shooting their varied contents on the strawy floor. Others rake over the heaps of letters, or pore upon none-too-legible names by the feeble light of candles stuck in bottles. Sorted lots soon represent the regimental platoons.

Parcels for the lucky ones grow and grow, till you hear how 'young Smith's snowed under again!' Well, the young sub. will give away what he can't use—if not to his pals or his men, then to women and children of the war zone, pathetic folk who cling to 'home' after the roof has gone and the walls are breached with shell."

A notably important programme of finely illustrated articles on themes from the war, and other contributions by distinguished authors, is provided in the complete summer number of the Windsor Magazine for August. The momentous question of munitions, a lavishly illustrated article on Mesopotamia and the War, and a vivid account of ambulance work behind the French lines, are among the more notable articles.

The fiction of the number includes a remarkable complete story of Rhodesian life by Gertrude Page, and other contributions, all complete in the number, are by authors of such distinguished attainments as H. de Vere Stacpoole, Eden Phillpotts, Vincent Brown, Theodore Goodridge Roberts, F. E. Baily, G. B. Lancaster, Fred M. White, and others almost equally well known. These many features are lavishly illustrated by leading artists.

The History of the Sciences and the Pretensions of German Science

THERE is a long and most interesting article by M. Emile Picard of the Académie des Sciences de Paris in the July number of the Revue des Deux Mondes, entitled, "L'Histoire des Sciences et les Prétenions de la Science Allemande." It is a complete refutation of the claims of the Germans to be the world's leaders in all branches of science and culture as well as in everything else. In an article of 25 pages, M. Picard surveys the whole domain of science from the earliest times to the present day. It seems to us that such a body as our Royal Society would be doing good work in the interests of civilization if it were to publish some authoritative counterblast against the gas of Teutonic pretensions. In his prefatory remarks M. Picard says: "Are the pretensions of German science to universal superiority well founded? Recently the Academy of Sciences of Paris reminded us that it is the Latin and Anglo-Saxon civilizations which have produced during the last three centuries the greatest number of the great creators in the mathematical, physical and natural sciences, also the authors of the most important inventions of the nineteenth century—not forgetting also the contributions of less extensive nationalities. Our object in glancing over the history of science is to show that the majority of the most important discoveries, theoretical as well as practical, have not been made by German scientists or inventors. After sketching the development of modern science we shall endeavour to analyse the causes of the pretensions of German science; some of them are of a philosophic order, others arise from a confusion between the actual progress of science and of the accretion of scientific results. Perhaps we shall get the impression that the part contributed by Germany is far from being in accord with the rôle which she claims to have played in the world."

We have no space to follow this distinguished French man of science in his admirable and illuminating comparison of the relative contributions of the Germans and of other peoples to science; our object is to call attention to it. We must all of us at times ask ourselves what compensations can there be for the immeasurable sacrifices which we and our Allies are making and will have to make in this war? M. Picard answers this question by another: What was the aim of the Pan-Germans in making this war on their great neighbours. And he answers it thus:—

"Notre planète doit devenir une vaste usine sous la haute direction d'ingénieurs et de professeurs allemands, en même temps qu'une geôle soumise à la dure surveillance du militarisme germanique. Tel était le but de la guerre actuelle, effroyable vision de barbares savans, dont la réalisation constituerait un immense recul pour l'idéal de civilisation humaine, poursuivi par tant de nobles penseurs, d'après lequel chaque nation doit apporter dans l'œuvre commune de l'humanité ses qualités propres, sans qu'aucune prétende à une domination qui ne pourrait que retarder la marche de l'esprit humain."

In this country we do feel an immense pride in the magnificent resistance displayed by the whole French nation, and nowhere, intellectually, is this fine spirit of France at death grips with the furor Teutonicus better reflected than in the pages of the great French fortnightly Revue des Deux Mondes.

John Chapman, Publisher

MR. WM. H. PEET, answering a question in Notes and Queries, gives some information respecting "John Chapman, Publisher, 1822-94.—Chapman was intimately connected with George Eliot, Herbert Spencer and G. H. Lewes; was proprietor and editor of the Westminster Review for many years, and well-known to a very large circle of literary men in the 'fifties—the sole survivor being, I think, Mr. Frederic Harrison.

"Three MS. diaries of Chapman were recently discovered on a bookstall at Nottingham, and 'S. Y. E.' devotes three articles to them in the Nottingham Guardian, of May 4th, May 25th and June 1st. These are full of interest, but I regret very much that Dr. Chapman did not recast his diary into a methodical autobiography. Perhaps, however, he was wise, considering the very peculiar circumstances. Could not, 'S. Y. E.,' however, 'give us some more' to quote 'In-goldsby'?"

LONDON HOUSEHOLDER: "Not many people away holiday-making in war time, I suppose, milkman?" Milkman: "Well mum, you'd be surprised; at least five gallons of my customers were away last week-end."—Punch.

When Writers Wobble

WHEN a writer says of his heroine that "her gaze followed him out of the room and around the corner," or of his hero that "without removing his hat and coat he plunged his face into the basin of water," it does not necessarily signify (says The Literary Digest) that these children of his imagination have any superhuman qualities, or are intended to differ in any radical way from other human beings, but merely that "Homer nods." Though the writer pose as the criterion of good usage in diction, he cannot for ever avoid fatal blunders, and frequently enough, when in the midst of his theme and swept along by his imagination, he is guilty of errors in statement and absurdities of expression into which not one of his readers would fall. In the Philadelphia Evening Ledger we are given a list of such blunders, taken from the works of classic and modern writers. We read:—

Novel readers who like to combine the classic with the topical may be turning back, now that another great chapter in the history of Constantinople is under way, to one of Walter Scott's less popular works, "Count Robert of Paris." And there they will find one of those curious slips analogous to the woman novelist's horse that "won the Derby three years running" and to the eclipse of the sun in "King Solomon's Mines" followed by a moonlight night. Scott, usually accurate in his descriptions, makes the Crusaders wait before crossing a bay on the Bosphorus until the tide has ebbed. But there is no tide in the Bosphorus.

Some of the great panjandrums of French literature have perpetrated more amusing "howlers." An exceedingly familiar figure of speech gets the historian Thiers into trouble. "Throughout the day," he writes, "torrents of rain poured down, and 20,000 Austrians bit the dust."

The weighty and erudite lawyer, M. Troplong, proclaims in one of his sombre tomes that "in the midst of many crumbling institutions that of property stands erect upon its feet, seated upon Justice."

Francisque Sarcey, the great critic, writes, "On his helmet waves a missing plume," and again, "In the tones of Mdlle. Ugalde one recognises her mother's familiar hand."

One writer, Gustave Flaubert, once took pains to set down the absurd slips made by his contemporaries. He succeeded in compiling a long list, but the point of his undertaking was somewhat blunted by the fact that equally absurd phrases were to be found in his own books. For example:—

He it is who wrote of a most accomplished lover that "with one hand he caressed her hair and with the other he said to her—" He describes a duel in which "the two adversaries were placed at an equal distance from each other."

He also refers to a man who "was seventy years old and looked twice his age"; but doubtless the author means just what he says. One of the slips charged against Shakespeare, likewise, is no slip at all. Shakespeare speaks of "the sea-coast of Bohemia." At that period in which the action of the play occurred Bohemia was a maritime Power and had an extensive frontage not only upon one sea, but upon two seas.

In one of Scott's novels the sun sets in the east. Dickens makes Captain Cuttle put both hands to his mouth in giving a "hullo," though the gallant tar had long before lost one of his hands. Victor Hugo has Charlemagne talking of the Sorbonne, which was founded more than 400 years after Charlemagne's death.

Mrs. Edith Wharton, strange to say, describes a man as walking on a stony beach, "his legs and arms still lashed to his sides." Chesterton writes of a man whose "two dark eyes on each side of his protuberant nose glistened gloomily like black buttons." Well fixed for eyes. Robert Chambers: "Her throat was full of tears"—doubtless from her eye-teeth.

It is perhaps too high a meed of praise to term the blunders that are to be met in current magazines "nods of Homer." Short stories and other samples of literature of to-day, sold at five cents the half-dozen, have not the meticulous care spent upon them by their authors that the classics received. And yet such slips as these are vastly amusing:—

"I screamed in silent rage."

"A girl tore her eyes from the stage, but her ears still lingered."

"I will never speak to you again as long as I live," hissed Dolly." Just try to hiss it.

"A roar of silence followed."

"Her feet were swollen from standing in wet, salty water."

"Like Adela, he had dark brown hair, with enormous black eyebrows, a moustache, and a short beard."

"Davidson stood wiping his wet neck on the piazza."

"What, therefore, was our surprise to find Tish sitting by the fire in her bath-robe and slippers, with a cup of tea in her lap and her feet in a tub of water."

We are reminded of those horrible examples cited in the rhetoric text-book—like "The unfortunate woman was killed while cooking her husband's breakfast in a horrible manner."

Was Kant a German ?

By J. Gabrys

(In the new monthly, *Pro Lithuania)

It is in vain that intellectual Germans invoke Kant and his philosophy; he condemned German militarism, and protested against such perfidious and violent methods as are being used during this disastrous war!

But was Kant a German?

In the biographical dictionary we read: "Emmanuel Kant, the most celebrated German philosopher, born in Königsberg, descendant of a Scotch family; his father was a saddler, &c."

We think we can prove that Emmanuel Kant was of Lithuanian origin.

It was while making historical researches in the Königsberg archives, and ethnographical researches in the Memel districts (Klaipeda, Lithuanian name for Memel) and in Tilsit (1908-1910) that I discovered the proofs to sustain my argument.

In 1667, Richard Kant, the great-grandfather of Emmanuel Kant (in Lithuanian, Kantas) was established as a coffee-house keeper in Werden (Verdaine), near Memel (Klaipeda). His son Hans, following his father's calling, settled first at Memel (Klaipeda), and later at Tilsit. One of the latter's sons, Johanne Georges, father of Emmanuel, also a saddler, opened a shop at Königsberg, where Emmanuel was born.

It is thus beyond all doubt that the three generations of this Kant family preceding the coming of Emmanuel, lived in Oriental Prussia among the Lithuanian people, who so bravely resisted the German influence up to our days, and who still represent in the districts of Memel and Tilsit 80 per cent. of the population.

Has the name Kant a special meaning in German?

No. We cannot find any root in the German language susceptible of recalling the name Kant; while in Lithuanian, Kantus, Kantia (dialect of Klaipeda-Memel) mean patient, patience.

Even the name Kantas, Kantelis (diminutive), is frequently heard in the neighbourhood of Memel. There are even places in Prussian Lithuania called Kantiskiai, that is to say, the village of Kants. Dusburg ("Scriptores rerum Prussicarum" I, 145, 148) mentions also the names of different localities, such as Cant-Girde, or Cant-Gerde, which mean the Hill of Cant (Latin).

But let Kant speak.

I will take the opportunity of citing some passages of his preface in the Lithuanian Grammar and Dictionary of G. Mielcke, edited in Königsberg in 1800. We read among other things:—

"The beauties of the Lithuanian language, as well as its particular characteristics, are sufficient reasons why this language should be preserved and used in the schools as well as in the churches.

"With regard to the Lithuanian people, I must add that they are more impregnated with a personal dignity than their near neighbours. (Kant here refers to the Germans and the Slavs.) The Lithuanians are accustomed to address their superiors as equal to equal, and with a cordial frankness; for they do not blame them, and willingly shake hands with them, because a Lithuanian is never wanting in his duty; his conduct, full of dignity, is at the same time the best guarantee of his loyalty, and has no resemblance with that of his neighbour (Polish), who is proud and overbearing.

"Without taking into consideration the importance and the usefulness the conservation of a nation possessing such good qualities can have on the country, one must again remark, that the antiquity and the purity of the language of the Lithuanian people, at present oppressed and encircled in a narrow space, almost isolated from other races, has a great importance for science (linguistic) and especially for the ancient history of the migration of races. This is therefore another reason why this race and their language should be protected."

Such was Kant's opinion of the Lithuanian people and their language, of which he must have had a perfect knowledge, in order to have been able to advance that which, half a century later, was proved by the famous linguists Bopp, Schleicher, and others. Besides, was not Kant himself endowed with that dignity which he sets forth as a characteristic of the Lithuanian race? Did he not concentrate in himself that prodigious contemplative strength, that power of thought which is found throughout the Lithuanian race in its potential state, and which distinguished the ancient Pagan High Priests of Lithuania (Krivés)?

Has Kant's clear and precise genius anything of the nebulous philosophy of the German philosophers?

Again no. Kant has nothing of the Germans neither individually nor as a philosopher, and he cannot be classed as one. Moreover, the learned Germans themselves have begun of late to recognise his Lithuanian origin. (See "Archiv für Anthropologie." 1881 Bd. XIII, S. 36.)

Retired

HE used to be a business man,
And had a whopping trade;
From dawn to dark he used to plan,
And quite a wad* he made,
But now he lives a life of ease,
By no ambition fired;
And in the business circles he's Declared to have "Retired."

It seems depression came; the skies

Of business all were dull,
He thought that he'd economise
Because there was a lull.

He stopped his advertising—so
In memory he grew dim.

He didn't retire from business—no,
The business retired from him.

ENGLISH MOTHER: "Well, Master Jim hasn't gone to the front after all." Cook: "Oh, poor Master Jim! And 'e's so fond of a day's shootin'."—Punch.

* "Wad" this is an American expression meaning same as a "pile." It refers to the fact that paper-money is so largely used in America and a lot of notes together is called a "wad." We shall understand it all right before this war is paid for.—FD. P.C.

Letters to the Editor

"The Book of France"

DEAR SIR,—With reference to the two delightful stories you reproduce from "The Book of France," in your current issue, perhaps it might be worth while to note, in case one or two of your readers may not be familiar with her earlier work, that Madame Mary Duclaux is English born and bred. She wrote many learned and delightful works, under her maiden name—A. Mary F. Robinson—and, since her residence in France, as the wife, first of Prof. James Darmesteter and, later, of Prof. Duclaux, she has continued to add both to French and to English literature. I read "The End of the Middle Ages," soon after it was published in 1888; and there are few pleasanter books for a lover of France than her "The Fields of France," 1903.

Yours sincerely,

A. R. WALLER.

Pro Lithuania

DEAR SIR,—I have pleasure in sending you the first number of our new review, Pro Lithuania, which, as you will see, is issued in defence of the claims of this country to the benefits of self-government. In view of the fact that England, France, Russia and Italy are fighting for the principles which Lithuanians have so much at heart, would you kindly notice the contents of our publication in your columns? Your readers will certainly be interested to know something about this little-known race, whose language and history are so curious, and whose representatives in the United States and Great Britain number more than a million. Many of them, too, are at the present time fighting with the British army.

Thanking you in advance for a short review of our magazine and our work,

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

THE EDITOR.

[Lithuania is situated to the east of the Baltic, on both sides of the Niemen, between the Germans and the Slavs, so it can well be imagined it is having a time! Nearly half-a-million Lithuanians are fighting in the Russian army; 50,000 have been press-ganged into the German army, and the rest of the three million inhabitants have had to flee from their towns and villages into the mountains. The Lithuanian patriot, J. Gabrys, makes a stirring appeal for his country, which is suffering like Belgium—and, if anything, is worse off—for there is more of it; on page 25, there is a list of over fifty places which have suffered from the German invasion, where thousands of lives have been sacrificed and property worth millions destroyed. The price of this new patriotic monthly is 8s. per annum. We wish it all success. It deals with the question of the origin of the Letts and Lithuanians, with their languages, wars, governments, &c.; there is an appeal from this little people to the Allies which is pathetic without being sentimental; and we hope the victorious Allies may before long be able to listen to it. Above all, the Lithuanians want to be separated from the Poles, who are referred to as "their faithless ally." There is an interesting article, which claims to prove conclusively that Kant can't have been a German, and that he was a Lithuanian.—Ed.]

Notices of Books

From Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd.—"Lena Hale," by C. M. Theobald. There is ability in this first novel, but no charm; sincerity, but no geniality. The author, it would appear, is a woman, for in many of the pages one detects a decided bias against men. The central character, however, is a woman, but she has no attractiveness for the reader, save the attractiveness of a woman truly and honestly presented. This young novelist will doubtless be heard of again, though it is not likely she will command a wide public until she has learned to look upon the world with a more kindly eye.

From the Same.—"Commonsense about the Shaw," by Harold Owen. Mr. Bernard Shaw receives merciless and—as the present writer thinks—just castigation from the able pen of Mr. Owen. His attack will be read with joy by many people, irritated and angered by Shaw's brochure, "Commonsense about the War," and they will be glad to find a reply to it which is both reasoned and unsparing.

From Messrs. John Bale, Sons & Danielsson, Ltd.—"Emergencies in Medical Practice," by Sanitaetsrat Dr. Richard Lenzmann; translated by Ronald E. S. Krohn, M.D., Lond. Dr. Lenzmann's valuable work has run through three editions in the German, each edition receiving careful revision and a good deal of additional matter. The English translation by Dr. Krohn was completed before the outbreak of war. Many medical men are already familiar with Lenzmann's work, but it is not yet widely known in this country. It is no superficial summary; it makes use of the most recent research, discussing theoretical problems and giving clinical histories. The index is most helpfully arranged, a few explanatory words accompanying almost every entry.

From Messrs. Benziger Bros., New York.—"The Catholic's Ready Answer," by Rev. M. P. Hill, S.J. This book is an adaptation of a German work of the same kind that has proved popular among Catholics. It is a controversial defence of the Catholic position, and provides arguments to defend it against any ordinary attack. Agnosticism, Anglicanism, Darwinism, modern science, Christian science, Protestantism generally—all are in turn routed to the satisfaction of the author.

From Messrs. Chatto & Windus.—"A Short History of Russian Music," by Arthur Pougin. M. Pougin is a well-known French writer on music. Though he has a great deal of knowledge he has preferences and tastes that are not shared by many scholars and men of musical experience. For example, he calls Anton Rubinstein "a first-rate" composer, and it is wholly inadequate criticism to say that "taking things all round, one feels that Tchaikovsky was familiar with the theatre and the theatrical point of view." The volume, however, contains a great deal of information, and the author is careful to point out that his book is "merely an essay"—something "in the nature of a series of notes for the history which still has to be written." The volume on Russian music, issued about a year ago by Mr. Montagu Nathan, is by far the most substantial and acute work yet published on this subject in England.

From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd.—"Belgium's Agony," by Emile Verhaeren. This book is almost too terrible to read; certainly it cannot be read without a blinding anger against our enemies. M. Verhaeren accepts many of the stories of the devilish cruelty of the Germans; no doubt he has good reason for doing so. But his book is not a recital of these stories, though he includes some of them. There is much beauty in his pages, particularly in the opening chapter where he tells of the great things his country has achieved. He writes eloquently of "Albert, the Well-beloved," and scornfully of "Germany and Art." Professor Sadler has translated the book and written an Introduction for it. As he points out, "it is fitting that Verhaeren, in whom is the essence of every art, should at this time come forward and portray his martyred country." It is a noble and moving book, the eager product of a suffering soul.

From the Same.—"Millstone," by Harold Begbie. Mr. Begbie is careful to proclaim that though his story, in all its essential facts, is true, yet "it was written with no moral purpose." We are sorry to hear that, for only a moral purpose could afford an excuse for choosing so dreadful a subject. It is the tale of a murder committed for revenge by a woman whose little daughter was kidnapped for disgustingly filthy ends and shortly afterwards died from a terrible disease she had contracted. Of a book like this we frankly do not know what to say. It is not art, but we think, on the whole, it will do good. It is certainly sincere and it calls public attention to what is the most awful blot on civilisation. Nevertheless, we doubt the wisdom of sending it broadcast over the country.

From Mr. William Heinemann.—"The Faithful," by John Masefield. Mr. Masefield is almost restless in his search for new material, and in his latest tragedy he has turned to Japan at the beginning of the eighteenth century for a subject. It is written in terse, almost abrupt, prose, and there is scarcely a phrase or a word that is not necessary for the right telling of the story. We have put before us a plot in which the fine and noble are overwhelmed by the ruthless and wicked. Some of the scenes are deeply human and impressive, but it is the kind of play, we imagine, that would prove more effective on the stage than when read in the study. One doubts, however, if it will be produced in public until the War is over, for it cuts a little too deeply into the emotions, and bruises the spirit by its occasional violence.

From Mr. Arthur L. Humphreys.—"Casus Belli," by Charles Richard Cammell. Mr. Cammell belongs, amidst the present clash of arms, to a Peace party which he truthfully describes as "small." In the hope of attracting additional members to his chosen group he has written and caused to be published a Satire in heroic couplets entitled "Casus Belli," whose theme is the present war, treated from the viewpoint of wholesale condemnation. The quality of the verse is negligible and little superior are half-a-dozen sonnets which close the volume.

From Messrs. T. C. & E. C. Jack.—"Climbing Plants," by William Watson, with an introduction by W. Robinson. This volume is number seventeen in a series entitled "Present Day Gardening," edited by R. Hooper Pearson, Managing Editor of the Gardener's Chronicle. Mr. William Watson is Curator of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, and he has for many years lived among climbers from all parts of the world; therefore the amateur who is contemplating the beautifying of his garden or greenhouse with climbing plants cannot do better than study this treatise. A great variety of climbing plants are introduced, with a description of habits, colour, size, &c., so as to enable them to be disposed to the best advantage. The eight coloured plates are indeed beautiful; they are reproduced direct from the flowers by colour photography.

From Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd.—"Love in War Time," by Ambrose Pratt. Germany's brief naval triumph in the Pacific during the opening months of the War is Mr. Pratt's theme. He writes of the South Sea Islands with the intimacy that complete knowledge gives, and spins an admirable yarn of life as prisoner on board a German cruiser—a life that is brought to an end by a series of thrilling incidents. His hero is a British doctor, whose wife, a woman of German-Samoan blood, provides the feminine and tragic elements of the narrative.

From The Oxford University Press.—“The Compleat Angler,” by Izaak Walton and Charles Cotton. Introduction and Bibliography by R. B. Marston. This reprint of one of the most human and charming books in our language is the latest volume to be issued in the Oxford Edition of Standard Authors. The lowness of its price, the dignity and serviceableness of its format, and Mr. Marston's introductory notes will combine to make this classic widely read even by those who rarely read classical works. There are, in all, twenty illustrations, all of them wisely chosen and delicately reproduced. Among them we find a facsimile of the title-page to the fifth edition of Part 1, published in 1676, as well as pictures of the eel, the tench, the barbel, loach, and other fish, taken from the same edition. This is not the first time that Mr. Marston has written an introduction to Walton and Cotton's delightful book; only four years ago he wrote an admirable preface to another good edition. It is good to find him poking fun at those rather “superior” people who hold that Walton is old-fashioned and out of date. It is true, of course, that a good deal has been learned about angling since the seventeenth century, but even the most ardent piscatorial expert has a good deal to learn if he has never read “The Compleat Angler.” The book, of course, is not for fishers only. The present writer, for example, has never taken a solitary fish from a river, yet he knows parts of this book as thoroughly, perhaps, as Mr. Marston himself. Walton's book is the reflection of his most attractive and, if one may say so, lovable personality. It is full of “sap” and vigour, and the kindly spirit of it is always refreshing. Mr. Marston's introductory notes have some of the same quality; they are direct, genial and by no means lacking in personal touches. Mr. Marston has supplied a bibliography, by far the fullest yet issued, though he adds that “it is probable some reprints may have escaped my notice.” Those who have not yet read “The Compleat Angler” (and even those who have read it many times) will find in it temporary solace and refreshment in these dark days of the crushing of evil.

From Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co.—“Rank and Riches,” by Archibald Marshall. Of the many novels by Mr. Marshall that have passed through our hands, this is quite the most striking and successful. It is a roomy, full-blooded story, with some excellent characterisation, a strong plot, and not a few exciting scenes. One feels however that the excitement has not, as it were, been dragged in; it grows out of the actions and passions of real men and women. It would be unfair to give away any of the plot; suffice it to say that the title conveys a good idea of the kind of men and women who are presented, and that the scene is placed in England.

From Messrs. C. A. Pearson, Ltd.—“A Modern Juliet,” by Charles Garvice. This book has not hitherto been published in bound book form, having been issued only in a 6d. paper covered edition. In its new form, it will have as large a sale as the other books by this popular author.

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate.—“Politics and Crowd Morality,” by Arthur Christensen; translated from the Danish by A. Cecil Curtis. Little enough is written on the subject of crowd psychology; indeed, the name of no English author readily springs to mind in connection with any studied thought in this branch of investigation. A translation of the work of the Danish author is, therefore, doubly welcome, both on account of the excellence of its matter and on account of the philosophic desert into which it ventures. An analysis of the mental life and the ethics of crowds is followed by a dissertation on the power of democracy. The subject leads to the study of politics; and we have chapters on interstate politics, state-morality and home politics. Public opinion and social ethics are also included in the field of observation. The author's method is subjective; he constantly makes use of illuminating incidents, and writes with clarity and vigour.

New Editions.—Messrs. Duckworth & Co. add to the Reader's Library R. B. Cunningham-Graham's Texan story, “Hope,” and a translation of Maxim Gorky's “The Spy.”—Mr. John Murray issues Gene Stratton-Porter's delightful little story, “Freckles,” in his Shilling Edition Series.—Messrs. Constable re-issue Mr. W. Morton Fullerton's translation of Frederic Loliee's “The Romance of a Favourite.”—Messrs. John Bale, Sons & Danielsson produce a fourth edition of “Squint: its Causes, Pathology and Treatment,” by Claude Worth, F.R.C.S.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

THE WORLD in CONFLICT

This book deals for the most part with the psychological causes of the present crisis, and is a very masterly summary which can hardly fail to attract the widest attention. The work is of international interest, and deals with the various issues in so broad a manner that practically it would be of as much interest to the European countries generally—also the United States—as to ourselves.

Holland and Copyright

DEAR SIR,—In your paper of July 10th last, page 26, you have, under the title "The New Dutch Copyright, the worst calamity that ever befell the Dutch Book Trade," placed an article in which the Dutch publishers are unjustly and inaccurately criticised in connection with our new Author's Law and our country's joining the Berne Convention.

This inaccurate criticism is the more to be deplored because you must doubtless be aware from the Publishers' Congress held at Amsterdam in 1910, where the English publishers, according to their own statements, were so heartily and hospitably received, that the Dutch publishers made the most strenuous efforts to get Holland joined to the Berne Convention. If they were such pirates as is affirmed in your article, then surely they would not have done this, for pirates do not ask for laws to protect others against their own trade.

In a postscript to your article you acknowledge the receipt of the periodical Het Auteursrecht, from which you make some more observations. Thus I may assume that you have made yourself capable of thoroughly understanding, if necessary, what is written in the Dutch language, and I hope therefore that you will gladly be guided by truth. Therefore I take the liberty of sending you herewith:—

1. My pamphlet "De trugwerkende Kracht der Auteurswet 1912" (The Retrospective Effect of the Author's Law of 1912).

2. My article in the "Nieuwsblad voor den Boekhandel" of January 8th, 1915 (the Booksellers' newspaper, Organ of the Society for Promoting the Interests of the Book Trade).

3. Different articles in that paper written by the editor, P. Bausch, in February and June, 1915.

If you have carefully followed the contents of these documents, you will know that:—

(a) Under Number 2 the said Society has for more than three-quarters of a century so successfully contended against (pirated) reprints of foreign books that in the last forty years not a single (pirated) reprint of a book can be pointed out, and yet there was no law against this.

(b) For almost half-a-century that Society adopted such measures that publishers who bought copyright from a foreign country were guaranteed for a number of years against competition, which was therefore at the same time in the interest of the foreign publishers.

(c) The Dutch publishers on the issue of this first Dutch Author's Act, respecting the plastic arts, ask for nothing else than what the English publishers, apparently without difficulty, obtained in the year 1862, when regulations for copyright on the plastic arts were drawn up.

(d) They also are content with less than their English colleagues obtained in 1862, and therefore ask the Dutch legislator to follow the German precedent, which on the introduction in 1876 of the first Author's Act for the plastic arts, was given in that country, if the English stipulation should be found too far-reaching.

The English Law of '62 protects only the original picture, drawing or photograph, that was not sold before July '62. The English publishers could therefore continue to make use of their blocks, yes, even have made as many new ones as they liked from all works of art which were sold by the makers.

The German Act of '76 gave the publishers the full right to use their stereotypes to the last, protecting, however, works of art against the fabrication of new blocks.

On reading these different observations you will see that these wishes of the Dutch publishers scarcely affect foreign countries, as from foreign countries very little is reproduced; it concerns chiefly the reproduction of paintings of the Hague School.

But towards these Dutch painters, most of whom are dead, our publishers have not acted as pirates.

In the enclosed papers it is shown that these authors were pleased to see the reproductions of their works of art, because it was an advertisement for their name and work and consequently they gladly consented, as a rule, to their works being reproduced. Of this consent, however, from the nature of things no document was drawn up, as is now demanded in the Author's Act, and therefore this required proof cannot be sent in or given.

If, therefore, foreigners do not come within the scope of the Dutch publishers' reproduction-trade and their books also were not (piratically) reprinted, there remains consequently, per balance, but one thing of importance left them viz.: translations. Well, then, the Dutch publishers ask only to be allowed to sell off the very small editions of the same, after which the copy is of no value to them unless they come to an understanding with the foreign authors or publishers for a reprint.

If we consider that the Dutch government, when we joined the Berne Convention, made the proviso, notwithstanding the hard stipulations so adverse to the Dutch publishers, that the right of translation for our country should not last so long as the copyright but only ten years, then we must confess that this is rather a question of the conception that a free translation must be considered more as a popular interest to our country, than that the Dutch publishers would have gained so much by it. In that case the above-said stipulations were not necessary. If the Dutch publishers could earn so much by the translations it was not necessary that the Dutch Government should be afraid of too few translations appearing if the right of translation lasted as long as the usual copyright, which fear appears from the above-mentioned proviso. By comparing the statistics of the amounts which have been paid yearly by the Dutch publishers for translations, before 1912 and after, but little difference would be shown. The translations which appear as feuilleton in the daily papers are naturally excluded as not belonging to the ordinary publisher's business.

The following may serve as a striking illustration of the doctrine that one should be extremely prudent in condemning others:—

By the defence in the Dutch parliament of the retrospective effect of the Dutch Author's Act, 1912, with reference to the reproduction of works of the plastic arts, an example was quoted from the work of "Paul Wouwerman's The Convention of Berne," in order to show that the Berne Convention requires that retrospective effect. In the accompanying February articles of the editor Bausch it may be seen that this example was quoted by mistake, as the article did not concern the reproduction of a work of the plastic arts, but the sale of an English (pirated) reprint of French music, which although it took place after England's incorporation with the Berne Convention, was justified by the English judge. This was grounded on article 6 of the English law of 1886, in which it was stipulated, that rights obtained by former fabrication, publication or performance, remain solid. The music was printed six months before the incorporation.

The Dutch publishers, however, ask for no protection of (pirated) reprints of foreign publications, but on the contrary have always been against it and with reference to books have known how to prevent it, notwithstanding the absence of any legal prohibition.

By the publication of this you will greatly oblige.

Thanking you in advance,

Yours faithfully,

K. GROESBEEK,

Member of the firm of Messrs. Scheltem & Colkema's Boekhandel.

Amsterdam, July 23rd, 1915.

We willingly publish Mr. K. Groesbeek's letter, but it will be seen that he carefully avoids any explanation of the fact that Dutch publishers appealed against the retro-active clauses of their copyright law, saying they would ruin them. Does Mr. Groesbeek seriously maintain that, for instance, British authors were just as well off before the Dutch joined the other nations in 1912 as they would have been if Holland had granted British authors copyright, say, fifty years ago? Is it not ridiculous to suppose that our authors would not have obtained vastly increased royalties and payments if they could have protected their rights instead of having to be satisfied with the best they could get? It is true that when a Dutch house announced they were to publish a translation of some foreign book of world-wide importance and interest other Dutch publishers, as a rule, did not compete—they agreed sometimes among themselves not to compete. It was like that British institution the "knock out" at sales, supposed to be by auction, but really by agreement among the buyers. Will Mr. Groesbeek deny the fact that in negotiating for a translation and for a set of electrotypes of the illustrations, transfers of the maps, &c., the foreign author was reminded that he had no rights in Holland, anybody could take his work, &c.?

Mr. Groesbeek appears to consider he has disposed of the important question of serial issue of a translation in Holland before 1912 by saying "such translations are naturally excluded as not belonging to the ordinary publishers' business." We know, and every publisher of works for which there was a demand in Holland during the last half-century knows, that the Dutch publisher used the argument in bargaining for early sheets and blocks that, although he might by being out first forestal rival book editions, he ran great risk of loss because he could not control or prevent other translations appearing as feuilletons in newspaper or other serial form, such cheap issues being often reprinted in brochure form by the people who made the translation. But it did not improve the position of the foreign author. It was all the same to him whether his work was pirated in book form or in serial form.

We did not wish to suggest that Holland, before she joined the Berne Convention, had been unduly distinguished for piracy or was worse than British pirates of American books or American pirates of English books previous to July 1st, 1891. In 1912, when the Dutch Copyright Act was passed we had some notes and correspondence about it, and it was claimed by Dutch publishers that foreign authors would not in future get more out of Holland than they had in the past because Dutch publishers had always given full value for what they had taken. We were rather surprised to hear this, and also not surprised to find that such a prominent and well-known Dutch publisher as Mr. J. G. Robbers, senior, was obliged to write to us as follows:—

"I cannot agree, to my great regret, with Mr. Nijhoff that most Dutch publishers have been accustomed, before Holland's joining the Berne Convention, to pay for Dutch translation rights. This has not often been the case, except when they wanted to buy electros from the original blocks (illustrations), in which case the Dutch right of translation was included in the price agreed upon for the electros. On the contrary, after due examination, I find that for the majority of Dutch translations of foreign books nothing has been paid up to the very moment of our joining the Convention of Berne." [The italicised words are underlined in the original letter of Mr. Robbers.]

We may not be "capable of thoroughly understanding what is written in the Dutch language," but Dutch publishers write such good English! Could any one misunderstand what Mr. Robbers says?

Notes and Announcements

OWING to the heavy demand for the new volume of war stories by "Eye-witness" entitled "The Great Tab Dope," Messrs. Blackwood were not able to publish until August 4th. "Eye-witness's" first book, "The Green Curve," published under the pseudonym of "Ole Luk Oie," is still in as active demand as ever.

"The House of Morgan & Scott, Ltd., with some Notes on the Keswick Convention," is the title of an interesting brochure, with photographic portraits of the directors: the chairman, Mr. Geo. E. Morgan, M.A.; his son, Captain Sydney Cope Morgan, B.A. (in khaki); Mr. D. J. Findlay, J.P.; Mr. G. Wilson Heath, F.R.G.S.; and the Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D. Then there are portraits of the Rev. J. Stuart Holden, M.A., editor of The Christian; of the revivalists, Moody and Sankey, whose "Sacred Songs and Solos" were published by the firm. There are also portraits of the founder, Mr. R. C. Morgan, of Mr. S. Chase, and of Mr. Samuel Scott. It is altogether an interesting memorial of a house well-known all over the world.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton are publishing immediately the first English translation of the Russian author Goncharov's novel, "The Precipice."

In his book, "The Poison War," recently published by Mr. Heinemann, the well-known chemist and toxicologist, Mr. A. A. Roberts, gives some highly interesting comparisons as to the increase in recent times of the percentage of bayonet wounds. It is remarkable, as the author comments, that notwithstanding the modern predominance of the rifle, carbine, machine gun and revolver, bayonet wounds should have increased about five-fold in recent times.

Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., are just publishing "Sylvia's Marriage," a new novel by Upton Sinclair. They say:—"The story deals with a difficult and delicate matter, yet one that is now openly acknowledged to be a crying evil gravely affecting our national welfare. Other novelists have hinted at it, but it has been left to Mr. Upton Sinclair, already proved a dauntless champion of the Right by his fierce and unsparing revelations in 'The Jungle,' to denounce it from the housetops. Many facts in the story are undoubtedly terrible, but the book is written as a clarion cry to women, urging them to stand up and drive this evil from our midst. The book is not yet issued, but it has already been banned by the circulating libraries."

A summer without a new Barry Pain would be a disappointment to many a reader, and admirers of "Mrs. Murphy" and "Eliza" will welcome his new book, which is called "Edwards: The Confessions of a Jobbing Gardener." Edwards is a genial rogue who "does" little suburban gardens. "Size half nothing with a mix up of plantains, moss and worm-casts which they calls the lawn." Edwards' reflections on his various types of employers are delightfully full of wit and shrewd comment. The book will be published next week by Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., at 1s. net.

Mr. George Kennan probably knows more Russian political exiles than any other man. Ever since his first visit to Siberia, undertaken more than forty years ago, he has kept in touch with many persons prominent in "underground Russia," and in his travels through Russia and Siberia he has met with many interesting adventures and heard many strange stories of the police and spy systems. He has gathered these stories into a volume entitled "A Russian Comedy of Errors," which Messrs. George Allen & Unwin announce for publication early in August.

"Lyrics of Old London" is the title of a new book to be published shortly by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin. It is by Miss Dorothy Margaret Stuart, and is illustrated in colour by Miss Mary Ellis.

Messrs. Methuen will publish on August 12th, "The Secret Son," by Mrs. Henry Dudeney, a story of the Sussex Downs.

Mr. John Murray has published, at 6d. net, under the title, "War Distress and War Help," a neat little brochure, which is a short catalogue of the leading War Help Societies, showing their scope and objects, and the addresses of their officers. It is compiled by Helen Donald-Smith, and any profits will be given to the Officers' Families' Fund. Obviously, it is a very useful little guide. We do not see the Belgian Book Trade Relief Fund mentioned in it.

Messrs. Constable have in preparation a work, to be entitled "Studies in Tudor History," by Professor W. P. M. Kennedy, of St. Michael's College, Toronto. Professor Kennedy, who is recognised as one of the authorities on the Tudor period, deals in this volume with subjects which by their very nature have, of necessity, been passed over lightly in the general histories of the period. Among the chapter-headings are the following: "Henry VII and his Policy," "The Royal Divorce," "The Elizabethan Compromise in Ceremonial," "Elizabethan Puritanism," "Some Aspects of Elizabethan Parish Life."

About two months ago, his publishers, Messrs. Constable, sent to Henry Sydnor Harrison, the author of "Queed," who is doing relief work in France, a package of reviews of "Angela's Business," the first Mr. Harrison had seen, although the book was published in March. His letter of acknowledgment says: "The package of reviews, advertisements and other 'Angela' stuff, dated May 3rd, was handed to me to-day at the Belgian farm where we are billeted just now, with refugees for steady company and swarms of 'Tommies' as our comrades for a night. . . . If this letter seems incoherent, inconsequential, &c., be indulgent, for I am trying to write seated on the floor of my 'bus, as ambulances are known in the trade, with half-a-dozen idle fellow-chauffeurs sprawling all over me, sipping red wine, of which the French general kindly furnishes us free kegs."

Mrs. Gene Stratton-Porter has so vast a following of readers that the prospect of a new book by her is a matter of interest to many. Mr. Murray will publish in three weeks' time her new novel, "Michael O'Halloran," which tells the story of the chivalrous devotion of a news boy to a crippled little girl, and is full of those characteristic touches of sympathy and humour which have been the first causes of Mrs. Stratton-Porter's wonderful success.

Before Magna Carta it was a principle—or rather the principle—of English Government that "The King can do no wrong." The object of Magna Carta was to see that he did none. In that very fine Quarterly The American Historical Review, for July 1915, there is a most interesting article by G. B. Adams on "Magna Carta and the Responsible Ministry," in which he outlines the evolution of what he calls "the most effective means ever devised, or apparently devisable, for operating a republic under the forms of a monarchy. . . . The triumph of limited monarchy the discovery of its scientific justification and the machinery invented to carry it into practice, belong historically in the direct line of evolution begun by Magna Carta." It is interesting to note that this "outside observer" is tempted to believe that the tendency of British political life during the past twenty years is to destroy ministerial responsibility of the old type and make the Cabinet the absolute master of Parliament.

In The Nineteenth Century for August the most remarkable article is one by A. Yusuf Ali, on "German Missionaries in India," in which he claims, and with justice, to have established the following propositions:—

1. The German missionary propaganda in India is active and widespread.
2. The chief influence is exerted on the lowest classes, whose ignorance and remoteness from educated opinion make them easy victims to any political suggestions hostile to our Empire.
3. There are unlimited opportunities for the hostile exercise of such influence and very limited means for detecting the abuse of such influence.
4. That the policy of trust has proved a failure. German missionaries have broken parole, and some have been discovered to be officers in the German army.
5. The difficulties in the way of internment are real, but not insuperable.

People refuse to believe that German statesmen are so far-seeing as to send German men and women to live in out-of-the-way rural districts in India in order gradually to educate the children to rebel against our rule, but remember how Germany hoodwinked our statesmen into the cession of Heligoland! We had no thought then, a quarter of a century ago, that Germany was already planning to build the Kiel Canal and her great fleet, and foresaw this war, and that Heligoland in her hands secured her fleet from attack—in ours would have made the war ship canal useless.

The coloured supplement to The British Review for August reproduces "The Fisherman," a water-colour by David Cox. It is unfortunate that the artist should so often, as Cox does in this case, spoil the angler's interest in his work by making his fisherman so ridiculous and impossible in attitude and gear.

Well worth reading is an article in Blackwood for August, entitled "Through Siberia in Time of War," by Ella R. Graham, and also one on "An Egean Voyage," by W. J. C., from which one gets the impression that the lazy Turk has been mighty busy fixing up guns on all his shores.

Major G. W. Redway contributes an eleventh instalment to his very clear and excellent "True Story of the War," in The British Review for August. We are glad to see our suggestion that punctuating, so to speak, his history with big blanks to show the censorship's justification for its existence, has all been dropped. We all hate the censorship quite enough without being continually reminded of him. His job depends on the War, so naturally he'll keep us in the dark and keep it going as long as he can. If the censorship blew up like the Bulwark through letting high explosives get too heated, nobody would go into mourning. If the Government would let Mr. Balfour tell the country "The Truth about the Censor" it would sell better than "Freckles" or "The Rosary."

One of the most interesting articles in the August-September number of the Socialist Review (Independent Labour Party, 6d. net), is by Angelica Balabanoff, who writes on the "Italian Socialist Party and the War." She declares that the War propagandists in Italy were not at all concerned about Belgian neutrality, but came out quite openly on behalf of "Italian interests."

Messrs. Putnams have just published a life, by Dr. F. H. Garrison, of Dr. John Shaw Billings, who was well known in England as probably the greatest medical librarian. He was the head of the great Surgeon-General's Library at Washington, which was practically his own creation; and he was also director of the New York Public Library.

The Navy League Annual

THE Navy League Annual was not published last year because of the outbreak of war. It has, however, been decided to issue it this year, and it will therefore be published by Mr. Murray on or about Trafalgar Day, with its customary features of a general summary of the position of the Navies of the world, comparative tables of ships, tonnage, &c. The general editor will be Mr. Robert Yerburgh, M.P., assisted by Mr. Archibald Hurd and Mr. Gerald Fiennes, whose names argue sufficiently that the Annual this year will lose none of its customary thoroughness and authority.

The Book Trade and the War

Bookseller's only Son killed in action

DEAR SIR,—We regret to say that Mr. Bairstow's only son has been killed while serving with the 5th West Riding Territorial Regiment, and we enclose a short report from the Huddersfield Examiner of to-day, which you may think of sufficient interest to publish.—Yours faithfully, COATES & BAIRSTOW.

Huddersfield,
August 3rd.

We need hardly say it was with great regret that we heard of Mr. Bairstow's loss, and can assure him of the hearty sympathy of the members of the book trade. The following is the note from the Huddersfield Examiner :—

"News was received to-day that Private George Bairstow, of "A" Company, 1/5th Dukes, has been killed in action. Private Bairstow was twenty years of age, and the only son of Mr. Ernest Bairstow, of Messrs. Coates & Bairstow, booksellers, Station Street, Huddersfield. Educated at Almondbury Grammar School, he was learning the booksellers' business when War broke out, and he at once joined the 1/5th. The sad news was conveyed in a letter from Captain Stewart, who states that Private Bairstow left the trench to fetch water for breakfast when he was struck on the head by a shrapnel bullet or shell splinter. He was a young man of great promise, and was highly respected. The deep sympathy of a wide circle of friends will go out to his parents in their irreparable loss."

The French Book Trade and the War

WE regret to see from Bibliographie de la France that after being twice mentioned in despatches, Corporal M. Emmanuel Belin, aged twenty-nine, corporal in the 79th Regiment of Infantry, son of M. Tony Belin, was killed gloriously on June 19th, 1915.

Copyright in War time

WE are glad to see that Bibliographie de la France, the official organ of the French book trade, after quoting the declaration of last year of the President, Mr. James Blackwood, and the Council of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, viz., that any attempt to take German or Austrian copyrights would not only be a breach of the Berne Convention, but also a discreditable and dishonourable act, is in full accord with British feeling, and warns its readers not to believe those who pretend that the state of war has affected civil rights.

"The properties of authors of any nationality will continue to be protected by French law, the decree of 1852, and the Berne International Convention."

"Just as we observe the rules of the Hague Convention in spite of their violation by the Germans, so also must we respect the stipulations of the Berne Convention."

"We beg our confrères to give no credence whatever to the statements which are being circulated that it is open to anyone to appropriate literary, musical, geographical, and other works by German, Austrian or even Turkish authors."

We do not believe that our German and Austrian enemies have violated the rights of enemy authors; but, even if they have done so, there is all the greater reason that we should not follow their example. Let there be some oases of humanity in this desert of war and bloodshed.

Canadian Publishing Trade

Sanguine outlook generally

A SURVEY of Canada's commercial conditions and prospects has just been made by the Canadian Northern Railway, being conducted on the same lines as are followed in the taking of the Dominion census. Latest information has been supplied by the various Departments of the Provinces, and, in addition, over 2,000 reports have been received from towns, villages, and the larger industrial centres.

The inquiries made in Ontario regarding the book publishing business show that there is a general slackness. Libraries are not placing the usual volume of orders, particularly in Western Canada. Books on the war feature strongly in the trade, but fiction is only in moderate demand. Business is considered below normal. List prices unchanged. Credits fair. The majority of publishers seem sanguine as to the future in Ontario, and appear to think that if the Western Provinces have a good crop this year there will be more active buying next spring.

She lingered at Bridge till midnight. The clock was striking the hour. Her husband stayed home with the children, his face was a vision soir. He was miffed at his wife's ambition to gather the sordid pelf; he'd a date at a poker party, and wanted some dough himself.—Milwaukee News.

A suggested Press dictatorship

THE most important article in The English Review for August is one by Mr. Austin Harrison; it is a plea for union among journalists, who are described as more intelligent, honest, and statesmanlike than any Government. If only they knew their power and used it, Mr. Harrison says, they could cow the Government, put the Censor in the British Museum, and boss the country and the war and everything else. How are they to do it? Why, by threats of exposure! Here is what Mr. Harrison says:—

"Had our editors possessed any common policy, it is inconceivable that the shell blunders could have been committed, because editors would have known about the shortage—they did know—and they would have gone to the Government and said: 'Gentlemen, you put this right, or we expose you.'"

A free and independent Press is an outcome of a free and independent people, but God forbid that we should ever come under a Press Dictatorship, supported by a Press Gang composed of prominent journalists of the day, their power resting on blackmail "threats of exposure"! Thank goodness, our Press magnates hate each other, either openly or secretly, far too much to combine, and besides, they have too much common sense, or sense in common. We fancy we see the Press Gang waiting on Lord Kitchener and the spokesman, Baron Horatio, saying: "Do this, or we will expose you"; they would, we hope, find they had exposed themselves to grave risk of being shot against a wall in the War Office back garden.

The Regiment Library

OUR new armies have been raised on the system of condensed training. Condensed handbooks form a necessary part of this system, and The Regiment Library was issued to meet the need for brief yet reliable military instruction manuals. These have proved exceedingly popular, and many new editions have been called for.

"Army Drill Made Easy" now appears in its fifth edition, revised up to date. This book contains all the essentials of dismounted drill in simple language, "parade frillings" being omitted.

"How to Use a Rifle or Pistol" enters its fourth edition, and is revised and enlarged, chapters having been added on rifle and pistol shooting at close quarters. This is a practical aspect of the subject that well repays study.

"Signalling and Map Reading Made Easy" is an example of the manner in which these rather complex subjects can be condensed without the omission of any important point. A section on simplified map reading will prove valuable to the beginner.

These handbooks are written and illustrated by the staff of The Regiment, and are published at 6d. net each by Temple Press, Ltd., 7-15, Rosebery Avenue, London, E.C.

The author of "A Beacon for the Blind" goes to help blind soldiers

MISS WINIFRED HOLT left recently for France to organise in the war zone the work of the Committee for Men Blinded in Battle. The aim of the Committee is first to restore the men physically, and then to train them to work. As outlined by the Committee, the occupations possible to blind men range from farm work to Parliament. Miss Holt has worked with and for blind people for years; she is the author of the Life of Henry Fawcett, the blind Postmaster-General, an inspiring biography, just published by Messrs. Constable, appropriately entitled "A Beacon for the Blind," to which Viscount Bryce has written an Introduction. The blind Postmaster-General was a keen angler and fished successfully.

The Queen and Voluntary Aid Nursing

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN has been graciously pleased to accept from Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton a copy of "Kent's Care for the Wounded" (a record of the Voluntary Aid Detachments in Kent, published in aid of the Kent County Fund).

"Her Majesty is greatly interested in reading, and possessing, these records of what the county of Kent has done by voluntary aid nursing."

Early Australiana

FOR the second time within a few years a very early Australian printed book has been discovered in Messrs. Hodgson's rooms. Up to 1901 it was generally accepted that Busby's "Treatise on the Vine" (Sydney, R. Howe, 1825) was the first book printed in Australia. Since then a copy of Barron Field's "First Fruits of Australian Poetry" (Sydney, G. Howe, 1819), was brought to light in Chancery Lane, and the volume was bought for the British Museum by Mr. Quaritch. The latest discovery is an epitome of the Gospels and Acts in Tahitian, bearing the title, "Parau no Iesu Christ," 12mo., Sydney, printed for G. Howe, 1814, which puts back the date of the first Australian printed book five years.

The function of Sea Power

WE imagine that there are a good many people who are getting tired of being told by self-appointed naval experts that not one in a thousand of us understands in the least what our fleet has done and is doing. These amateur exponents of the influence of sea power seem to think that they alone understand the thing which every Briton is most confidently proud of. Some German critic sneeringly said that while we had to go to them to learn the greatness of Shakespeare, we had to go to an American to learn the value of sea power; these critics forget that Shakespeare and Nelson did not produce England; England produced them. The British fleet is the outcome of British character. While other nations talked of sea power, we took it and fashioned our fleet for our needs. To tell the British people, whose sons and relatives officer and man it, that they do not understand their fleet and its value and its work, is the outcome of pure ignorance on the part of people who want to get into the limelight by exposing it. In that excellent monthly, The British Review for August, there is an interesting article by Mr. Bruce Mitford, entitled "The Function of Sea Power," in which he points out the extent to which our acquiescence (now abandoned) in the doctrines of the Declarations of Paris and of London hampered the exercise of our naval supremacy, and suggests that those doctrines were aimed to strike at Great Britain. Mr. Mitford suggests that many further and more drastic steps should be taken. He writes: "The series of unconstitutional Orders in Council which . . . has served to undermine the authority of the Board of Admiralty . . . must follow the Declaration of London into the limbo of follies proved and done with."

All the same, it is not so easy to do all we should like to do. For instance, to declare cotton contraband would quite possibly cause the Americans to declare corn contraband, or, in other words, to prohibit its export—a much more drastic action. Our policy ought to have been to make enormous State purchases of American cotton and prohibit its export from the British empire. It would always be worth its cost and injure Germany more than the loss of all her fleet.

Answer to Correspondent

J. H. G.—It is simply a case of not being able to get it in. In normal times we should have had space for it.

AMBASSADOR and publisher Walter H. Page was piloting some friends from America through the museum at Hastings when he observed an unhappy attendant wearing a military uniform, with a helmet adorned with a chin-strap, at whom an inquisitive tourist was firing all manner of silly questions. Finally, as the tourist turned and was about to quit the building, he asked, "Say, what is that chin-strap under your chin for?" The attendant sighed. "The strap is to rest my jaw when I get tired answering questions," he replied.—Lippincott's.

"The World in Conflict"

ON August 9th, Mr. Unwin will publish Professor L. T. Hobhouse's little volume on the War, "The World in Conflict." It is a study of the psychological causes of the War, of the movements of thought and feeling which have led up to the present crisis, of the meaning of nationalism and nationality, and of the elements of hope for the future of Europe after the conclusion of the present struggle. "By degrees," says Professor Hobhouse, "Germany is uniting the world against her, but it is a world of far more democratic States. The War which will be waged will be more truly a people's war and inspired by ideas of nationality, freedom, and of right. The sacrifice imposed upon our generation is immense, and the loss of young lives must for a generation to come tell upon the output of the best work, yet the price will be worth paying if out of it there arises—for the first time—the conception of a common humanity, not as the dream of a philosopher, but as a popular emotion which has tested and proved itself in the hardest of schools." Professor Hobhouse's book will be read with great interest as the work of a distinguished philosopher who is in close touch with affairs.

The Passing of the Rifle

It has not hitherto been emphasised what an amazing change of attitude this war has effected towards arms used in the field. The editor of The World's Work (published by William Heinemann) in his August issue, makes a feature of several articles on munitions, old and new. Writing of "Weird Implements of War," Mr. F. A. Talbot practically casts the rifle on the scrap heap. He recalls how every effort was exerted to increase the deadliness of this arm. Rapidity of fire was assured by the introduction of the magazine; increased velocity was given to the bullet to secure a greater degree of accuracy of aim at 2,000 yards; and, finally, prodigious effort was expended in training men in the art of handling the weapon with such skill as to bring down the enemy at the maximum bullet-carrying distances.

Yet what has actual warfare revealed? Instead of battling at 2,000 paces the protagonists are waging combat at 40 yards and even less. The rifle as a weapon might just as well, according to Mr. Talbot, be consigned to the scrap heap.

The magazine is of little avail because it has been superseded by the machine gun. Marksmanship is of little account because the arm is used at ranges where one could scarcely fail to score a hit if firing blindfolded, while as for the infliction of small, clean wounds! Well, the tendency is not so much to knock your adversary over as to blow him to pieces or to riddle him like a sieve.

Curiously enough the rifle has come into prominence in an application which it was maintained in many quarters would never occur in a modern war—as a handle for the bayonet.

Letters to the Editor

A. Mary F. Robinson

SIR,—Supplementing Mr. A. R. Waller's letter in your issue of July 31st, in regard to the writings of this distinguished lady, I find in my records that her first book of poems, "An Italian Garden," was published in 1886, and I append a list of ten books with which her name is connected.

"English Studies," by James Darmesteter is her translation from the French and her book on Froissart was written in French and translated by Miss Frances Poynter.

1. "An Italian Garden," by Mary F. Robinson. T. Fisher Unwin. 1886.

2. "Romantic Ballads," by Mary F. Robinson. T. Fisher Unwin. 1888.

3. "The End of the Middle Ages: Essays and Questions in History," by A. Mary F. Robinson (Madame James Darmesteter). T. Fisher Unwin. 1888.

4. "The New Arcadia, being Idylls of Country Life, with Other Poems," by A. Mary F. Robinson (Madame James Darmesteter). T. Fisher Unwin. 1890.

5. "Lyrics." Selected from the Works of A. Mary F. Robinson (Madame James Darmesteter). Cameo Series. T. Fisher Unwin. 1891.

6. "The Collected Poems: Lyrical and Narrative" of A. Mary F. Robinson (Madame Duclaux). T. Fisher Unwin. MCMII.

7. "Retrospect and other Poems," by A. Mary F. Robinson (Madame James Darmesteter). Cameo Series. T. Fisher Unwin. 1893.

8. "Froissart," by Mary Darmesteter. Translated from the French by E. Frances Poynter. London. T. Fisher Unwin. 1895.

9. "English Studies," by James Darmesteter. Translated by Mary Darmesteter (A. Mary F. Robinson). T. Fisher Unwin. 1896.

10. "The French Procession: A Pageant of Great Writers," by Madame Mary Duclaux (A. Mary F. Robinson). T. Fisher Unwin. MCMIX.

Yours sincerely,

T. FISHER UNWIN.

The Publishers' Association Christmas Catalogue

DEAR SIR,—I am sorry to see from the report of the Publishers' Association meeting that their Christmas catalogue is to be confined to the books of those publishers who advertise in it. When I was canvassed for orders a few weeks ago I made specific enquiries on this point, and although the assurances which I received were only verbal, I certainly received the impression that the Christmas catalogue would cover the whole field of publishing, whether the books were published by advertisers or not. A publication which does not cover the whole ground of Christmas books is of no use to a bookseller, and I have consequently cancelled my small order for copies. Whatever the advertisement pages may contain, the editorial portion (if there is to be any editorial matter, as there should be) ought to give a representative selection of the whole field of publishing, such a list as is contained in the New Book section of Barnicott's indispensable catalogue, which, however, fills a quite different need in other respects to that which should be filled by a publishers' Christmas catalogue.—Yours faithfully,

ALFRED WILSON.

Notices of Books

From Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd.—"To All the World (except Germany)," by Arthur Edward Stilwell. Of all the books written about the War, this is one of the most earnest, though perhaps not one of the most wise. Mr. Stilwell, it appears, is an American financier of renown, and there is something curiously American in many of his pages. His book, for example, is dedicated to "Albert, King of the Belgians, and Henry Ford, of Detroit, Michigan." It is, however, vigorously written, and the author is imbued with fine and noble ideals, and though perhaps "all the world" will not read his book, it will be widely studied both in this country and in America.

From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd.—"Roumania and the Great War," by R. W. Seton-Watson, D.Litt. Dr. Seton-Watson's lecture gives the salient features of Roumanian history, and provides a brief estimate of Roumanian policy in relation to the Great War. Though admirably written and scholarly in tone, it will be widely read. Indeed, the little book should become extremely popular, for it is both concise and vivid. The appendices, which occupy more than a third of the volume, provide statistics upon which must necessarily rest any estimate of the probable frontier between Roumania and Hungary, and between Roumania and Serbia, after the War.

From the Same.—"Justice and the Child," by Douglas Pepler. We have here a direct and outspoken study of the law in relation to the child offender. That such a study is necessary will be conceded when it is remembered that over 30,000 children are yearly brought before the magistrates as having committed an offence, and over half as many again as being offended against. Mr. Pepler is anxious to spread the desire to help among the many who would come forward if they understood the need. He has much that is useful to say on remand homes, the juvenile court, institutions, voluntary service, &c. It is a penetrating and wise book.

From the Same.—"Citizens to Be," by M. L. V. Hughes. Preface by J. H. Muirhead, M.A., LL.D. One doubts if Mr. Hughes' book will receive the attention it deserves until the War is over, for it demands quiet and prolonged thought from the reader. It is described by the author as "a social study of health, wisdom and goodness with special reference to elementary schools" and it constitutes one of the most important contributions of recent years to the study of education. The entire subject is dealt with in a broad, humane spirit. One perceives that the author has had great experience, and that he has thought closely on the subjects he has studied.

From The Wireless Press, Ltd.—"The Year-Book of Wireless Telegraphy and Telephony, 1915." The Wireless Year-Book is growing to an enormous size. The whole world comes under its survey, and no fewer than four calendars—our own almanac, the Jewish, the Mohammedan and the Old Style calendars—are brought into use. The record of the year's developments make enthralling reading, whilst the wealth of information contained between the covers of the book is invaluable to all connected with wireless telegraphy and telephony.

New Editions.—Mr. H. N. Brailsford, whose "The War of Steel and Gold" has already passed through two editions, has taken advantage of the preparation of a third and cheaper edition (published by Messrs. Bell), to add a new chapter ("A Postscript on Peace and Change"), and "A Sketch of a Federal League."

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

| The Soul of Germany. A twelve years' Study of the People from within—1902-14 | THOMAS F. A. SMITH, Ph.D. | A Journal of Impressions | MAY SINCLAIR |
| Mr. Smith does more to familiarise the English-speaking people with German life from the German's own point of view than any other authority. | | A record of impressions written within the sound of the guns. It describes Miss Sinclair's visit to Belgium with an ambulance. She draws her pictures of the scenes in this devastated country with a vividness of style which is at once arresting and convincing. | |

Oxford India Paper edition, in leather, 3/6 net.

The Rev. Dr. Andrew Murray wrote:—

"I have been looking out for some intimation of the publication of 'The Dynamic of All-Prayer.' I do trust that you will not allow anything to hinder you in giving its message to the Church of Christ."

The Rev. Evan H. Hopkins says:—

This book "is sure to be warmly welcomed."

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Whyte says:—

"The writer is a man of true spiritual genius, and no one can read his book without feeling and confessing that."

The Rev. Prebendary Webb-Peploe says:—

"I trust that Mr. Fleming's book may have a wide circulation and be much blessed of God."

The Rev. Prebendary F. S. Webster says:—

"It is written with a force and a spiritual insight which will be most helpful. It is, I think, just the message needed at this critical time. I hope it may have a very wide circulation."

The "Life of Faith" says:—

"The most remarkable book of the year."

Events arising from the War*

British Government
Publications, &c.

WE have received from the Controller of H.M. Stationery Office a 52-page demy 8vo. pamphlet giving particulars of the publications "issued by His Majesty's Stationery Office in connection with Events arising from the State of War," which concern every part of the Empire. These publications include :—

1. Acts of Parliament.
2. Statutory Rules and Orders.
3. London Gazettes and Supplements, including Proclamations, Notices, &c.
4. Parliamentary Papers.
5. Debates in the two Houses of Parliament, beginning with Sir Edward Grey's famous "Statement" on August 3rd, and Mr. Asquith's equally famous "Announcement" on August 4th of our Ultimatum to Germany, his account of the Violation of Belgian Neutrality on August 5th, and the Vote of Credit for 100 millions and the appointment of Lord Kitchener as Secretary of State for War on August 6th, down to June 30th, 1915.

This brochure can be obtained (gratis) through the Sale Agents for H.M. Stationery Office, Messrs. Wyman & Sons, Ltd., 29, Brema Buildings, London, E.C.; E. Ponsonby, Ltd., 116, Grafton Street, Dublin; or from the Agencies at home and abroad of Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, 1, Adelphi Terrace, London, W.C.

* Booksellers are advised to read the warning advertisement of the Admiralty in this issue of the P.C., greatly restricting and forbidding the sale of naval war books.—Ed.

London Gazettes and Parliamentary Papers

The references to these are numerous and include despatches from our war commanders on sea and land and papers on the European Crisis, the Censorship, Belgium, Finance, German Outrages, India, Colonies, British Dominions, Distress, Russia, Turkey, Treaties, S. Africa, War Risks, &c.

When we examine this most useful 52-page Official Index of War Work done by the Mother of Parliaments since August 3rd, 1914, in addition to the usual office work, we feel that it is rather unfair to grudge her a six weeks' holiday. The work embraces such a vast field that we wish that there were a picture on the cover of the Houses of Parliament with that finest bit of colouring in the world—in the Universe—the British flag flying from the great tower. Since Sir Edward Grey's grave warning on August 3rd, 1914, that war might be the only way, the eyes of the whole world have been, as it were, fixed on the Empire's flag on Parliament's great tower, with wonder as to how it would be "kept flying." The call to arms went by wireless from beneath that flag to our people at home and scattered all over the world and to all our fellow-subjects of other races. What a thing to remember for ever, the way the call of Britannia to her sons and daughters was answered, and is being answered, and will be answered to the victorious end. Millions in the Homeland, hundreds of thousands in all the lands which have the right, the glorious inestimable right, to fly the British flag have responded and are responding to the call. We are proud indeed of Canada, of Australasia, of India, of South Africa. In all our lands of the Empire, on all the seas which weld them into one, we have for half a century or more allowed the Teuton to come and go freely, to buy and sell freely. We have allowed him to kill our trade with tariffs and crush our traders with his unfair competition, to drive our steamships off ocean routes with his state-aided companies. No wonder he thought we should allow him to become our and the world's tyrant and dictator. Often in these pages for many years past we have united in uttering the warnings and surprise aroused by our national inaction in view of the tremendous German bid for sea-power. Although at this moment the greatest and most powerful fleet in the world, next to our own, is still intact within a few hours' striking distance of our shores, although Antwerp, the world's greatest port in position and importance, is in the German power, we know the life blood of the Empire pulsates in the constant ebb and flow of trade across the seas, calmly indifferent to the pin pricks of Germany's undersea, underhand, attacks, regretting only the loss of innocent human life, sacred to all humanity, save only to these inhuman Germans. They laugh and count up with ghoulish delight the tale of fishermen, of merchant sailors, of men, women and children, passengers on the seas, destroyed by their paltry deviltry. But we count too! and in the day of reckoning our loss will be remembered.

As we pointed out in our last Export Number our trade is not affected by the German "blockade." It is affected by the general disarrangement caused by the War, but a glance at this issue, and at our number for July 31st, 1915, will show how large is the output of new books and new editions in this central citadel of the Empire.

One effect of this War is the very happy one that it makes us find a pleasure in doing business with our people all over the world, and with our Allies, which was not experienced before—at least with nothing like the same depth of feeling. As for there being "no friendship in business"—well after this War generations will pass before that mercenary maxim revives, if ever it does.

Notes and Announcements

MR. GALSWORTHY'S new novel "The Freelanders," has just finished its serial course in Scribner's Magazine, and is promised by Mr. Heinemann in book form towards the end of the month.

Two American professors, Dr. Frank W. Blackmar and Dr. John L. Gillin, will issue on August 17th, through Messrs. Macmillan & Co., a volume entitled "Outlines of Sociology." They believe that the book will not prove superfluous, because there is at the present time a growing interest being taken in Sociology, and because the rapid growth of the subject makes a new volume on it necessary every few years.

On the same date Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will also publish "The Wealth and Income of the People of the United States," by Dr. W. I. King.

We have often noted the attractive style in which Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co. bring out their six shilling novels. The most recent example is a story by Fred M. White, entitled "Paul Quentin," which will be found well worth reading by those who like a novel of mystery, crime and love. The hero, Dugdale, is an angler, and under pretence of angling, fishes out important clues to the mysteries he is set by the author to unravel. The rich and beautiful heroine, Mary Pearson, is one of those strong-minded young ladies who like to have their own way. In spite of himself, she makes the hero marry her. She practically proposes to him, but not until she is certain of his love.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton have published many important War books. There are many good reasons for hoping for a very large sale for one of the latest, entitled "The Way of the Red Cross." In the first place, it has the splendid distinction of a brief preface by the lady who is so dear to all British hearts, Queen Alexandra. The Queen takes the opportunity to "thank every individual nurse who is nursing our brave wounded soldiers and sailors." Her Majesty since first she set foot on our shores has enjoyed the deep love of the people. Then all profits from the sale of this work are to go to The Times Fund for the Sick and Wounded, which already exceeds the enormous sum of over 1½ millions. Then of the work itself, taking them in alphabetical order—

Mr. Arnold Bennett says it is "Very well done."

Mr. Joseph Conrad says it is "Just the thing."

Sir A. Conan Doyle says it is "Quite admirable."

Mr. John Galsworthy says it is "A fine book."

Mr. Anthony Hope says it is "Most inspiring."

Mr. William de Morgan says it is "Of engrossing interest."

Mr. Eden Philpotts says it is "A Grand Story."

Surely Mr. E. C. Vivian and Mr. J. E. Hodder Williams are to be congratulated on such testimony to the value of their good work in such a splendid cause.

Messrs. Jordan & Sons, Ltd., who publish so many useful law handbooks and manuals, have published a second edition of "Table A. in the First Schedule of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908," with Notes and Comments by D. G. Hemmant, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

The University Tutorial Press will shortly publish the following books:—"Anthology of English Prose" (for use in schools and colleges), by S. E. Goggin, M.A., and A. R. Weekes, M.A., and "A First Course in Engineering Science," by P. J. Haler, B.Sc., A.M.I.E.E., A.I.E.E., and A. H. Stuart, B.Sc., F.R.A.S.

Messrs. Andrew Melrose, Ltd., have published at 2s. 6d. net a most timely and valuable little work by W. O. Pitt, entitled "Italy and the Unholy Alliance." We hope it may have a large sale, as it shows clearly the immense value of the forces military, naval and political which Italy adds to those of the Allies. It is a history of Italy during the last hundred years, explains Italy's legitimate aspirations, and shows how she will attain them. The Turks and Germans are under no illusion as to the effect of Italian intervention. Turkey has had too recent experience of Italy's power.

The first series of Punch postcards having met with so welcome a reception, Messrs. Jarrold & Sons, the publishers, are shortly issuing a fifth series, which will include many of the recent popular subjects.

Mr. Eveleigh Nash has published "The Public and Private Life of Kaiser William II," by Edward Legge. It contains a good deal of interesting anecdote, especially in connection with the Kaiser's relatives. Chapter XI is the story of what the author saw with the Germans in France in the war of 1870. There is no violent abuse of the Emperor; in fact, the stones thrown at him are chiefly sarcasms invented by his own subjects.

"Dark Rosaleen" the latest volume from the pen of Miss M. E. Francis (Mrs. Blundell), is announced for publication by the House of Cassell on the 19th inst.

"The Lame Englishman," by Warwick Deeping, is to be the latest addition to Cassell's series of sixpenny novels. With the present Italian campaign it has a topical interest, as it is the story of an Englishman's adventures with Garibaldi's legions.

"The War and After," by Sir Oliver Lodge, will be widely read. It is issued by Messrs. Methuen at one shilling. Fighting righteously for a righteous cause, Sir Oliver foresees new righteousness and honour for us and our Allies. He hopes for a peaceful Europe, rearranged on national and racial lines, and a new England, freed from the pettiness of party, eagerly succouring the unlucky and reforming abuses. "The War and After" is described as "a great little book, indeed a splendid inspiration."

Messrs. George Newnes, Ltd., announce that an authentic life of the Premier, by Mr. Harold Spender, will be published next month. This is one of two important additions to the Half-Crown Series of Popular Biographies which Messrs. Newnes are issuing. The second is the "Life of David Lloyd George," by H. Du Parcq. Messrs. Newnes inform us that these books will contain a great deal of important and interesting new material, and should excite considerable interest at the present moment.

A small collection of poems by Mr. H. De Vere Stacpoole is about to be issued by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. under the title of "The North Sea and Other Poems."

Messrs. Alston Rivers, Ltd., will publish shortly a new work by Mrs. O'Connor entitled "Mary's Meadow Papers."

The story of the Angels of Mons has gained currency, and is now known practically throughout the English-speaking world. It has become so well known that people are beginning to speculate as to its probability, and many say that an unseen agent did assist in holding back the German troops during the retreat of our Army from Mons, whereas of course it was British shot and shell and bayonets. The origin of the idea is due to a journalist, Arthur Machen, and in a book just published by Simpkin, Marshall & Co., entitled "The Bowmen and other Legends of the War," the matter is explained in its entirety.

One of the best up-to-date accounts of Warsaw is to be found in Mr. Ninian Hill's recent book on "Poland and the Polish Question," published by George Allen & Unwin, Ltd. It contains many excellent illustrations.

Shilling editions of popular books are announced for immediate publication by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, one dealing with Home Nursing, by Miss Dobree, with a preface by Mary Scharlieb, M.D. (Lond.), the other being Colonel Beca's "Manual of Infantry Tactics," translated by Captain A. F. Custance.

"Tried Favourites Cookery Book." This popular and useful cookery book has had a marvellous sale. In twelve years 233,000 copies have been sold, and the publisher has another edition in the press. The special feature of the book is its practical and economical recipes, which in war time is a desideratum. It is published by J. B. Fairgrieve, Edinburgh, and Horace Marshall & Son, London.

A very topical work will be issued by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co., on Monday next, entitled "The Story of Warsaw," by Rothay Reynolds, M.A. (University Extension Lecturer in Russian History). It gives a popular account of the famous mediæval city, with its beautiful buildings, and contains sixty-eight photographs.

Messrs. Arrowsmith, Ltd., of Bristol, will publish immediately "Was it a Marriage?" by Edith Staniforth, and "The Melody of Death," by the author of "The Four Just Men."

In many ways the best of the poems bred by this War are those of Miss Jessie Pope, and we are glad to see another volume of them has been published by Grant Richards, entitled, "More War Poems," and that the first volume is already in its third edition. Such a poem as "Sea Sorrow" proves Miss Pope's muse to have a range beyond clever rhymes for the times.

A sad interest attaches to "Love in Fetters," by Richard Marsh, as almost on the day Messrs. Cassell published his clever story Mr. Marsh died suddenly of heart failure. His good, strong, healthy novels were much liked, especially by men readers, who looked forward to a smoke over a new Marsh book with pleasure. In his latest, we fear also his last, the interest is well sustained to the end. Of course the mystery is largely based on situations the high improbability of which none know better than the author. For instance, the manner in which the hero, unarmed and at the mercy of a desperate gang, suddenly provides himself with two heavy revolvers—well, it makes a great draft on our belief in what is and is not possible. This scene, in which the hero defends himself and his lovely sweetheart, is depicted in the cover design by Mr. J. Dewar Mills. It is almost the best thing of the kind we have seen; it will easily sell an edition.

Messrs. Jarrold & Sons have published an interesting study of "Modern Germany and Her Historians," by Antoine Guillaud, Professor of History at l'Ecole Polytechnique Suisse. The modern German Kultur is the horrid offspring of so many fathers that to trace its origins is not an easy or attractive task. Professor Antoine has no difficulty in showing that many of the makers of the beginnings of modern Germany would be horrified if they could see how she is—we will not say ending, for there can be no ending for a great nation like Germany—but the way she is going.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. have begun the publication of cheaper editions at 2s. 6d. net per volume of the novels and tales of M. E. Francis (Mrs. Francis Blundell, whose work has so often been favourably noticed in our columns. These new issues are attractive in appearance, with what might almost be called farmyard wrappers, and illustrations by Claud C. Du Pré Cooper. They are just the books to read when by force of circumstances you are unable to get away into the country. To recommend them is a pleasure.

Messrs. Nisbet have just published an additional volume in their rs. net series of popular novels entitled "In accordance with the Evidence," by Oliver Onions.

C. Stobart's well-known book, with all the original illus.; Poems of To-day, an Anthology of Contemporary Poetry for Schools, selected by the English Association; The Accolade, by Ethel Sidgwick; Pelle the Conqueror, pt. 3, translated from the Danish of Martin Andersen Nexø, by Bernard Miall; The Colonisation of Australia, 1829-1842, by Richard Charles Mills.

Admiralty Warning to Booksellers

ELSEWHERE in this issue we publish an Admiralty warning to booksellers respecting the sale of certain naval books during the continuance of the War. In this connection Messrs. S. Low, Marston & Co, Ltd., write:—

"Since July 7th we suspended publication of all Mr. Jane's books that contained any reference to His Majesty's ships, and in consequence our friends can have little or no stock.

"Those, however, who find that they have one or two of the original editions will kindly note that they should not return them to us, but make a claim for compensation to the Government under the new Act of Parliament.

This year "Fighting Ships" will be published in two editions. For the book sellers a Public Edition will be issued containing no reference to His Majesty's ships, but every subscriber to this edition will, at a time to be fixed by the Admiralty, be entitled to the British section free of charge, making their copy complete. A numbered voucher entitling the subscriber to this is contained in every copy.

"The other edition, with the British section intact, has been prepared for His Majesty's Government, and can in no circumstances be supplied through the trade, but solely by His Majesty's Stationary Office, and then only to accredited officials, Service officers and others through their commanding officers. Official notice has been given of this.

"The new edition of 'The World's Warships,' 2s. 6d. net, published four weeks ago, excludes all mention of His Majesty's ships, and consequently can be sold freely."

How the Panama Canal works in War time

"UP to March 1st, 1915, the earnings (according to Railroad Men) from tolls on vessels using the Panama Canal, according to the Canal Record, fell short of meeting the expenses of operation and maintenance of the canal by $261,098. From the beginning of the present fiscal year on July 1st, 1914, to March 1st, 1915, a period of eight months, the total expenditure attributed to operation and maintenance was $2,595,613. The total earnings from tolls in that period were $2,334,515."

The deficiency is encouraging as being so small, seeing that nearly all the old world is at war. German ships alone, if they could have used the Canal, would have made up the deficiency.

Scandal about— Shakespeare

(The Latest from Cologne.)

By G. H. POWELL.

WE are doubtless rapidly approaching a point in history at which no kind of action or thought reported from Germany or concerning Germans will any longer possess the power of surprising us. But in the brief interval that may supervene before this climax is reached there are quasi-intellectual phenomena blossoming forth in the hothouse of the Odium Germanicum of which the full flavour and efflorescence must be caught at once, before it is eclipsed by the revival of commonsense. Of anti-English scandal we have perhaps had enough, but scandal—not about Queen Elizabeth, but about Shakespeare—may possess a finer novelty.

That the pride and glory of England was long since captured by Germany will be no news. The real shock to all honest Britons will be the announcement that the bard—under pressure, doubtless, of cruel torture probably applied in the form of scholastic criticism—has turned traitor to his country.

More than one anti-British sentiment lately evolved by German intelligence has appeared to our insular view a trifle far-fetched. But all, one fancies, will be eclipsed by the address which a certain Dr. Matthew Schwann, described as a popular essayist and historian, lately delivered at Cologne. Of the Professor's history readers must form their own opinions. Popular he cannot fail to be in his treatment of the problem of the moment.

For what is the real trouble? That England cannot or will not understand either the raison d'être of German hatred or the depths of her own iniquity. It thus becomes the painful duty of the German philosopher to lead us by strange, obscure and untrodden paths through the dark and treacherous mazes of English character to that central inferno of wickedness which is the source not only of the present war, but of all the miseries afflicting the civilised world.

This is no light task, and we might wager a large sum that of all our philosophers and historians not one would guess the true solution. It is this: We have, by the artful use of Shakespeare (and other great men) deceived the German nation into the belief that we are a great and distinguished people. We have, as it were, "waved the white flag" of Shakespeare and lured the artless German to a fatal friendship, an infatuated admiration. But only for a while. The fraud is now fully exposed.

Researches conducted (at Louvain and Rheims?) and involving the study of various "scraps of paper" during the autumn and winter of 1914-15, have revealed to German intellects the fact that Shakespeare was the enemy of England, and is now the spiritual ally of her mortal foe.

But let us quote the document: "England," Dr. Schwann asserts, "is surprised at our hatred, and declares that she cannot understand it. Yet, England has well understood (the italics are our own, the facts Dr. Schwann's) how to exploit for her own benefit our love and respect for the great men of her past, and to hold us in delusion as to her true character. . . ."

How did she accomplish this? By artfully concealing the fact (which few would divine by the light of nature) that her "great men" were not representative of—but hostile to—the British people. "The fight of the great men in England was a fight against brutality, baseness and selfishness. In this fight, in England they have been defeated, but in the world they have won. And it is because of this, because we love the great minds of England, because we love Shakespeare and his genius of truthfulness, that we are now fighting for life and death against England."

Germany, allied with the spirit of Shakespeare, is thus endeavouring to complete the task he failed to accomplish,* to eliminate brutality, baseness and selfishness—and lying, from the English nature.

* * * *

It may be doubted if the scientific records of monomania comprise anything much more remarkable than this latest of German attempts to discover in past history a basis for the novel emotion roused by the workings of a "yeasty conscience."

Hatred for England has got to be kept up at all costs—for, if it breaks down, Germany herself, our friend up to a few months ago, our affectionate ally (we must believe), had we only consented to the sacrifice of Belgium, must appear the object of hate—even to herself.

And just as music plates and domestic utensils have been commandeered wholesale to supply material for her artillery fire, so any drivel which the perverted scientific mind can present in the ghost of a logical form, will serve as fuel for the flame of a wasteful, unchristian and altogether puerile emotion, which we can neither recognize nor return.

Shakespeare, however, and the German appreciation of him being intelligible facts, it is refreshing to turn from the sophistical monkey-tricks of (the, we trust, not very eminent) Doctor Schwann, to one of the greatest (if not the greatest of) contributions to Shakespearian study, the work, as few will be surprised to hear, of a German, in which the relations of that study and influence, both to Germany and England, are eloquently discussed. In the learned and luminous "Commentaries" (1850) of Gervinus, that most conscientious of scholars and writers approaches the subject in a warmly human spirit. He is not thinking only of literature, much less of England, but in the main, of the education of the German people (to whom he considers it his incidental mission "to exhibit . . . their dishonour, their true vocation and their hopes"), an education largely to be effected through Shakespearian influences.

As to any idea of dissociating the great men of England from England herself, "No one," he writes, "will be so full of delusion and folly as to think that a poet and a philosopher thus qualified (he is speaking of Shakespeare and Bacon as separate entities) had been cast by chance among a people thus conditioned. One national spirit, and the same practical hearty sense of life which has created this state and this popular freedom, have also fashioned a poetry so full of life and a philosophy so rich in experience."

These influences, if any, would, Gervinus thought, assist the regeneration of the German character, of the "tame romantic or fantastic poetry," the "spiritualistic philosophy" of which on the whole he has felt compelled to speak with somewhat contemptuous censure, as affording no adequate preparation for the "great career" awaiting Germany. (Is not Europe now suffering from that inadequacy?) Clearly, indeed, as clearly as he considers German literature provincial and scholastic in the light of such luminaries as Bacon and Shakespeare, does he recognize the true hope of Germany to lie—alas for the latter-day professors who have prostituted the sanctity of learning to the corruption of politics!—in her evolution on English lines.

Nothing else is so obviously necessary. "The more decidedly we acquire delight in such productions"—not Bernhardt manuals nor official apologies, nor Songs of Hate, but Shakespeare and Shakespearian literature—"the more decidedly shall we ripen into a capacity for fashioning our own active life into conformity with that which these migrated forefathers have exhibited to all the world for imitation." There is nothing, needless to say, of particular novelty, nothing even particularly flattering to England in this summary of the matter.

"Germany" is even now a young, very young, Teutonic and Protestant nation, but lately, as it were, started on an Imperial career. Whom should she imitate but an older Teutonic and Protestant nation, of infinitely greater experience and established supremacy? Germany's personal interest in Shakespeare, Gervinus naturally associates with her desire for "an Elizabethan age," her sense of fellowship with the greatness, enterprise and hope of those days.

Nowhere in literature is that first sense of a great future so magnificently embalmed. The modern German (swan or goose) is welcome to its generous inspiration.

The Shakespeare movement, in fact, offered grand opportunities, of which the greatest German intellects eagerly availed themselves.

Here was nothing petty, nothing insular, not even "Imperial." Here was the large spirit of the "spacious times," the elemental passion and laughter of humanity, the breadth of view, the elastic humanity destined more than any other single influence to unite the European world.

But there is one vital preliminary commentary upon it all. The convert must approach the shrine in the right spirit.

He "must be free or die," who would "speak the tongue that Shakespeare spake"; and the age of Gervinus himself saw the evolution of an Imperialist anti-Democratic ideal which demanded "not great scholars but obedient subjects." And the great philosopher would have wept passionate tears to witness the modern recession from his high humane ideals of a generation which seems to have lost even the primary key to the comprehension of anything superior to themselves—an elementary sense of humour.

Hokus: "What's the matter with Flubdub? He looks as though he didn't have a friend in the world." Pokus: "Oh, he's still keeping his New Year resolutions."—Judge.

Japan's great Foreign Minister—Count Hayashi

MR. EVELEIGH NASH, who publishes so many important biographies and memoirs, now gives us "The Secret Memoirs of Count Tadasu Hayashi," edited by A. M. Pooley, late exhibitor of Clare College, Cambridge. One of the most important agreements ever arranged between two peoples is the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. So far it has proved of immense value to Japan, and since August, 1914, of no slight assistance to Great Britain, although Japan was doing her own work quite as much as ours in destroying German power in the Far East. This work is indispensable to all who wish to get a clear idea of international politics as affecting Japan and China and ourselves and the rest of the world. Count Hayashi in many respects resembled the late Lord Salisbury. Mr. Pooley, who knew him personally, gives a very interesting account of his career and of his life work, which included the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, the Franco-Japanese Agreement, the Russo-Japanese Convention, the American-Japanese Agreement, 1908. In appendices copies of these agreements, &c., are given. It was Hayashi, according to Mr. Pooley, who "Killed the long-established friendship between America and Japan, for which has been substituted on one side an openly expressed dislike and suspicion, and on the other a swelling hatred, which is only kept within manageable bounds by official repression." Even such an unprejudiced observer as the late Admiral A. T. Mahan in talks with us never hid his opinion that we should one day rue our policy of backing up Japan against the other Powers. The Germans of course were mad with us and said we were conjuring up the "Yellow Peril." But Britain and Japan have no reason to regret their mutual trust, and in "The Blonde Beast" we have certainly had to tackle a peril far more deadly than any even the Kaiser painted to frighten the world.

The Wireless World

THAT excellent illustrated monthly magazine, The Wireless World, published at Marconi House, London, is getting on like a house on fire. When we first noticed it, little over two years ago, it was just a few pages of text; now it is a full-blown magazine, with a big and growing list of advertisers. The price is only 3d.; we wish we could say, 3d. net.

The anniversary of the opening of the War has inspired the editorial for the August number. The record briefly outlined of the achievements of wireless telegraphy during this period well justifies the headline of "A Crowded Year." The final paragraph is, perhaps, worth quoting, because it gives a key to the whole article: "Our ancestors with their poetic idealism used to picture the air as peopled by invisible spirit-strife contemporaneous with the struggles on the surface of the earth. The Valkyria of our northern ancestors form only typical instances of a widespread belief. To-day we have turned this poetic fiction into a reality; and perhaps it is hardly too much to say that the strife in the æther ranks only second to the titanic struggles beneath it."

An extremely interesting record of research work in connection with the Aurora Borealis and its influence on wireless transmission, by Mr. H. M. Dowsett, is contributed, under the title of "The Physical and Electrical State of the Atmosphere." The article deals with the various layers which surround the surface of the earth, especially from the point of view of their electrical condition.

Of intensely topical interest is the article entitled "Germany's Transatlantic Wireless Schemes."

The chapters devoted to the standard features known as "Wireless Telegraphy in the War" and "Maritime Wireless," furnish unusually interesting reading. Amongst the illustrations, we may enumerate pictures of Senator Marconi on Active War Service, the Field Wireless of the South African Army (which contributed so materially to the success of General Botha's campaign), and two interesting views of that unfortunate victim of German piracy, the hospital ship Rohilla.

We find a number of miscellaneous items of technical interest. The review of the proceedings of the Institute of Radio Engineers (which appears under the heading of the "Digest of Wireless Literature") includes a full summary of the various papers and discussions which formed the body of the Institute's proceedings. This same "Digest" contains also a review of some interesting points concerning submarines by a lieutenant in the United States Navy, which were recently raised in the Journal of the American Society of Naval Engineers. Some important details with regard to the wireless transmission of photographs are dealt with in correspondence—the answers to which are contributed by Mr. Marcus J. Martin.

How to become a Wireless Operator

The promise contained in a former number, that the editor would furnish information to prospective wireless operators is here carried out. The hints, both as to the training and the necessary steps for obtaining employment, are up to date and practical.

The encouraging reports and balance sheets of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co., and of the Marconi International Marine Communication Co., find their place in this issue.

Centenary

The Lichfield Mercury of 1815

THE Lichfield Mercury has just celebrated its centenary. It was established on July 7th, 1815, the printer and publisher being James Amphlett, whose portrait, as a venerable old gentleman, now adorns the editor's sanctum.

The first issue is a small, unassuming sheet of four pages. Three columns on the front page are taken up with a "Prospectus" of the paper, which, for dignity of style and elegance of diction (barring one or two "split infinitives") it would be hard to beat.

FOR THE INFORMATION of BOOKSELLERS and OTHERS

THE ADMIRALTY find it necessary to issue a warning that books containing profile outlines, drawings, photographs, or silhouettes of H.M. Ships, as, for instance, Jane's "Fighting Ships," Jane's "The World's Warships," Jane's "Warships at a Glance," Jane's "British Naval Recognition Book" (all published by Sampson Low, Marston & Co.), "The Fleets of the World" (Eveleigh Nash), "The Naval Pocket Book" (Thacker & Co.), Brassey's "Naval Annual" (Wm. Clowes & Sons), &c., must in future be regarded as coming under Regulation 18 of the Defence of the Realm Regulations.

This Regulation forbids the collecting, recording, publishing or communicating of any information with respect to the description or condition of any of H.M. Ships of such a nature as is calculated to be or might be directly or indirectly useful to the enemy, and likewise forbids any person to have in his possession without lawful authority or excuse any document containing any such information.

It is important, therefore, that all persons having copies of such books in their possession for purposes of sale should withhold them from sale, and that no dealings in copies of such books, whether by way of sale or otherwise, should take place during the continuance of the War.

New editions of such books should omit all drawings, &c., respecting H.M. Ships, and, subject to this condition, may be sold as usual.

"America fallen!"

MR. J. BERNARD WALKER'S American "Battle of Dorking," which he entitled "America Fallen! the Sequel to the European War," is, naturally, disturbing the American people, and, in consequence, it is having a large sale. An English edition has been brought out by the well-known international publishing house of G. P. Putnam's Sons, at 1s. net, and the booklet is being read very widely here. Whether it is the direct result of Mr. Walker's book or not, it is the fact that Americans are bestirring themselves over the position of the U.S.A., in case of war. Major G. H. Putnam, Litt.D., the head of G. P. Putnam's Sons, writes an introduction to "America Fallen!"

"A picture book of British history"

FROM the Cambridge University Press we have received Volume 2 of "A Picture Book of British History," compiled by S. C. Roberts, M.A., of which Volume 1 was favourably noticed by the P.C. plus a few minor criticisms, when it was published. We are glad to see that "in deference to certain criticisms of the first volume the notes have been made considerably fuller." There are 200 illustrations, for the most part reproductions of actual illustrations of the period, and with these are given on the opposite page brief notes. It is interesting to note that the art of portrait painting is no "forrader" at the present day than it was when Vandyck, Peter Lely, Holbein, &c., made imperishable portraits of their great contemporaries. There is nothing on title or in contents to show how long this work is going on—but we hope for ever; the price, folio boards, is 3s. 6d. net per volume.

"Life and letters in the Italian Renaissance"

UNDER the above title Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. have published a charming book by Christopher Hare, author of "Men and Women of the Italian Reformation," &c. It is an attempt, by one who has long and carefully studied it, to describe the life and letters of the Italian Renaissance. "The poet, the humanist, the 'Novelle' writer, the historian, the diplomatist, and the gifted letter-writer, all pass before us in magnificent procession, from Lorenzo the Magnificent to Machiavelli and Baldasare Castiglioni. As we read their glowing pages, we see arise before us a clear and vivid picture of the sumptuous life of the Golden Age with all its startling lights and shades."

No work of 300 pages could attempt to do more than glance generally at all that great Renaissance period, but we know none that within such limits does it so well. Mr. Hare has a very appreciative notice of Sannazzaro, and gives some charming renderings into English from his elegies and Arcadia which, as he says, has a special interest for us since from it our Sir Philip Sydney drew his inspiration.

There are some good reproductions of famous pictures and portraits illustrating the period.

Japan

As this is our Export Number of the P.C. and it will presently be on its way over sea in every direction, in increased numbers, we again call attention to a fat little volume of over 800 pages, with eight maps in colour and 21 plans, entitled "Terry's Japanese Empire, including Korea and Formosa, with chapters on Manchuria, the Trans-Siberian Railway, and the chief ocean routes to Japan." It is a great deal more than what it modestly calls itself—"A Guide Book for Travellers," by T. Philip Terry, F.R.G.S. The information it contains on Japanese history, art, literature, &c., will be of interest to all concerned in the country which now dominates the Far East. The work is of American origin, and possibly this accounts for the fact that no special reference seems to be made to the armed forces of Japan. There are over three million sea fishermen—an inexhaustible reserve from which to man the war fleet of Japan, which has already played such a part in the history of the world, and is destined to exert such tremendous influence in the future. The British publishers are Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd., and the price is 21s. net.

The U.S.A. and Germany

THE San Francisco Argonaut has for nearly forty years been a power in the great Pacific states of the U.S.A., so it is interesting to know what it thinks of President Wilson's Notes to Germany. The Argonaut says:—

"The United States ought to break friendship with any country which declines to respect the rights of its citizens under international law. If war should come we should meet it precisely as we should any other calamity forced upon us by circumstances beyond our control. The Argonaut ventures the prophecy that Mr. Wilson will not take this course (i.e., fight). He will, we think, in effect back down—not indeed in words, but by acts. He will write a new note to the Berlin government positive enough in its terms. But there will be nothing behind it. It will be neither more nor less than a new chapter in a long-drawn-out diplomatic correspondence. The interchanges will continue until the end of the war and the issues raised by the President will then be determined by an international council. This is the Argonaut's guess, and the Argonaut piques itself upon its character as a guesser."

It would be worse than prevarication to say we should not like to have cousin Jonathan butt in with us, but that our splendid men who are prisoners in German prisons have been able to endure existence at all is mainly due to the good offices of the American Ambassadors and Ministers in Germany, and, of course, of the great country behind them. Would Germany pay much attention to the representations of Holland or Spain or Denmark or Switzerland, or any other neutral? And then, Belgium! What would happen in Belgium if America's splendid charity were stopped by war is horrible to contemplate.

"War medals and their history"

MESSRS. STANLEY PAUL & Co. will, we hope, be rewarded for their enterprise in publishing this handsome volume on "War Medals and their History," by W. Augustus Steward. A better title would have been "British War Medals of a Century and how they were Won." It is true there are a few notes and references to foreign war medals, but the book is practically British. This handsome volume, with its series of more than 250 fine reproductions of medals, appeals not only to the general reader, but also to that large and growing class who "collect" war medals. The author is evidently a collector, as he says in one place: "My collection of medals enables me to cover over a hundred years of history; takes me back to the stirring times when men yet met face to face in the Peninsula and at Waterloo." In the appendix is given a most useful short record of average values of auction prices of war medals realised during the last twelve years, with hints to collectors. As regards the value of these war medals, from an artistic point of view, we fear that if the truth is told, the majority exhibit no very striking proof of being great in design or great in execution.

The human voice transmitted sixty-three miles by wireless

A NEW distance record for wireless telephony was established recently when Mr. P. N. Place, superintendent of the Scranton division of the Lackawanna, spoke from Scranton, Pa. to Mr. Frank Cuzek, superintendent of the Syracuse division, who was in Binghamton, N.Y. The message traversed sixty-three miles through a mountainous country.

The achievement was made more notable by the fact that the messages exchanged were not brief greetings, but business communications regarding the movement of trains. The Lackawanna trains between Scranton and Binghamton moved for several hours according to orders sent and received by the wireless telephone.

Every word transmitted by the wireless was heard distinctly, according to Mr. L. B. Foley, superintendent of telephone, telegraph and wireless of the Lackawanna, who was in charge of the experiment. Mr. Foley was jubilant over the achievement. Experiments with wireless telegraph and telephone have been conducted by the Lackawanna under his direction for more than a year.—Railroad Men, N.Y.

"So you're convinced that your novel is hopeless?" "Absolutely," replied the young author. "I couldn't even sell it after I changed it into a war story."—Life.

"Your typewriter girl didn't leave when you cut her salary down?" "No. She said she'd stay and not do so much work; that she had a lot of books she wanted to read, anyway."—Puck.

Wm. Blackwood & Sons' Autumn List

The Life of Field-Marshal Sir George White, V.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., G.C.I.E., O.M.

In two vols. Demy 8vo. By the Rt. Hon. Sir MORTIMER DURAND, P.C., G.C.M.G. Illustrated with maps, plans and portraits. 30s. net.

The Biography of "The Defender of Ladysmith" would be a work of the first importance among military chronicles, whatever might be the prevailing conditions at the time of its appearance.

The interest that it will arouse must certainly be heightened by the fact that we are now employing in a fight for national existence some of the lessons first taught us by the South African War.

The Biographer has wisely divided the Life into two portions, the first covering the Indian Mutiny, the Afghan War, the Burmah Campaign, &c.; and the second the South African War, and Sir George's two final appointments as Governor of Gibraltar and of the Chelsea Hospital.

The First Hundred Thousand

By THE JUNIOR SUB. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

This account of the doings of Kitchener's First Army, "K 1," is already famous by its serial appearance in "Blackwood's Magazine." The completion of the account, and its publication in book form, depends, in the author's own words, upon his "eye for cover." The book will be in two parts: (I) "Blank Cartridges," which deals with the time of training at home; and (II) "Live Rounds," the record of events "at the Front."

Adventures of a Despatch Rider

By Capt. W. H. L. WATSON. Cr. 8vo. 6s.

The undoubted supremacy of "Blackwood's Magazine" in obtaining the best material in records of the War is now universally recognised. This book, which has appeared in the pages of the magazine, conveys the truest impression of the psychology of war in the guise of a most interesting account of the motor cycle despatch carrier's life, and will rank as one of the most finished literary productions covering the Retreat and Advance of the British Army in France—the Winter campaign of 1914-15.

By "OLE LUK-OIE." Cr. 8vo. 6s.

It is sufficient to say of this book that it is by the author of "The Green Curve," who is now famous also as "Eye-Witness" at the British Expeditionary Force Headquarters. "The Great Tab Dope" is very like "The Green Curve," only more so. At his best the author "is above everything exciting. There are story-tellers who make us feel that something is going to happen. It is a rare gift; Mr. Kipling has it in 'The End of the Passage,' and 'Ole Luk-Oie' certainly has it in some impalpable way of his own."—Times.

The Thirty-Nine Steps

By JOHN BUCHAN. 1s. net.

As a real thrill—a tale of such breathless excitement as even to supersede the newspaper—"The Thirty-Nine Steps" can have few rivals. In the early summer of last year the hero became caught up in the workings of a tremendous force of secret and unofficial diplomacy which pulled the strings of European politics, and was to bring off its grand coup at the end of July. Possessed of information with a very definite bearing on the coming crisis, he was for some weeks a hunted fugitive from a Power whose aeroplanes watched him in the remotest Scottish moors. Topical enough to have no sense of remoteness from life, the story is told with such dramatic intensity as to make it literally impossible to lay it aside unfinished.

Mr. Holmes, in this book, which is a "human document" if ever there was one, tells of men and lads who, when the War broke out, were leading perfectly correct lives, and who gave up good prospects when they answered the Nation's call. All deserve to rank with the best. "Pride and shame," he says, "mingle as I write—pride in their valour, and in the calm dignity with which they set out to do or die; and shame that lives like theirs should, by our own selfishness and neglect of duty, be often lived at home under the conditions set out."

The publishers think so well of the book that they have decided to put it on the market at a price that brings it within the reach of all—2s. net.

Messrs. T. Nelson & Sons ask the indulgence of the public in postponing Vol. VII of Mr. Buchan's History of the War from August till September. The very large number of their employees now with the Colours, or engaged upon Government work, makes such postponement desirable.

Vol. VII will appear on Wednesday, Sept. 15th, and the monthly issue will be continued regularly thereafter.

"An interpretation of the Russian people"

UNDER this title, Messrs. McBride, Nast & Co., Ltd., of London, have published an interesting and timely work, by Leo Wiener, Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures at Harvard University.

Professor Wiener is well known as the author of "The Anthology of Russian Literature," and translator of the complete works of Tolstoy. He aims at presenting a picture of the Russian people as they have developed under the influence of literature, music, art, politics, religion and diplomacy. Nowhere else shall we get the same full and intimate account of the historical and social factors which have made Russia what she is to-day. The true Russia has only recently been discovered by Great Britain, and it is the true Russia which Professor Wiener interprets for us. The value of his work is shown by Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace. Russia is now at the cross roads of bureaucracy and democracy. British people will only fully appreciate the greatness of their great Ally if the essential characteristics of the Russian soul, as revealed by Professor Wiener, are properly understood.

Although he quite rightly stands up for the intellectual accomplishments of Germany in the nineteenth century, Professor Wiener is no blind worshipper of German culture. He says the Germans "know the laws of Christian morals, but in the interest of the State that needs a warlike spirit they cling to the duel as a pastime for gentlemen. Modernism and mediævalism, the highest external culture and a comatose morality, are co-existent, and in no way exclude one another. Both are produced by the same splendid educational system."

The American annual book crop—eighty millions

OUR friends the Americans have always been famous for guessing. Ask the next American you meet if that is not the case, and probably he will reply "I guess that's so." Our contemporary, the New York Publishers' Weekly, has been figuring out the total output of books of all sorts in America in a year, and comes to this conclusion:—

"To recapitulate these totals, as thus ascertained, very briefly: Class A. Trade Fiction, 8,000,000; B. Trade Non-Fiction, 13,400,000; C. Bibles, 5,000,000; D. Subscription books, &c., 12,000,000; E. Textbooks, 37,500,000; F. Locally and government published, 3,680,000; a total of approximately 80,000,000 copies per annum, or slightly over three-quarters of a book a year per inhabitant.

"As was stated at the beginning this is in every sense an estimate: the possible margins of error, pro and con, are very large. Since, however, to a certain extent, these errors probably balance themselves, the Publishers' Weekly considers it likely that the above total is not more than 50 per cent. out of the way."

Forthcoming Books from Messrs. A. & C. Black

Messrs. A. & C. Black will publish the following during the autumn:—

GENERAL LITERATURE.—Royal Palaces and Gardens, painted by Mima Nixon, intro. by Dion Clayton Calthrop; Bath and Bristol, painted by Laura A. Several new volumes in the "Peeps" and Educational Series.

Relics of the London Scottish Charge

AMONGST the more recently acquired souvenirs at the War Exhibition now being held in aid of the Belgian Red Cross at Prince's Skating Rink, Knightsbridge, are fifty which had been temporarily loaned by Mr. H. Powys Adams, of the H.A.C., and secured by him during winter campaign at the Front.

No more vivid evidence could be sought of the determination with which this war is being waged than the exhibit of the barrel of a German rifle broken during hand-to-hand fighting near La Bassée. The magazine still contains its five German cartridges.

Articles of the equipment of the London Scottish found after their historic charge at Messines will surely appeal to the Londoner, as will the hundreds of other interesting and instructive trophies with which the Exhibition abounds.

From Ypres

Others, loaned by Sister Matthews, of the British Red Cross Society, include a portion of stained glass from the Cathedral at Ypres, and a collection of candles from the high altar of the Cathedral, secured at considerable risk.

Paving Slabs as Souvenirs!

Another new acquisition is a great portion of a 16-inch German shell which was fired into Dunkirk from a range of 24 miles, as well as portions of a German villa on the Belgian coast which was discovered to contain a gun platform and ammunition lift. The souvenir hunter contented himself in this case with securing some choice sections of tessellated pavement!

Knightsbridge has of late become a popular rendezvous for the Tommies of the allied nations, and it frequently happens that they bring with them some trophy or prized possession from the Front, to be placed in the Exhibition until they "come again."

H. G. WELLS'S NEW NOVEL.

648 THE RESEARCH MAGNIFICENT.

By H. G. WELLS.

* * * This new long novel by Mr. Wells deals with the career of an idealist named William Porphyry Benham, "a man who was led into adventure by an idea. . . . It led him far. It led him into situations that bordered upon the fantastic, it made him ridiculous, it came near to making him sublime."

Nelson's "History of the War"

THE sixth volume of Messrs. Nelson's "History of the War," by John Buchan, has just been published, and covers the period from the Campaign upon the Niemen and the Narev to the first attempt upon the Dardanelles.

This volume, together with the five previously published, gives an accurate, concise and most interesting account of clearest and best description I have yet read"; whilst Major-General Sir Francis Lloyd, at a recent recruiting meeting in London, said the book should be in the hands of everybody and in every public library.

After such authoritative statements, we need say but little more. The format is attractive, red cloth binding with gold lettering, good paper, clear type and printing, and numerous maps and plans.

the War in the various theatres from its commencement to the end of April.

Mr. John Buchan has had exceptional opportunities of obtaining his information at first hand; he has visited the British lines in France; and, as his writings show, is a skilled master in the art of conveying to his readers a huge mass of detail in an attractive and easily understandable form.

Field-Marshal Lord Methuen describes Mr. Buchan's history as "the

Mr. Buchan appears to have access to official or semi-official sources, and many hitherto obscure points are elucidated for the first time. It may be remembered that on November 2nd, when the German battle cruisers appeared off Yarmouth and opened fire, most of the shells fell on the sands or at the water's edge. Mr. Buchan says, "they (the Germans) probably took the range from a line of buoys marked on the chart, and did not know that after the declaration of war these buoys had been moved 500 yards farther out to sea."

Many people will remember the rumour last October that we had lost one of our biggest battleships. All details were known in London within a few hours—the writer was given an accurate description of the disaster within twenty-four hours—yet no mention was permitted in any paper. Referring to this, Mr. Buchan says: "One of our super-Dreadnoughts struck a mine off the north coast of Ireland and sank, with the loss of a single life." This is the first mention in a British paper or book we can call to mind, although in November American papers gave details and even photographs of the vessel sinking.

We advise our readers to study Mr. Buchan's history, if they wish for a clear understanding of the Great War; and to bring the volumes to the notice of their customers.

A "War Book" Club

MR. F. W. T. LANGE, librarian of St. Bride Foundation, Bride Lane, Fleet Street, writes:—

"With the help of a friend I have tried to form a 'War Book Club,' with quite a small subscription. We have some 500 to 600 volumes and pamphlets, most of which we have purchased at our own expense, although a few I have donated for inclusion in the 'War Bibliography,' a work which you have seen, I know, quite well.

"Unfortunately, 'the flourish of trumpets' being wanting, our War Book Club, I may say, is languishing from want of support, and yet it is the only library of the kind so far, I believe, in this country. Some day, some of the literature we possess will be unobtainable and badly wanted, but we shall have had to 'shut up shop,' to use a vulgar expression."

For the Representatives of the Publishers

HERE is something, of course from America, which will interest both town and country travellers; it will amuse them also. This chapter, from the buyer of a successful salesman, was written for The American Stationer by T. H. Horrocks.

"The young salesman calling upon new trade may find some difficulty in obtaining an interview with the buyer, the presentation of a business card often having no other effect than to bring the reply, 'Nothing to-day.' It is sometimes necessary for the travelling salesman to adopt other than orthodox methods of introduction. I have known some of the most difficult men to approach conquered by the use of an ordinary calling card with just the travelling salesman's name and city printed thereon, the presentation of which has drawn a shake of the hand along with a request to be seated. The introduction of a business card and the request to know would the merchant be able to give him twenty minutes of his valuable time later in the day to demonstrate a line of special interest will often arouse the buyer's curiosity. After being told 'Not a thing' the salesman producing some side line from his pocket will have the desired effect.

Confidence and Gentlemanly Bearing will command a hearing

"A great deal depends upon the manner in which the salesman approaches his prospective customer. A weak and hesitating style will not give a buyer confidence in the travelling man or the firm he represents. A salesman should enter the presence of a buyer with a courteous and gentlemanly bearing that commands a hearing.

"The young salesman should be most careful in his method of addressing and greeting a dealer. Never forget MR. before his name. After having called upon the merchant for some time, hesitate to become familiar by calling him by his Christian name, even if others about the store do so. Upon all occasions say 'Thank you' for the attention accorded or order received.

"Remember when discussing with a man of years it is your duty to respect age, and don't assert your own ideas to the extent you would in the case of someone your equal in age.

"When displaying samples before a merchant, take up as little room as possible, especially if you are using a section of his store where business is being transacted. Be prepared to move your outfit to one side immediately a customer appears upon the scene. This will tend to keep the customer in a pleasant frame of mind. Should the merchant become worried by repeatedly being called away, offer to drop in again at some quieter period of the day. You will, no doubt, be able to considerably increase the sale of merchandise if you can retain his sole attention.

"The travelling salesman should endeavour to learn when and what time is best to call upon his trade. Drop in the dealer's store and try to make an appointment. It is well to remember an appointment is almost a guarantee of an order. It is equal to a man walking into a store and asking for some particular article. If the price and quality is right the sale is more than half made.

"Adopt a system in your selling. If possible, go right through one line at a time. By this method your entire thoughts can be riveted upon each individual series of lines. This will prevent the missing of even the smallest item, which is sure to result in a bunch of well filled order sheets.

Give the buyer time and get your order right

"Never rush a buyer. Give him time to think. Let him thoroughly understand what he is buying. Ascertain if, in the event of the house being out of stock of any item contained in the order, it may be back ordered; also the extent of time allowed for back order to remain valid. Take the necessary care in writing up your orders. See the proper numbers and proper descriptions of goods are given. If you are in doubt about any items you are writing up, attach to the original order a letter of explanation covering the items you cannot satisfy yourself upon. The adhering to this plan will save the annoyance of complaints and help to eliminate returns, which only result in unpleasantness for yourself, the house and the merchant combined.

"Read the daily papers, especially those published in the town you are working. Merchants like to know you are taking an interest in their city. It also helps to get you upon friendly terms. Get to know the subjects they are interested in. Be able to discuss these intelligently, but don't talk to unnecessary length. Remember your chief object is to sell goods. Learn the art of being a good listener. It is always well to keep in mind the merchant also likes to hear himself talk.

"It never pays to talk about the other fellow's goods—yet many salesmen cannot resist the temptation to give their competitor this free advertisement. Especially refrain from telling dealers how much better your products are than your competitor's. To do so is to acknowledge his line as the standard. If the merchant has never seen the other fellow's specialties it may arouse the desire to send for samples, with what result you can never tell.

"The young salesman is very often influenced when a merchant literally requests him not to call upon his neighbour. To fall in with such a request is to make a serious blunder. It is almost impossible to secure all such a merchant's trade if he is anything like a keen enough buyer to make his business a genuine success. Then should he later go out of business the other man may not take so kindly to you. The wide-awake salesman will be able to give such a dealer a just and acceptable reason why he finds it necessary to call upon both merchants.

"Where there are several dealers located in close proximity to each other it is better to offer each dealer some specialised line which will not clash. State to these dealers your intention to

"It is not often that a novelist deals seriously with the question of giving a tenth of the increase to the Lord, but in this novel the author has boldly tackled the subject. The plot is laid partly in the West End, in Whitechapel, and the Italian lakes. The book is cleverly written and full of good, sound common sense and should claim attention of all who think on the problem of the poor. We have read it with deepening interest and commend it to our readers most heartily."—METHODIST TIMES.

THREE GENTLEMEN FROM NEW CALEDONIA

By R. D. HEMINGWAY & HENRY DE HALSALLE. Cr. 8vo, 6/-

That this is a novel of more than ordinary interest is shown by the fact that it was selected from over 250 manuscripts for the award of a £300 prize. In this competition the judges were specially selected to represent a variety of tastes, so that the novel chosen by them must be one of almost universal appeal. The fine quality of the story will be appreciated from their opinions.

Mr. H. DE VERE STACPOOLE, the famous novelist, says: "The whole thing is good."

Sir GEORGE ARTHUR, Bt., the distinguished soldier who has seen active service in three campaigns, says: "It is admirably told, full of varied interest, and thrilling without being exaggerated."

Mr. H. E. MORGAN, of W. H. Smith and Sons, the well-known booksellers (and Government Munition Department), says: "An admirably thrilling romance."

Miss LILLIAN M. CLARKE, of Selfridge's, says: "Most interesting and captivating."

Mr. SIDNEY DARK, the well-known literary critic, says: "One of the best, if not indeed the very best, I have ever read."

do so. You will find in the majority of cases it works out wonderfully well and is highly appreciated.

Add New Accounts and see the small Trade also

"The salesman should start out each day with the determination to open up a new account or get one of his present dealers to add some new line. There is always a lot of small trade in or near by every city that the older (and more experienced?) commercial traveller seems to think not worth wasting time upon. Hunt this up. Cents make dollars. The small man has either to grow or get out.

"The young salesman will lose nothing by not cultivating the thirst habit, also refraining from telling unclean stories. Start upon the road with the resolution that you are going to gain the esteem and respect of the merchant. He will then look forward to your coming to fill up his want list and not to go out for drinks and listen to your latest story. Hit the happy medium in all things should be the salesman's motto.

"Some young salesmen upon finding the merchant is more inclined to place his order with some other house will resort to a line of canvass for example—"I am new. Give me a chance; you require the goods. It's just the same to you who gets the order." An order received in such a spirit amounts to nothing more or less than charity. Get your orders upon sound business principles. Procure them because your firm stands behind everything you sell; that the prices and service are of the best. Before making any promises be sure they can be kept. It is better not to make a promise at all than promise and fail to fulfill. You will then build up a trade that will stand long after you have ceased to be connected with the house.

Cut the Buyers who need much Entertaining

"Travelling expenses and entertaining are always a serious item with a travelling salesman. Be just to yourself and at the same time to your firm. If you come across a merchant who requires an unreasonable amount of entertaining to secure his trade, cut him out. Write to your firm a letter explaining the circumstances. Neither you nor the house will lose anything in the long run.

"Set your mind upon making your trip a success. Put so much vigorous determination into it that nothing in the world would make you turn from your purpose until it is accomplished. Cultivate resourcefulness—believe in yourself—study and work at your line with a set purpose to become a salesman, and not with a view to obtain only sufficient knowledge to get by as an order taker. If you are doubtful of your ability and afraid to take chances you will never make a success as a road-salesman."

"When did your boy Josh pass his examinations?" "I dunno exactly," replied Farmer Cornstossel; "but I reckon it must have been when nobody was lookin'."—Washington Star.

Musketry and Fire Tactics

MESSRS. SIFTON, PRAED & CO., LTD., of 67, St. James's Street, S.W., have just published at 1s. net a clearly written brochure entitled, "Elementary Principles of Musketry and Fire Tactics." The author is Major Ivan B. Davson, of the City of London Yeomanry. The work is the outcome of lectures to a reserve squadron. They do not purport to exhaust the subjects dealt with, but to enable young officers and recruits to form their ideas more quickly on musketry, and to get the elements of a very large subject arranged in perspective before proceeding to Hythe or undergoing systematic instruction. Some of the matter is new; but all follows very closely the official manual and the Hythe teaching. Major Davson says he believes the lecture on Rifle Fire at Aircraft is in full accord with the views held by the Department of Military Aeronautics.

Rifle Fire at Aircraft

The most novel chapter is of course that dealing with rifle fire at aircraft. The author considers 1,400 yards as about the limit of profitable rifle fire under normal conditions; promiscuous fire is to be rejected as a source of great danger to friends, as a bullet falling has a greater velocity when nearing the earth than when nearing an aeroplane high up. In fact, its velocity in falling becomes equal to its muzzle velocity, so that if you fired a bullet straight up, if it hit you when it fell it would hit you as hard as if you had blown your brains out!

"Owing to the great difficulty which is always experienced in recognizing whether an aeroplane is hostile or friendly, rifle fire should not be opened, except by the direct orders of an officer."

The height at which a machine is flying can only be guessed accurately by those accustomed to see them. Speed and noise are affected by wind and offer no reliable guide. A rough guide is when it becomes difficult to discern whether it is a biplane or monoplane, the height may be set at 5,000 feet, when it looks like a very small fly in the sky the height may be 8,000 feet. If you are aiming at a machine crossing you want to allow 5 or 6 times the length of the machine—i.e., hold ahead of it to that extent. The most difficult to hit is a machine which keeps changing its direction.

You do not want to elevate your sights. The author does not say in judging height whether it is with field glasses or naked eye. The publishers should make the binder print "Musketry and Fire Tactics" along the back. Before sending our copy to a young soldier we have had to print the title in ink, so that he can pick it out of his shelf of military literature.

Trade Notes

MESSRS. SIDGWICK & JACKSON, LTD., in announcing the seventh impression of Rupert Brooke's "1914 and Other Poems," express to the trade their regrets that hitherto, owing to the unprecedented demand and "war" conditions of manufacture, they have been unable to supply all orders on receipt. The beautiful photogravure frontispiece—one of Mr. Emery Walker's finest achievements—demands care and time in printing; but after wearing out two of the engraved plates, the publishers now have four at their disposal, and anticipate no further delay in executing orders.

His many friends will be glad to hear that Mr. H. Wilson, trading as Messrs. Herbert & Daniel, has paid all his creditors in full. Mr. H. A. Moncrieff, of St. Paul's Chambers, Ludgate Hill, has acted for Mr. Wilson in the matter.

MR. CHARLES TERRY, who has been managing director of Everett & Co., Ltd., 42, Essex Street, Strand, since the formation of the company, has now resigned his position and severed his connection with that firm. Any communication addressed to Mr. Terry, c.o. the Motor Club, Coventry Street, W., will receive immediate attention.

A Tennyson Dictionary

DEAR SIR,—I have compiled and prepared for publication "A Tennyson Dictionary": The characters and place-names contained in the poetical and dramatic works of the poet alphabetically arranged and described, with synopses of the poems and plays; and provided a sufficient number of copies are subscribed, the work will be proceeded with at once. It will be issued at the subscription price of 7s. 6d. net, to be increased to 10s. net on publication.

Yours faithfully,

"A Ride for Love"

DEAR SIR,—I am most anxious to find out where I can get a poem or recitation called "A Ride for Love." I am given to understand it was published in the Newcastle Herald about 25 years since. Perhaps some reader of your valuable paper would know and kindly tell me. Thanking you in anticipation.—Yours faithfully,

Notices of Books

From the Cambridge University Press.—"Domestic Science," by Charles W. Hale, A.K.C. This volume forms Part I of an elementary text-book on Domestic Science. It is the outcome of the author's long experience as teacher and examiner. His aim has been to emphasise the scientific rather than the domestic aspect of the subject, and to provide a course of training which shall be of service as an educational asset. The matters dealt with in Part I are largely those which are needed as was of no avail; we had to explode spherical shells and smash the covering of the enemy's trenches. 'Even at the risk of damage to our own infantry, fire spherical shell as rapidly as possible' was the message repeatedly sent to the artillery." And again:—"After this battle we captured some damaged machine guns. This was the arm most dreaded by us. . . . The Russians regard this machine gun as their best friend, and certainly it did very much as a means of defence. . . . This dreadful machine would sweep over us . . . the result being hills and mounds of dead. . . . Whenever our army attacked the enemy's position it was invariably this machine gun that made us suffer and damaged us most severely." The Germans quickly, and as events have proved, rightly saw the value of machine guns. We still seem unable to overcome the prejudice against their use in large numbers, presumably because it is such a simple matter to expend hundreds of cartridges in a few moments by merely pressing a button!

From the Same.—"A Village Romeo and Juliet," by Gottfried Keller. Introduction by Edith Wharton. It appears that Keller was highly praised by Nietzsche. He called "Seldwyla People," the volume from which the present story is taken, "one groundwork in any elementary science course, and special attention has been paid to those portions of the subject which experience has shown are usually imperfectly grasped. Questions are provided at the end of each chapter, and there are many excellent figures and a full index.

From Messrs. Constable & Co., Ltd.—"Human Bullets," by Lieut. Tadayoshi Sakurai. A soldier's story of Port Arthur. This is a cheap edition of possibly one of the most vivid stories of war that has yet been written. It gives interesting sidelights upon the soldiers of one of our allies—Japan—and although it is a story of part of the assault on Port Arthur during the Russo-Japanese War, might very well refer to the terrible battles of to-day. The Germans appear to have learned the vital lessons of the Russo-Japanese War, and in this connection it is perhaps interesting to quote two paragraphs from Lieut. Sakurai's book. It should be remembered that this book was first published seven years ago. Speaking of an attack on the Russian entrenchments during the Battle of Taipo-Shan, the author says:—"Our artillery fire made a pyrotechnic display in the air, but did hardly any damage to the enemy's defensive constructions. Shrapnel of the four masterpieces of German prose." Certainly "A Village Romeo and Juliet" has an extraordinary charm. As Miss Wharton points out, in spite of its tragic theme it has a playful simplicity and a grace of desultory detail found in few authors. It suggests the heathery commons and blue pine forests of lower Switzerland. Keller was a Swiss, and though his books have been very widely popular in Germany, there is not a little in his work that will please English readers. From the Same.—"The Road towards Peace," by Charles W. Eliot. Dr. Eliot is, of course, one of the most eminent of living Americans, and most thoughtful Englishmen must be interested in what he has written on the War. A good portion of his book, however, was written before the present War, and is concerned with war in general. Perhaps the most vitally suggestive chapter is that entitled "America's Duty in Regard to the European War." Prophecy as to issues is impossible, but it is not impossible to prophesy that the American people will remain true to their quality, true to their history, true to their obligations to England and France." The volume includes a correspondence the author had with Mr. Jacob H. Schiff

THE TORTURES AND TORMENTS OF THE CHRISTIAN MARTYRS

Being a genuine translation from the Latin and Italian Texts of the famous Work "DE MARTYRUM CRUCIATIBUS" of the REV. FATHER ANT. GALLONIO.

One Volume small 4to., accompanied by a set of 46 full-page illustrations printed on Excelsior Art Paper; the Text printed on antique Wove Paper, with a red Oxford border; the whole neatly bound in buckram. PRICE 21s.

The "CHRISTIAN MARTYRS" is not one of those small, insignificant books, of which so many are issued from the press year by year, but an IMPORTANT HISTORICAL PUBLICATION WHICH WILL LIVE FOR EVER.

We all know that men, women, and children of all sorts and conditions—the proud patrician lady equally with the poor peasant girl, the high-bred lord and the humble slave, the happy maid, and the dignified matron, the cultivated scholar as well as the ignorant boor—were tortured, on account of the nascent Christian faith they professed, under the Emperors Nero, Diocletian and Tiberius; but PRECISELY HOW THEY WERE TORTURED the ordinary text books do not record. And well perhaps it is that we do not learn in our early youth how terribly these valiant people suffered, for a recital of their agonies is more than enough to crimson the cheek with shame.

In the book hereby offered to scholars and students now for the first time in English, THESE TORTURES ARE DESCRIBED WITH MINUTE PRECISION.

THE TRIBULATIONS OF A BOOKSELLER.

Crown 8vo. volume, bound in black cloth, untrimmed edges. PRICE 10s. 6d.

MICHELET, the author of "THE SORCERESS," describes in the present work with unsurpassed literary cunning, the first uprising of the human soul in the night of the Middle Ages towards the Spirit of Darkness.

An outcry was raised recently concerning so-called BLACK MASS in Paris. "THE SORCERESS" tells us what this really means.

BLACK MASS in the Seventeenth Century was the frightful sequel to the "Witches' Sabbath;" the first protest against the oppression of Religions and Laws; the first gesture of suffering and revolt during the Middle Ages against the tyranny of popes and monks. The "Sabbath" means the great assembly of the Disinherited, the Outcast and the Proscribed, banded together with the one object of wresting her secrets from Nature, and of liberating others from the domination of the Christ, in whom they had lost faith through the infamy of priests and kings.

THE FRENCH Rudyard Kipling A SPAHI'S LOVE STORY

—BY—
PIERRE LOTI

Translated into English by a Gentleman.

Small crown 8vo. volume, printed on fine paper.
Price 10s. 6d.

PIERRE LOTI (Capt. Julien Viaud of the French Navy), "the RUDYARD KIPLING of France," as he may be called, in virtue of many striking points of resemblance, albeit the fascinating French Academician possesses qualities of style and distinction to which his English rival can lay no claim, here draws an extraordinary life-like picture of the French "Tommy Atkins" and his existence in the sun-scorched Colonies of the West Coast of Africa. The colours are lurid, but the vraisemblance is undeniable. The strange perfervid, exotic passion of Jean Peyral, Cévenol peasant lad and trooper of the "Spahis," and Fatougaye, the little negress, is as convincing in its realism as the pathos of the final scene is poignant in its human appeal.

LAFCADIO HEARN says:—

"If you like Gautier, how much more would you like the 'marvellous work of Julien Viaud (Pierre Loti). We know each other by letter. Read A Spahi's Love Story first; 'I think it will astonish you.'"

The Book Trade Co-operative Christmas Illustrated Catalogue & Record for 1915

THE COMING SEASON IS NOT GOING TO BE AN EASY ONE for the Book Trade. General pre-occupation with affairs of the day, coupled with high taxes and increase in the cost of living is bound to tell on the trade. Can we turn that to our advantage? Can we persuade the public to purchase books rather than less useful and less permanent things?

✧ The Publishers' Association believes that the BEST WAY TO MEET THE CONDITIONS IS TO UNITE in a CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT to place before the public AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE IN NOVEMBER a catalogue which will not only prove specially attractive, but will also SAVE EXPENSE TO ALL CONCERNED WITH THE SALE OF BOOKS.

✧ By CONCENTRATION ON ONE JOINT ENTERPRISE, efficiency and increased trading results can be obtained with a saving of time and money to all concerned.

✧ THIS APPLIES TO THE BOOKSELLER just as much as to the publisher, for he will have at his disposal AT MUCH BELOW COST PRICE, a catalogue that he can be proud to place in the hands of his clients and will not have to send out many different lists in order to keep his customers informed of the activities of the book trade.

✧ This Catalogue, ISSUED OFFICIALLY BY THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION, will afford a splendid chance of proving that the Book trade really can co-operate, as indeed it must if trade is to be increased, or even maintained at pre-war conditions.

YOU can most materially assist in shaping this new Trade Venture, and in making it a success by at once informing Mr. Wm. Poulten, Secretary, The Publishers' Association, Stationers' Hall Court, London, E.C., how many copies you will be able to use.

the eminent financier, last November and December on the subject of the War, and the final chapter consists of a letter Dr. Eliot wrote to the New York Times in which he describes the lessons concerning international relations which the War has taught convincingly down to March 9th, 1915.

From Messrs Longmans, Green & Co.—“In Mr. Knox's Country,” by E. O. Somerville and Martin Ross. There is a rich vein of humour running through these eleven sketches of Irish life—a humour so rich that it is difficult not to break into open laughter when reading the book. The stories are related by the Resident Magistrate already known to readers of a previous book by these two ladies. There is life and movement in them, and the literary quality of the work is of a very high order. It must not be imagined that Miss Somerville and Miss Ross obtain their effects by means of broad strokes of farce. Quite the contrary is the case, for whilst their subjects are often farcical, their treatment of them is always restrained. The sketches, however, are none the less amusing on that account, and it is with real regret that one reaches the last page of the volume.

From Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Ltd.—“Consumption and its Cure by Physical Exercises,” by Filip Sylvan, M.D. Dr. Sylvan is of opinion that we must consider tuberculosis from an entirely new point of view, and he attempts to show that only by curing the predisposition to consumption can we fight the disease. We do not know that there is very much that is new in the exercises he gives, though we do not wish to dispute the author's claim that his theories are “original.” How far those theories are true we do not know, and we therefore cannot recommend the unstudied adoption of his views.

From Messrs. Sifton Praed & Co., Ltd.—“Map Reading: A Self-Instructional Manual,” by Captain L. Norlock, R.M.L.I., and Captain F. S. Wilson, R.M.L.I. A most useful book, especially at the present time. Young officers will welcome such a comprehensive and authoritative manual.

From Messrs. Williams & Norgate.—“The Ephesian Gospel,” by Percy Gardner, Litt.D., F.B.A. Dr. Gardner declares that his book “aims at being suggestive rather than exhaustive,” and one may say at once that it has achieved its aim.

It is a book for the layman rather than for the expert. The author has imagination as well as scholarship, and intuition in addition to literary talent; his style is unusually clear and attractive. Among the subjects dealt with are the Doctrine of the Spirit, the Sacraments, Ephesus after St. Paul, and the Ephesian Gospel.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

Is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

AMERICA AND GERMANY

In this book Dr. White presents in readable and logical form what he believes to be the consensus of American opinion on the struggle, and makes a strong plea for the cause of the Allies, and a scathing rejoinder to the assertions and the arguments of the German apologists.

Punch says:—"So lucid a statement of his case should attract and convince countless readers. . . . Proof irrefutable and absolutely damning. . . . One of the most illuminating books that the war has brought forth."

Another International Piece of Paper

Modification of the Berne Agreement—An Interesting Human Document

At this moment in August, 1915, after a year of war, we have all our fierce hopes, our absolute confidence, perhaps, as to how it will end; but not the greatest mortal of us knows how it will end. It seems to us very interesting and significant to read in Bibliographie de la France, the organ of the French book trade, an account of how France has found time, even in this terrific fight for her existence, to support the interests of—we were going to say those peaceful things, Literature and Art—but of course they may be among the most bellicose of all things.

At a time of profound peace, when only Germany was preparing secretly for war, eighteen countries signed a scrap of paper at the polite request of Great Britain. The following account is interesting as showing how mortals try to safeguard the rights of man and of mankind even when fighting for existence.

Because Germany dishonours her pledged word and her signed signature it is no reason why other nations should follow her example. Let us hope she will some day come to her senses.

International Copyright

The organ of the French book trade, Bibliographie de la France, in its issue for August 13th, 1915, gives a copy of the decree of M. R. Poincaré, President of the French Republic, as regards a modification of clauses of the Berne Convention required by Great Britain. The Exposé des Motifs, or Preamble of the Bill, as we say, is thus explained by the President:—

Gentlemen,—

The protection of the Revised Convention of Berne, in which France took part, is accorded to works published for the first time on the territories of the Union, independently of the nationality of their authors.

The British Government has requested (demandé) the modification of this principle in this sense, that in the case where a country which has not joined the Union does not protect the works of the authors of one of the contracting States, that State may restrict the protection of works of which the authors, at the date of first publication, are not subjects of non-Union States, and not bona fide residents in one of the countries of the Union.

A protocol to this effect has been signed by the representatives of the eighteen States who are signatories of the Revised Convention of Berne.

The adoption of this additional clause will give satisfaction to the desire expressed by Great Britain, without injuring the rights of authors of French nationality; the Government is confident that you will approve it, and will authorise its ratification.

The Bill (Projet de Loi)

The President of the French Republic
Decrees:—

The Bill of which the tenor follows will be presented to the Chamber of Deputies by the President of the Council, by the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and by the Minister of Public Instruction and the Fine Arts, who are charged with the duty of explaining its objects and supporting it in discussion.

Article 1. The President of the Republic is authorised to ratify and if necessary to execute the additional Protocol of the Revised Berne Convention for the protection of literary and artistic works, of the 13th November, 1908, signed at Berne on the 20th of March, 1914, by the plenipotentiaries of the eighteen States participating in this International Union.

A copy of this clause (acte) is annexed to the present loi.

(Signed) R. POINCARÉ.

By the President of the Republic.

The President of the Council,

(Signed) RENÉ VIVIANI.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs,

(Signed) DELCASSÉ.

The Minister of the Interior,

(Signed) L. MALVY.

The Minister of Public Instruction and of the Fine Arts,

(Signed) ALBERT SARRAUT.

The Protocol

The additional Protocol of the 20th of March, 1914, at the Revised Convention of Berne, of the 13th November, 1908, signed at Berne, the 20th of March, 1914.

THE countries, members of the International Union for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, desiring to authorise an optional limitation of the powers of the Convention of the 13th November, 1908, have, by general consent decreed the following Protocol:—

1. When a country outside the Union (étranger à l'Union), does not sufficiently protect the works of authors belonging to one of the countries of the Union, the depositions of the 12th of November, 1908, shall not be prejudicial, as far as this is concerned, to the right which belongs to the contracting country to restrict the protection of works of which the authors are, at the moment of first publication of these works, subjects or citizens of the said outside country (pays étranger), and are not effectively domiciled* in one of the countries of the Union.

2. The right accorded to contracting States by the present Protocol applies equally to all their over-seas possessions.

3. No restriction established by virtue of this additional clause shall prejudice the rights which any author may have acquired in a work published in one of the countries of the Union before the putting into execution of this restriction.

4. States which, in virtue of this new clause, restrict the protection of the rights of authors, will notify the same by a declaration to the government of the Swiss Confederation, in which are indicated the countries affected by the restriction, as well as the restrictions to which the rights of the authors belonging to those countries are subjected. The government of the Swiss Confederation will communicate the declaration as soon as possible to the other States of the Union.

5. The present Protocol will be ratified and the ratifications will be deposited at Berne within a period of twelve months counted as from this date (March 20th, 1914).

It will become law one month after the expiration of the period of delay, and will have the same force and duration as the Convention to which it belongs.

In faith of which, the Plenipotentiaries of the countries forming the Union have signed the present Protocol, a certified copy of which will be sent to each of the governments of the Union.

Done at Berne, the 20th of March, 1914, in one single copy, deposited in the archives of the Swiss Confederation.

The Bill has been ratified by the Chamber of Deputies and by the Senate.

Notes and Announcements

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. will publish immediately a pamphlet by the Earl of Cromer, entitled "Germania contra Mundum."

Mr. William le Queux is following up his warning, "Britain's Deadly Peril," by a new and equally outspoken criticism called "The Devil's Spawn: How Italy will Defeat Them," which Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. have in the press.

* The French is "domiciliés effectivement." As our Government got this new clause added, I have no doubt the object was to prevent the farcical claim to copyright which was so effective in the old days—when an American author took a week-end holiday in Canada, and by publishing on that day in London, or on British soil, jumped a claim, which was difficult to upset in our courts, and so acted as a restraint on piracy, but which our legislature had not in its mind's eye when it made the laws.—ED. P.C.

Messrs. Forbes & Co., of Chicago, have sent us "The Treasure of Hidden Valley," by Willis George Emerson, which we have read with much interest. It is a graphic, vivid picture of life in Wyoming and should find a good market here and in Australia. Among notable scenes and incidents may be mentioned the frontier day celebration with its stirring bull-dogging and broncho-busting episodes, deer hunting and river fishing among the hills, stage driving and snow sledding, a fight between cowboys and sheepmen, a fiercely partisan political gathering, a clearing out of boodling mine directors of a great smelting plant, treasure seeking in the rugged fastnesses of the high Sierras, and a great snowslide that thunders down the mountains and leaves in its wake both sorrow and righteous retribution. And all these varied happenings are skilfully woven into a sufficiently interesting love story; but the chief value of the book is that it gives such a moving picture of life in the American Great West of to-day.

"Revolvers and Pistols, and How to Use Them" is the title of a forthcoming book by Frank Bonnett, who writes with authority on this subject. His previous works on "Mixed and Rough Shooting," "The Shot-Gun and Its Uses," &c., have met with a large measure of success. This new book, which is to be issued at rs. net by the Aldine Publishing Company, Ltd., is intended for the use of military men and others, to whom its chapters on "Various Makes of Revolvers and Pistols," "The Care of the Revolver," &c., should be of great practical value.

A second edition of Mr. J. W. Headlam's book, "The History of Twelve Days: An Account of the Negotiations preceding the Outbreak of War," based on the Official Publications, will be issued on August 23rd, by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.

Mr. Unwin will bring out on August 23rd Mr. Ian C. Hannah's book, "Arms and the Map: A Study in Nationalities and Frontiers." The book is a popular account of the development of European nationalities and a survey of the frontier problems that await settlement at the close of the Great War. Mr. Hannah will be remembered as the author of "Eastern Asia: a History," a concise and valuable little manual which has had a large circulation.

Mr. Richard Marsh, the well-known writer of sensational novels, who has just died, was the author of more than sixty books. His most famous book, "The Beetle," is published by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin and is now in its fourteenth edition. Mr. Fisher Unwin was also the publisher of Mr. Marsh's novel, "The Woman in the Car," which came out last year, and has in preparation two new books by him. Arrangements for the second were made only two or three days before Mr. Marsh's death and it was the last work upon which he was engaged.

Pride and interest in our Navy were never stronger or more justified than to-day, and the announcement of a cheap edition of C. E. W. Bean's "Flagships Three" should meet with a ready response. The main portion of this popular work gives an account of the British Navy and the life in our men-o'-war as seen by the author. The latter part deals with the inception and development of the Royal Australian Navy, which has rendered such splendid service in the present struggle. The volume is illustrated from photographs and with many line drawings by the author. Published by Alston Rivers, Ltd.

Mr. James Huneker has quite a vogue in England and Messrs. T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., have already issued six volumes from his pen. His new work is entitled "New Cosmopolis, A Book of Images." In it he discusses certain European cities before the War.

Mrs. Ghosal, the sister of Tagore, has written another Indian novel, entitled "The Fatal Garland," which is published by T. Werner Laurie, Ltd. Mrs. Ghosal (or Srimati Svarna Kumari Devi) is one of the most famous advanced women of our Indian Empire. Though she has done so much for the emancipation of her sex, she still "keeps purdah" among her old-fashioned relatives; and this is just what we should expect from the tone of her work, which breathes the spirit of humility and retirement. The book is illustrated in colour and half-tones by native artists. It is a charming picture of Indian life by a well-educated native lady and we hope it may have a large sale. It helps one to understand something of the real spirit of the splendid Indian people who have so finely responded to the call to arms in defence of the Empire. We have found it far more interesting than the average English novel.

"Chums," the annual volume, full of stories and pictures, is just announced for publication by the House of Cassell. This cheery boys' volume, which contains a number of excellent War stories has six regular contributors who are now in the fighting line.

Mr. Arthur L. Humphreys has produced in very neat dress as a one shilling net brochure "A Ballad of the War," by Lord Latymer, reprinted from The English Review :—

Australia heard the bugles sound,
And Canada replied;
New Zealand, too, by blood was bound
To fight by Britain's side.

This gives at once the measure of the metre, and the writer, Lord Latymer, is rather hard on the lawyers :—

She listened to the lawyer crew,
Themselves the men of wiles
Who covered up the thing they knew,
Or did not know, with smiles.

In other respects it is a fair little picture in verse of the War to date.

Messrs. A. & C. Black send us an admirable intermediate school text book by Mr. Alex. L. Curr, B.A., entitled "Commercial Geography," with 150 maps and diagrams in the text. Mr. Curr was formerly lecturer on commerce and commercial geography in Queen's University, Belfast. This has enabled him to give a wonderful survey of the commerce of the world from the geographical point of view, and of the geography of the world from the commercial point of view. If text books of this value had been in use in our schools a generation or two ago we should never have allowed German trade to compete so unfairly with ours as we have done, and out of the profits to prepare secretly to take by force what it could not otherwise get.

The Book Trade and the War

MESSRS. HARRISON & SONS, St. Martin's Lane, Printers in Ordinary to His Majesty, have sent us a List of Liverymen and Sons and Grandsons of Liverymen of the Worshipful Company of Stationers serving in His Majesty's Forces. It shows that about 140 are serving and includes a great many names which are household words in our book trade; it is a list which will be treasured, and includes that great soldier, Lt.-Gen. Sir James Willcocks, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., K.C.S.I.

With very great regret we learn that Mr. J. M. Dent has lost another son—killed in the Dardanelles.

D.C.M.

WE are glad to see that a member of Mr. John Murray's staff has won the Distinguished Conduct Medal and is thus referred to in the War Office report:—"1143, Corpl. G. A. Harris, 19th Batt., 7th London Brigade, R.F.A. (T.F.) For conspicuous gallantry between May 20 and 24, 1915, at Le Plantin, when, the observation station being constantly shelled and the wires breaking, he repeatedly went out under very heavy shell fire and repaired them."

A French War Literature Exhibition

THE French Minister of Public Instruction, M. Albert Sarraut, accompanied by M. Guesde, "Directeur de son Cabinet" (probably a position similar to that of a British Minister's private secretary), paid a visit the other day to the Cercle de la Librairie, Boulevard St. Germain, Paris. The object was to inspect the exhibition of war books and pictures which has been arranged by the Council of the Cercle with a view to show the efforts which have been made in France, both officially and privately, to make known to the world the truth about the main facts of the war and thus to defend the cause of France. The Minister, who was received by M. Louis Hachette, the President, and the members of the Council of the Cercle, made a careful examination of the exhibits, and repeatedly expressed his satisfaction at seeing such a great number of such varied publications collected together.

Deaths of American Publishers

(From the N.Y. Publishers' Weekly, July 31st, 1915.)

THE death of Mr. Thomas Y. Crowell, of T. Y. Crowell Co., occurred on Thursday morning, July 29th, at Montclair, N.J.

The body of Herbert S. Stone, publisher of the Metropolitan Magazine, who was a Lusitania victim, has come ashore at Ballybunnion, a small town at the mouth of the River Shannon, on the west coast of Ireland, about 150 miles from the point where the Lusitania was sunk. The body has been fully identified by articles upon it, including a card case filled with cards, a watch and other belongings. Mr. Stone was the son of Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press.

"When Hempe is Spun England is Done"

(And Britain begun)

SIR FRANCIS BACON tells us that he "heard this prophecy when I was a child, and Queen Elizabeth was in the flower of her years,

'When Hempe is spun, England is done!'

whereby it was generally conceived that after the princes had reigned which had the principal letters of that word HEMPE, which were—

Henry,
Edward,
Mary,
Philip,
Elizabeth,

England should come to utter confusion, which, thanks be to God, is verified in the change of name; for that the King's style is now no more ENGLAND but BRITAIN."

The Lighter Side

THE claim that Shakespeare was a brewer seems to be effectively disposed of by the fact that he left little or no estate to his relatives.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Mr. Henry James has become so pro-British lately that it is understood he may decide to do all his writing in the future in the English language.—Boston Transcript.

Punch on the P.C.

WE always enjoy getting a dig in the ribs from our genial old ever young friend Punch. Here is the latest:—

"Green's Short History of the English People. Complete French ed. 2 vols. 16 ft. (Plon-Nourrit & Cie.)"—Publishers' Circular.

"A yard or two shorter would suit our book-shelves better."

Rupert Brooke's Poems

IN our last issue we made an error in referring to Rupert Brooke's poems, published by Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson. "1914 and Other Poems" is issued as a half-crown book, whilst the five famous war sonnets, entitled "1914," is issued in booklet form at 6d.

"A Byron (?) Discovery"

IN The English Review for August there is a very interesting article by the late Bertram Dobell entitled "A Byron (?) Discovery" which would have created a world-wide sensation in the middle of the nineteenth century. Some years ago there came into Mr. Dobell's hands a small pamphlet entitled "A Farrago Libelli," which after careful study he decided "could be the work of no one save the then youthful Byron." The pamphlet was published anonymously by Mr. Hatchard in 1806, and Mr. Dobell thinks it exhibits Byron's persistent characteristic dislike of the Scottish people which "probably originated in the circumstances of his boyhood, when he and his mother were living in poverty in Scotland." But were they living in poverty? Surely in Aberdeenshire one hundred years ago £130 a year (equal to twice as much nowadays) would not have been considered poverty for a widow and child? It would have been strange for even such a precocious genius as Byron to have written such an imitation of the first Satire of Juvenal as this "Farrago Libelli" at the age of seventeen. But Mr. Dobell concludes it was his by comparing it with passages in "English Bards" published in 1809.

Is it not possible to show from Byron's own writings that up to the time he was seventeen he had no "dislike of the Scottish people," nor in fact until he suffered so bitterly at the hands of Scotch reviewers?

When he was seventeen Byron wrote a poem which seems to us to prove conclusively that up to that age he had nothing but pleasant memories of Scotland and the Scottish friends of his childhood. Verses we quote surely disprove Mr. Dobell's statement that throughout his life his persistent characteristic was his rooted dislike of the Scottish people, which "probably originated in the circumstances and poverty of his boyhood."

In 1805, when he was seventeen, Byron wrote:—

I would I were a careless child,
Still dwelling in my Highland cave,
Or roaming through the dusky wild,
Or bounding o'er the dark blue wave:
The cumbrous pomp of Saxon pride
Accords not with the freeborn soul,
Which loves the mountain's craggy side,
And seeks the rocks where billows roll.

Fortune! take back these cultured lands,
Take back this name of splendid sound!
I hate the touch of servile hands,
I hate the slaves that cringe around:
Place me among the rocks I love,
Which sound to Ocean's wildest roar;
I ask but this—again to rove
Through scenes my youth hath known before.

I loved—but those I love are gone:
Had friends—my early friends are fled.
How cheerless feels the heart alone
When all its hopes are dead.

If words mean anything, these words mean that the youthful rich Lord Byron in England sighed for the happy days and friends of his childhood in Scotland, and make it impossible that the same youth in the same year could have written this "Farrago Libelli."

Mr. Dobell quotes the following as what he says he believes is the earliest expression of Byron's hate for Scotland:—
But lo! an upstart in the Alley known!
Make way, my Lords, five boroughs are his own.

"Let me be heard; mine is the prior claim.
What tho' I boast no great, no ancient name?
Not much instruction, nor much worth I plead,

A pedlar once beyond the banks of Tweed.
Should I deny where I have spent my youth,
My language, and the itch, would tell the truth."

There are lines in the "Farrago" which out-Juvenal Juvenal, and which, as we said before, even Byron at seventeen could hardly have written.

A link with an Edinburgh Publishing Firm

THE Scotsman records the death at Saskatoon, Canada, of Mr. Robert Hunter, last surviving partner of the late firm of Johnstone, Hunter, & Co., breaking the last link with a well-known firm of Edinburgh publishers. His father joined this firm after 1844. In its last phase this firm issued juvenile and religious books, and a periodical of undoubted orthodoxy, the Christian Treasury, begun in 1844. The founder of the firm, Mr. John Johnstone, printer and publisher of the Scottish Christian Herald, successor to Waugh & Innes, had his office in Hunter Square, before moving to 15,

Princes Street. In their last days, Messrs. Johnstone & Hunter occupied premises in Melbourne Place. Hugh Miller's "Old Red Sandstone," "Schools and Schoolmasters," and other works by the same author were first published by Messrs. Johnstone, Hunter & Co., who issued literature connected with the rising Free Church. They issued a series of "Wayside Tracts" and "Fireside Tracts"; a series of religious books called "The Christian Fireside Library," which included "A Handbook of Popery," by Rev. James Begg, and Pascal's "Provincial Letters," edited by the Rev. Andrew Cameron. A popular book about the Covenanters was "Gleanings Among the Mountains," by Rev. R. Simpson, of Sanquahar. Dr. Guthrie has related how he was seated one day in Johnstone's back shop, when the conversation turned on a discussion that had recently taken place in the Town Council on Church affairs. Hugh Miller said it reminded him of a discussion in Galt's novel of "The Provost," and thereupon at great length he retailed with humour what the Provost and Bailies and Councillors are reported to have said in that novel. On referring to the book it was found that Miller had shown a wonderful feat of memory, and had repeated pages of it verbatim, though fifteen years had elapsed since he had read the book. It was Hugh Miller who introduced Mr. Alexander Strachan, the future originator of Good Words and other periodicals, to this firm, where he remained for several years, before starting in business in George Street, Edinburgh. Mr. Andrew Elliot, of 17, Princes Street, also served his apprenticeship with Messrs. Johnstone, Hunter & Co., and succeeded to the retail part of the same business, when the firm confined its efforts to publishing. Two other apprentices of this firm were Messrs. Sutherland and Knox who became known as publishers.

Gunpowder as a War Remedy

WHEN we received a neat brochure with nothing on the cover but "Gunpowder as a War Remedy," by John C. Clarke, M.D., we thought it was a squib of some sort. Gunpowder seems a funny sort of remedy for war—except on the principle of taking "a hair of the dog that bit you." But on turning to the title-page we saw that the little work is published by the Homœopathic Publishing Co., of 12, Warwick Lane, London, and 395, Broadway, New York, so there was less ground for wonder since one of the foundations of homœopathy is "Similia similibus curantur," and all who believe in that system of medicine will, no doubt, be greatly interested to find that Dr. Clarke appears to make out a good case for gunpowder "as an all-round remedy for blood-poisoning in general and septic war wounds in particular." He recommends its use in tablet form, and adds that all homœopathic chemists supply it, as well as his own chemists, Messrs. Epps & Co., 60, Jermyn Street, S.W.

A Literary Discovery

AMONG the small collection of modern books recently dispersed at Sotheby's was a little oblong manuscript volume in an elaborately tooled morocco binding with the (unidentified) initials "M. W." on the sides. It consists of a collection of love verses, evidently made for a lady.

The book was purchased by Mr. Percy Dobell, the bookseller, of Charing Cross Road, who has clearly inherited his late father's taste for exploration in the by-paths of literature, and who, in this case at all events, would appear to have had similar success in the matter of literary discovery. This little volume contains over 170 sets of verses, all of remarkable merit; and from preliminary investigation it is believed that over one-third of them have not hitherto been printed. It is not a commonplace book of verse of diverse subjects, such as students of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries are familiar with, but a true anthology of early seventeenth century love poetry, and it is clear that all the pieces were written before 1640.

The bulk of the verse is anonymous. There are pieces by such little-known authors as Walton Poole, George Lucy, John Gill, and Benjamin Stone. The poems by well-known writers, such as Herrick, Ben Jonson, Dr. Donne, F. Beaumont, Sir J. Harrington, William Browne of Tavistock, F. Quarles, and others have many variations from the printed text. If the volume proves to be as important as a first examination seems to indicate it will be a notable addition to our poetical literature.—The Times, July 24th.

Letters to the Editor

"The Naval Annual, 1915"

DEAR SIR,—With reference to the notice appearing in your issue of the 14th inst., we beg to say that a reprint of this work is ready and on sale. This reprint is intended for general circulation, the British ship plans being withdrawn by order of the Admiralty. The complete edition, including these plans, is henceforth reserved, and issued only on the instructions of the Admiralty, through the Controller of H.M. Stationery Office.

We should be much obliged if you would insert this letter in your paper, as the notice would be likely to lead people to suppose that the book had been altogether withdrawn from sale, and was unobtainable, which is not the case.—Thanking you in anticipation, we are, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

Antiques

DEAR SIR,—It has struck me that some of your subscribers, in addition to being booksellers, may be antique dealers also; and for those of your readers who are collectors generally, it would be a good idea if the letter "A" in brackets, thus (A), after the name of subscribers, were added. This would enable collectors seeking particular articles (many of which are peculiar to certain districts), to more easily obtain them by writing direct to dealers in those parts. No doubt, many subscribers are collectors themselves; and the whole thing, if carried out, might be a boon all round. Further, I suggest a column for special "Wants" in antiques, at the usual rates.—Yours faithfully, Southsea.

["Antique" covers such a multitude of sins in the way of "fakes," that we do not quite know how to let them in on the easy terms we give for Book Wants.—Ed.]

"Wireless World"

DEAR SIR,—This Association takes exception to your note in P.C., Aug. 14th, p. 137: "We wish we could say 3d. net." Were this so retailers would be charged 2½d. per copy instead of 2¼d. as at present. Perhaps you will kindly explain.—Sincerely yours,

CHAS. H. CUMMINS,

Secretary London and Provincial Retail Newsagents' Association.

August 17th.

[If the public are paying 3d., well and good; it only shows how they are getting used to the net price that they do not ask discount on a non-net publication. We can hardly think that Mr. Cummins would like to go back to the days when the public expected discount even on a 3d. magazine, and if they could not get it of Brown, they went to Jones or Robinson. We hope to see the day when nobody will expect discount off any retail price. Look how the patent medicine and other proprietary article people have put their business on a sound footing, and our trade is gradually doing it.—Ed.]

A Suggestion to Publishers

DEAR SIR,—I should like to be allowed to make a suggestion through you to the publishers. I think it would be a great practical convenience to all booksellers if they will adopt it. The suggestion is simply that the individual firms should issue their complete catalogues, and also their supplementary announcement lists, all and always in demy octavo, set, say, in pure roman old face type.

It is a very simple suggestion, but I think would be a great convenience, and I venture to think many firms would find some economy by its adoption. At present I receive them in all sizes from crown octavo to foolscap folio or demy quarto. Some of them very elaborately got up and printed in two colours. I suggest this is inconvenient for filing and quite unnecessary when so elaborate. My own custom is to file in alphabetical cases. I can readily turn to any publishers' list that I may need. Having found it, I wish to be able to turn to the item I am looking for without a lot of unnecessary search. It is clear that if I have to look over a list, either not classified at all or badly classified, mixed with much irrelevant matter, my search is made more difficult than it need be.

Please note that I have in mind at this moment trade lists. It is another question when lists for public distribution are to be issued. They may be made as attractive as is thought necessary. But for the bookseller's own use all that is necessary is a catalogue, with its supplements, (1) in demy octavo, (2) clearly set, (3) giving full details of the books, (4) without Press comments, (5) giving every book in print, (6) noting at the end books that are reprinting, and perhaps forthcoming, (7) arranged under authors alphabetically, (8) arranged by subjects. These points are essential.

With further reference to (4) above, Messrs. Longmans' and Messrs. Macmillans' Notes on New Books seem to me to be upon the right lines, so that a bookseller may gather a true idea of the scope and purpose of a book. (We do not need these in the catalogue, but in the supplementary Notes such as these firms issue.) What I need as a bookseller is a note that will give me the drift of a book; this helps when I am questioned by a customer. I read as widely as I can, but there are plenty of books which I am not competent to read, and plenty more that I have no time to read. It is this crowd that I need a guide through. But I do not want merely a favourable paragraph from the Maily Times, which, after all, is only the opinion of one man who may or may not be competent to write about it. May I again make clear that these Notes should be given in a separate paper (as in the two firms named) or included in the supplementary lists? They are not needed in the complete catalogue.

Thanking you for the courtesy of your columns,—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

HENRY B. SAXTON.

"The German War and Catholicism"

SIR,—Our nations are allied; our troops are fighting together, and their munitions aim at crushing the same enemy. In the domain of ideas, in which the War has also its powerful action, we cannot do otherwise than combine our efforts.

The Catholics of France, in order to state their cause and explain their thought to their brethren in the Faith in foreign lands, have undertaken a campaign, in which you will certainly wish to take part.

The communications relative to the religious interests of our country will be addressed to you periodically. These will be accompanied by documentary evidence, such as works composed "ex professo" on the matter treated of, and will be sent to your publisher.

If you like to make them known to your readers, either in their literal form, or by writing your own impressions on the various subjects touched upon successively, you will be giving your valuable aid to the cause of the Allies, and at the same time contribute to the final victory of the common cause.

We are forwarding you, in the first place, the volume composed by the

Notices of Books

From Messrs. Ewart, Seymour & Co., Ltd.—"My Army and Navy System," by J. P. Muller. Lieut. J. P. Muller boldly begins his book by roundly declaring that there is something wrong with the physical training of the British soldier. Such a statement, coming from any other source, might safely be disregarded, but Lieut. Muller is widely esteemed in this country, and has many devoted followers. He claims that his system can prevent most of the common ailments and cure almost every chronic disease. The present manual of physical training is intended for soldiers, sailors, police constables and others. It contains illustrated exercises, a chapter on breathing, and an attack on the Swedish system at present in use in the Army.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"The Captain's Daughter, and Other Tales," by Alexander Poushkin. Translated from the Russian by T. Keane. "Chelkash, and Other Stories," by Maxim Gorky. "The Little Angel, and Other Stories," by L. N. Andreyev. We give a special word of welcome to these three attractively bound and well printed volumes in the Great Russian Fiction Series of Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. During recent years Gorky, Poushkin, and Andreyev have secured a large public in this country, but there are still many thousands of readers who know nothing of these writers save their names. Their work, it is true, is often tragic and even terrible, but it cuts deeply into human nature and enables us more fully to understand a people different in many respects from ourselves, though animated by the same ideals. The price at which these volumes are issued is very reasonable, and the stories have been well translated into idiomatic English. Perhaps the volume of tales by Andreyev will be read with the most curiosity, for his war book, "The Read Laugh," is widely known, and the public will be anxious to know more of the curious and terrible work of this strange genius.

From Messrs. Jarrold & Sons.—"The Barbarians in Belgium," by Pierre Nothomb. Translated by Jean E. H. Findlay. Prefatorial Letter by Carton de Wiart. Perhaps the most commendable quality of M. Nothomb's strange and startling book is its moderation. In writing of the Germans who have devastated his native land he never exaggerates, and never loses himself in futile indignation.

CONTENTS.—The Effects of the War on the Overseas Trade of the United Kingdom, by S. Rosenbaum, M.Sc. (with Discussion). The Multiplier and Capital Wealth, by Bernard Mallet, C.B., and H. C. Royal Statistical Society, 9, Adelphi Terrace, Strand, W.C.

Part of the book has already appeared in the Revue des Deux Mondes, but since its publication innumerable documents and accounts of eye-witnesses have increased the pile of papers of the Belgian Inquest, and it has been thought wise to add to the original pamphlet. All the suffering and martyrdom of a nation are here presented to the world; the book is terrible, but it is right and wise that it should have been written, and we hope it will be widely read.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS
is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind, and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books, from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints and Arundel Prints are included. The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best, bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication which gives the entire catalogue of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

SEP 16 1915

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN

BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

With 4 Illustrations in Photogravure, 6/-

'Mickey,' like 'Freckles,' is a character of unusual charm, possessed of Irish wit and sprightliness, and a joyous, happy nature. The work possesses, as with 'Freckles,' a deep feeling for Nature, and Human nature, and it has the charm of the woods, the flowers, and all living things.

MODERN AUSTRIA

This book, by an Italian intimately acquainted with Austrian life, political and social, is a brilliant study of Austria just before the outbreak of the war. Signor Gayda's main theme is the struggle between the feudal aristocracy, German and intensely Clerical and conservative, and the popular movements towards racial autonomy and democracy. The character and ideals of the different peoples conglomerated in the Empire are described, and particular attention is paid to the ever-increasing power of the Jews, to the influence of the Roman Catholic Church, and to the growth of Socialism. There are interesting chapters on Austrian manners and morals, and the book, while showing a broad and philosophic outlook, has a lightness of touch and a picturesqueness of style which should make it attractive to the general reader. The future of Austria is perhaps the most interesting problem raised by the war, and Signor Gayda's book adds greatly to our knowledge of Austrian affairs, concerning which the Western reader is often strangely ignorant.

THE Publishers' Circular

Copyright in "You Made Me Love You"

(I Didn't Want to Do it)

THE question is often put to us what constitutes "publication" so as to secure copyright for an American author in this country. We have always replied that it was sufficient proof of publication to satisfy our law if you could show that simultaneously with the publication in America, or within the period of delay fixed by law (14 days or any time fixed by Order in Council), you have sold copies of the book and had copies for sale if required—the law does not specify any number and it has always seemed to us that proof of the sale of even a single copy or its exposure for sale fulfils the requirements of our law. The organ of the Publishers' International Bureau, the Droit d'Auteur, published at Berne, gives a full account of the interesting case of the song "You Made Me Love You (I Didn't Want to Do it)," by the American authors, Joe McCarthy and James V. Monaco. On March 5th, 1913, the song was published in New York by The Broadway Music Corporation, and also at Toronto, and the American publishers sent to Messrs. Francis Day & Hunter, of London, 12 copies asking them to copyright them on the 5th of May. On this date the plaintiffs, Day & Hunter, sent the British Museum a copy and four copies to the University Libraries; the other six copies were placed in a box with a notice they were "New Works published this day," in a retail shop visited on an average by eighty customers a day; these copies remained in the box ten or fifteen days; other new music publications were added daily as published; eventually they were put into stock. As it is well known that there is practically no sale in this country for American songs until they have been sung here in public—their sale is very limited until publicity has created a demand—i.e., if they "catch on" at the Music Halls, &c.—the plaintiffs considered that it was sufficient to have deposited the copies at the British Museum, &c., and to have offered the work for sale, and that it was unnecessary to have a larger number of copies since there was no demand.

Under the circumstances mentioned there was no demand here for copies until the 12th of August. When the plaintiffs heard that the song was to be sung in public, they telegraphed to the United States for 10 copies on July 18th, and 10 more on July 26th and finally for 100 on August 13th (1913). In the meantime two singers, Miss Florence Smithson on July 25th, at the Chiswick Empire Theatre, and Miss Grace la Rue, on August 4th, at the Palace, had sung the song. These facts show that the supply so far had been equal to the demand. On the other hand, the song was not publicly announced in the press or in the firm's catalogue until the following September.

The firm of Mr. Feldman (who was murdered by the Germans in the Lusitania a year and a half later) brought out a song entitled: "You Didn't Want to Do it, but You Did."

Although not objecting to the music, the plaintiffs, Messrs. F. Day & Hunter, brought an action against Messrs. Feldman & Co., for infringing their copyright in the words of their song. In the action which ensued the defence put forward was that the American song had not been published in this country in such a manner as to entitle the American authors to the benefit of the copyright and that for the sole reason that keeping six copies in a box in a retail shop was not equivalent to effective publication.

The judge had thus to decide the important question whether the offering for sale in the shop of the plaintiffs as explained above constituted a first publication in accordance with the law of 1911.

The 1st section of the British copyright law of 1911 sets out that copyright shall be accorded to all original work, literary, dramatic, musical, or artistic, if, in case of a published work, it has been first published in the dominions of his Majesty in which this law operates. Clause 3 of the same section explains that the expression "publication" "means the issue of copies of the work to the public," i.e., the setting out of copies so as to render them accessible to the public (not even an Act of Parliament can make the public buy them); and Section 35, No. 3, declares that a work shall be considered as having been published for the first time in the Dominions of his Majesty to which the Act extends, notwithstanding it has been published simultaneously elsewhere, unless the publication in parts of the Dominions of his Majesty as aforesaid is colourable only and not intended to satisfy the reasonable requirements of the public; and a work shall be deemed to be published simultaneously in two places if the time between the publication in one such place and the publication in the other place does not exceed fourteen days, or such longer period as may, for the time being, be fixed by Order in Council.

The defendants, Messrs. Feldman & Co., maintained that the song had not been made accessible to the English public in the fortnight after May 5th, and even admitting the contrary view, that the publication was purely colourable only (i.e., a sham) without meeting the reasonable requirements of the public.

Mr. Justice Neville decided that the act of publication had been properly performed and that the plaintiffs had in all good faith the intention to satisfy the demands for the song each time they were made in such a way that the offer not being a pretended one the publication was not colourable; the condition required by the law had been satisfied.

As regarded the claim of the plaintiffs that the words of the defendants' song were an infringement of their copyright, Mr. Justice Neville held that they were an infringement and had been illegally published by the defendants, notwithstanding their claim that this song was what is called a reply song, and as such quite legitimate. The Judge was of opinion that, taken in general, the words and rhyme were so manifestly alike that the second song must be injurious to the first.

But the Court of Appeal, while confirming Mr. Justice Neville's judgment on the first point, i.e., as to the publication having satisfied the requirements of the law, reversed his decision as regards the defendants' song being in any way an infringement of the first. The Court held that, in spite of the similarity of ideas, no essential part of the first song was reproduced in the second under the form of the expression of ideas, which alone enters into account in obtaining copyright.

It is curious how the song hung fire so long and then took the town and the country by storm; but these great successes generally have a short life and a merry one. Already we hear that anyone singing "Tipperary" in the trenches is liable to be hoist with one of his own petards.

Notes and Announcements

SIR MARTIN CONWAY will shortly publish, through Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co., a book on "The Crowd in Peace and War." It is an attempt to deal in popular language with the relations of the individual to the crowd, and of crowds to one another. The writer discusses the broad questions of morality, religion, government, Socialism, war, education, and so forth from a novel point of view, and illustrates his remarks by numerous tales and citations from authors ancient and modern.

We regret to have to record the death of a famous angler, angling writer, and all-round sportsman, Mr. Henry Cholmondeley-Pennell, which took place, his widow informs us, on Sunday, August 24th. "Who's Who" gives the date of Mr. Pennell's birth as 1837, but Mrs.

Pennell tells us it was 1836. Not only was Mr. Pennell for over half a century one of the best-known anglers and angling writers, he was also a first rate shot with pistol, shot gun and rifle, a fine skater, a straight rider to hounds, and no mean poet. He was the eldest son of Sir Henry Pennell and Harriet Pennell, grand-daughter of Sir Philip Francis, author of "The Letters of Junius." The books which he wrote and edited for Messrs. Longmans' Badminton Library were perhaps his most successful writings.

"Peter Piper," by Doris Egerton Jones, a novel which created an instantaneous hit for its young Australian author, is the next volume to be added to Cassell's Shilling Cloth Bound Series.

"The Royal Marriage Market of Europe," by Princess Catherine Radziwill, is announced for immediate publication by the House of Cassell. Princess Radziwill, whose "Memories of Forty Years" created so great an interest last autumn, is descended from the illustrious Lithuanian family of the Counts Rzewuski and is a daughter of the Governor-General of Caucasus, who counted among his intimate friends the Tsar Nicholas. The Princess having married a Radziwill, was received at all the Courts of Europe, and has acquired a familiarity with the family histories of reigning houses. Her new volume will deal with the marriages of the House of Hapsburg, the Hohenzollerns, the Romanoffs, the Nassaus, the Belgian Royal Family, and those of Italy and Servia. Included in the book are chapters upon the love idylls and tragedies of Spain, Portugal, Roumania, Greece, Bulgaria, Denmark, Sweden, the tempestuous alliances of the Bourbon-Orleans dynasty, and the weddings of the members of our own Royal Family.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish immediately in their Rural Text-Book Series, a volume on "The Principles of Floriculture," by Professor Edward A. White, of Cornell University. The book is intended primarily for the class room, but it should also prove of service to the practical man. The same publisher will also issue immediately "A Student's History of Education," by Professor F. P. Graves, who is a considerable authority on the subject.

A new volume in the "Ten Minutes with the Bible" Series will be issued immediately by Mr. Elliot Stock. It is entitled "In Time of War," and contains daily readings on the Lord's Prayer and the book of Ezra—the story of the Faithful Remnant—which will be of special interest at the present time.

"Books of Life and Love" is the title of a new series of choice books at a popular price announced for early issue by Charles P. Sisley, Ltd. They will "be devoted to original Court Memoirs and to Contes Galants by such masters as Balzac, Le Sage, Boccaccio, Sterne, Rabelais, Rousseau, &c. The new series will be published at 1s. net, and will be appropriately illustrated and suitably bound."

The Parliamentary Committee appointed by Mr. Bonar Law to consider and report on "the present condition and prospects of the West African trade in palm kernels and other edible and oil-producing nuts and seeds" has raised a question of first-rate importance to the future commerce of the Empire. Information is the first requirement, and all those who are not disposed to wait for the report of this Commission should read the book which Professor Wyndham R. Dunstan—himself a member of the new committee—has written on "Oil Seeds and Feeding Cakes," one of the "Imperial Institute Monographs," which Mr. Murray will publish shortly.

Mr. Murray will publish shortly the volume of reminiscences which Dr. Buzzard has written, under the title of "With the Turkish Army in the Crimea and Asia Minor." It was originally intended to publish this book under the title of "Crimean Reminiscences," but the new name proves infinitely more appropriate.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton will publish at once at a popular price "Through Terror to Triumph" by Mr. Lloyd George, a volume of War speeches and pronouncements by the Minister of Munitions. Mr. George might have chosen a better title—his would suit a brochure by the Kaiser.

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton announce for immediate publication "On the Side of the Angels," the story of the angels at Mons, by Harold Begbie.

"Peter Tamson, Elder o' the Kirk and Sportsman," is announced as a new shilling book in "The Country Life Library" for publication in September. "Peter Tamson" is the work of a new writer, Captain Dickie, who seems likely to come to his own in the literary world. The author, himself a Scotsman, has inherited the gift of sleek humour and pathos which characterise the classic Scottish story. The book will carry a ripple of laughter to the trenches, and afford a welcome break to those who are bearing anxiety at home.

Mr. Ford Madox Hueffer's new book, "Between St. Dennis and St. George," which is announced by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, is a trenchant analysis and reply to the writings of "those gentlemen whom it is convenient to call pro-Prussian apologists," and something more.

Messrs. David Wyllie and Son, Aberdeen, will shortly publish a work of more than general interest to students of ballad literature, entitled "Peter Buchan, and other papers on Scottish and English Ballads and Songs." The author is Mr. William Walker. The edition will be strictly limited, and orders will be booked by the publishers in the order of their application at 7s. 6d. net; post free, 7s. 10d. The size of Mr. Walker's book is crown 8vo., x+292 pages, and there is one illustration.

The Secolo's Bucharest correspondent states: "The Queen Mother of Roumania, known in art by the name of Carmen Sylva, is at work on a new romance, of which the subject is taken from the Crusades. The title of this new work is "Hilderic."

On August 25th, Mr. Unwin published Dr. J. William White's "America and Germany: a Text Book of the War." Dr. White, who is a well-known American surgeon, has presented in readable and logical form what he believes to be the consensus of American opinion on the struggle, and has made a strong plea for the cause of the Allies and a scathing rejoinder to the assertions and the arguments of the German apologists.

Mr. Unwin will publish on August 30th Signor Virginio Gayda's book, "Modern Austria: Her Racial and Social Problems," translated by Miss Z. M. Gibson and Mr. C. A. Miles. The work of an Italian intimately acquainted with Austrian life, political and social, it is a brilliant study of Austria just before the outbreak of the war. A section on the Italia Irredenta question has been specially written for the English edition.

Mr. Joseph McCabe's book "The Kaiser: His Personality and Career," will be published on August 30th by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin. While the whole world is to-day discussing the Kaiser, a properly illuminating study of him is required, and Mr. McCabe sets out to make that study, dispassionately, but searchingly. His hereditary environment and relation to his English mother are carefully considered, his education and early reign traced, and an attempt is made to expound his policy as a cold preparation for the eventual war. The book aims at possessing a serious psychological value.

A new edition of Mr. H. de Vere Stacpoole's "The Blue Lagoon," with illustrations by Mr. Willy Pogány, will be published on August 30th by Mr. T. Fisher Unwin.

Messrs. Methuen are publishing Miss Constance Cotterell's new book "The Perpetual Choice," and Miss Marjorie Pickthall's book "Little Hearts."

"All Things Considered," by G. K. Chesterton, is being issued in a cheaper form at 1s. by Messrs. Methuen on September 2nd. Messrs. Methuen are also publishing at 1s. Clark Russell's fascinating book, "My Danish Sweetheart," while in their 7d. series they are issuing Mr. A. W. Marchmont's book, "A Moment's Error."

English the only language to be used

THERE was recently inaugurated in Tokyo a social club called the English Club by young Japanese, in which English is the only language to be used. The membership, which numbers some forty, includes men in various walks of life, those in the service of the Foreign Office, the government railways, the N.Y.K., and other commercial institutions. There is also a number of young authors and journalists.—The Argonaut.

Death of Mr. W. H. Spottiswoode, Founder of "Printer's Pie"

THE book trade will learn with much regret of the death of Mr. William Hugh Spottiswoode, director and manager of Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode, the well-known firm of printers and publishers, which occurred suddenly from heart failure in Wales on August 21st, 1915.

THE LATE MR. HUGH SPOTTISWOODE

Mr. Spottiswoode was born in 1864 and was the son of the late Mr. William Spottiswoode, President of the Royal Society, who was buried at Westminster Abbey. He was the founder of "Printer's Pie," a work which has increased in popularity year by year. He also held positions as chairman of the board of the Sphere and Taller, director of Messrs. John Broadwood & Sons, Ltd., and director of the Royal Academy of Music. For some years he was a manager of the Royal Institution of Great Britain, and a member of the Committee and Anniversary Committee of the Royal Literary Fund. In 1903 he was the president of the Anniversary Festival of the Printers' Pension Corporation.

Newspaper Changes

THE Observer announces that Mr. J. L. Garvin has arranged to retire very shortly from the Pall Mall Gazette.

Reynolds's Newspaper states that the Pall Mall Gazette has been purchased by a syndicate, of which Mr. Davison Dalziel, M.P., is the moving spirit. Mr. J. L. Garvin's successor, it is understood, will be Mr. D. M. Sutherland, late editor of the Evening Standard. A syndicate, with which Sir Alexander Henderson is connected, has purchased the Standard. Mr. W. A. Woodward will be the new editor.

What he should do

THE man who does not advertise simply because his grandfather did not should wear knee breeches, silk stockings and a wig.

The man who does not advertise because it costs money should quit paying salary for the same reason.

The man who does not advertise because he doesn't know how to write an advertisement should quit eating because he can't cook.

The man who does not advertise because somebody said it did not pay should not believe the world is round because the ancients said it was flat.

HOW ITALY WILL DEFEAT THEM

By the Author of "German Spies in England," "Britain's Deadly Peril," &c.

Mr. Le Queux, who is persona grata at the Italian Court, and has been decorated by King Victor with the highest honours his Majesty can bestow, recounts conversations he has had with his Majesty, with the Duke of the Abruzzi, Baron Sonnino, and various Cabinet Ministers. Critical studies are also given from personal knowledge of the most important men in the southern sphere of military operations, while the book, in addition, contains much important information hitherto unpublished, and as such is a very valuable contribution to the literature of the war.

The Book Trade and the War

ONE of the staff of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR AND BOOKSELLERS' RECORD, Mr. A. B. Marston, son of the Editor of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR, has received his commission as Second Lieutenant in the 9th Royal West Surrey Regiment. Another member of our staff, Mr. Stewart, Editor of our new book list and "English Catalogue of Books," who has been at the Front in France since January last, has recently been promoted to Staff Sergeant.

MR. ERSKINE MACDONALD says: "No phase of the Great War has evoked finer poems than the casualty lists," and that he is publishing on September 1st, "a collection of the noblest and most poignant elegies which have appeared in The Times, The Spectator and other papers. Some have an individual subject, others are concerned with unnamed heroes, but whether particular or general they all constitute—as the title page describes—a tribute and memorial to the brave and gallant gentlemen of all ranks who have given their lives for Great and Greater Britain in the present war. The contributors to this "Crown of Amaranth" include the Marquess of Crewe, Captain Julian Grenfell, Mrs. Meynell, Katharine Tynan, Laurence Binyon, Maurice Baring, Canon Scott, Lady Anne Bowes-Lyon, John Helston, the Editor of The British Review, John Gurdon, S. Gertrude Ford, Cecil Roberts, Max Plowman, Israel Gollanez, Agnes G. Herbertson, Frank Taylor and others."

MR. DENIS TANNER (Rifle Brigade) the youngest son of Mr. F. G. Tanner, was wounded by a sniper on August 15th, the bullet entering his right shoulder. The bullet was removed a few days after by an operation, and he is now going on well and hopes soon to be transferred to England for a rest. Mr. D. Tanner was present at the retaking of the trenches at Hooge.

The Booksellers' Provident Institution

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors held at Stationers' Hall on Wednesday, August 18th, the sum of £97 3s. 8d. was granted for the relief of members and widows of members. Mr. C. J. Longman presided at the meeting, and was supported by Messrs. L. Carrdus, J. Clark, J. Foster, A. W. Gatfield, J. W. Harden, C. H. Hollingsworth, F. J. James, G. H. Johnson, A. S. Lewis, W. Longman, A. W. Mills, A. J. Sabin, W. S. Smart, F. W. Smith, J. E. Stroulger.

Death of M. Lucien Layus

MANY of his friends on this side of the Channel will hear with great regret of the death of M. Lucien Layus, which we see announced in the August 20th number of "Bibliographie de la France." For many years M. Layus has been one of the leading spirits of the French Book Trade. He was a Commander of the Legion of Honour, was a member and formerly President of the Cercle de la librairie, and Director of l'Annuaire Didot-Bottin. The funeral service, which was very largely attended, took place in the church of Saint Thomas-d'Aquinas, and the interment at Montparnasse. We are quite sure that we are expressing the feelings of the British Book Trade in saying that, with our French confrères "Nous adressons à Madame Layus et ses enfants l'hommage de notre profonde et douloureuse sympathie." Our former Director, the late Mr. Edward Marston, and the present Editor, had experience of the charming hospitality of M. Layus, and of the esteem in which he was held for quite thirty years.

Exhibition of War Books

THE select War Exhibition of books, maps, prints, pamphlets, &c., organised by the Library Association as an adjunct to their ordinary exhibition of best books recently published, will be open to members and others attending the Annual Conference at Caxton Hall on Monday evening the 30th August, and will be open free to the public for the whole of the following day, the 31st August. English, French, Italian, Spanish, and American publishers have generously lent select exhibits of their various publications dealing with all aspects of the War and with the innumerable subjects connected with the War. These will be systematically classified, and should prove a most interesting and instructive illustration of the literary and publishing activities stimulated by the War, and of special utility to librarians, library committees, and book-buyers generally. An important feature will be the large display of maps of all the countries involved in the present upheaval and of the various war areas.

During the Conference there will be a series of discussions on the effect of the War on library administration, and on the Literature of the War.

George Newnes, Ltd.

THE Directors desire to congratulate the Shareholders on the satisfactory result of the year's trading, which has been carried on in the face of most trying and difficult conditions. As appears from the accounts, the profits amount to £50,133 17s. 9d. The circulations of the Company's publications, Tit-Bits, Woman's Life, the Strand Magazine, the Wide World Magazine, the Grand Magazine, the Captain Magazine, the Woman at Home Magazine, the Ladies' Field, and Country Life, have been well maintained, but owing to the war the advertisement revenue has largely decreased, with a consequent reduction in profits. This condition of affairs is general throughout the trade. Publications appealing to the wealthier and leisured classes have been specially affected.

The dividend on the Preference Shares has already been paid, and an interim dividend of 5 per cent. has been paid on the Ordinary Shares. The Directors now recommend the payment of a final dividend of 5 per cent. on the Ordinary Shares, making 10 per cent. for the year.

German Novels of the day

PERHAPS the two novels which may be said to describe German life the most accurately are Gustav Frenssen's "Klaus Hinrich Baas," published in a translation by Esther Everett Lape and Elizabeth Fisher Read, and Herman Hagedorn's "Faces in the Dawn." It has even been said that in the Frenssen story, which tells of the business career of a young German man and his relation to the different social and economic problems of the day, there are summed up the reasons for Germany's past and present actions. Both are published by the Macmillan Company.—The Argonaut.

Presentation to

Mr. Horace Hart, signed by men at the Front

THE following is the address which was recently presented to Mr. Horace Hart on his retirement from the Controllershship of the Printing Department of the Oxford University Press. It will be remembered that Mr. Hart resigned his post in March of the present year in consequence of ill-health.

To Horace Hart, Esq., M.A.

Sir,

We, the employees of the University Press, regret that you are resigning your position as Controller of the Press and Printer to the University of Oxford, which you have held so successfully for more than thirty years.

We recognise that it is mainly owing to your energy and ability that the business of the Press has so largely increased, and the period of your Controllershship will be remembered as one of great expansion and development.

We remember with gratitude the many instances of your regard for our welfare, and your readiness to meet us on all occasions. Your keen judgment, your unsurpassed technical knowledge, your courtesy, and your sympathy have been much appreciated by all.

Now that you are retiring from your strenuous life we hope that you will enjoy a peaceful and well-earned rest and that you will sometimes think with pleasure of the employees of the University Press.

The address was printed in red and black in the beautiful Fell types of the seventeenth century which Mr. Hart brought to light after a long period of disuse. Following the address were autographs of the employees, a page of signatures containing no fewer than thirty-eight names having been written in the trenches in Belgium and certified at the foot by Major Rowell.

The address and sheets of signatures were handsomely bound together in dark blue polished levant at the Press Bindery in Walton Street. The workmanship affords striking testimony to the technical efficiency attained in the bindery under Mr. Hart's management.

The signatures to the memorial number 589 in all, and the signatories were represented at the presentation—which took place on Saturday, August 14th, at Hill Crest, Boars Hill—by Mr. F. J. Cook, of the Press Counting House, Mr. F. W. Barnard, Father of the Compositors' Chapel, and Mr. W. King, Secretary of the Trade Society. These gentlemen were received by Mr. Hart and Miss B. E. Hart, and proceeded to explain that the unavoidable delay in making the presentation had arisen from the decision on the part of the promoters to send out sheets for signature to the Press employees serving at the Front in France and Belgium, a task of some difficulty, which however had in the end been safely accomplished.

French War Literature

MESSRS. PLON-NOURRIT, of Paris, announce a sixth edition of "Dixmude: A Chapter in the History of the Marine Fusiliers (7th October to 10th November, 1914)," by Charles Le Goffic, with 12 illustrations and 2 maps, price 3 francs. Six large editions in a few months prove how the heroism of their Marines has been taken to heart by the French people.

An important work is published by the Nouvelle Librairie Nationale, Rue de Médecis 11, Paris, entitled "Les Cruautés Allemandes: Réquisitoire d'un Neutre," by Léon Maccas, Doctor of Law of the University of Athens. This is a complete survey by a neutral of the crimes committed by the German armies, which are condemned alike by the laws of war and the right of humanity; price 3 francs 50. Another important publication of the same house is "Hors du Joug Allemand: Mesures d'Après-Guerre," by Léon Daudet; price 3 francs 50. It treats of all the German invasions of France—the intellectual invasions of Kant, Fichte, Hegel, Wagner and Nietzsche. Also of the industrial, commercial and technical invasions. It is described as "addressed to all those Frenchmen who have a position of any responsibility in their country, and who wish to form a reasoned opinion on the conditions under which our victory will be consolidated." Over 40,000 copies have been sold of M. Léon Daudet's other work "L'Avant Guerre: Etudes et Documents sur l'Espionage Juif-Allemand en France depuis l'Affaire Dreyfus"; price 3 francs 50.

The Librairie Fischbacher (formerly Cherbulez, Meyrues & Grassart) publishes "Le Dossier de la Guerre," by Gaspard Wampach, 3 vols., 12 francs. It claims to be an impartial survey of the affairs which have led to the present grouping of the nations and to the present War, and gives all the chief national and international documents connected with it.

The Librairie Armand Colin publishes a brochure at 50 cents. on "La Serbie," an account of the history and victories of the Serbian people.

The Librairie Henri Gautier, Paris, publishes "Les Soutanes sous la Mitraille," by René Gael, with a preface by Général Humbel, price 1 franc. This soldier-priest describes the cases he noted daily of almost super-human heroism given by the "petits curés de France." "Cela est français, profondément. On y trouve du pittoresque, de l'humeur, cette 'blague' où se plaît l'esprit gaulois de nos troupiers, des tableaux familiers de la vie des tranchées, du cantonnement de seconde ligne, de l'ambulance." Its French publisher describes it as "Un beau livre et un bon livre. Pages magnifiques, pages d'une beauté pleine et mâle."

NOTICE TO THE TRADE

149, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

The Book Trade Co-operative Christmas Illustrated Catalogue & Record for 1915

THE COMING SEASON IS NOT GOING TO BE AN EASY ONE for the Book Trade. General pre-occupation with affairs of the day, coupled with high taxes and increase in the cost of living is bound to tell on the trade. Can we turn that to our advantage? Can we persuade the public to purchase books rather than less useful and less permanent things?

The Publishers' Association believes that the BEST WAY TO MEET THE CONDITIONS IS TO UNITE in a CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT to place before the public AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE IN NOVEMBER a catalogue which will not only prove specially attractive, but will also SAVE EXPENSE TO ALL CONCERNED WITH THE SALE OF BOOKS.

By CONCENTRATION ON ONE JOINT ENTERPRISE, efficiency and increased trading results can be obtained with a saving of time and money to all concerned.

THIS APPLIES TO THE BOOKSELLER just as much as to the publisher, for he will have at his disposal AT MUCH BELOW COST PRICE, a catalogue that he can be proud to place in the hands of his clients and will not have to send out many different lists in order to keep his customers informed of the activities of the book trade.

This Catalogue, ISSUED OFFICIALLY BY THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION, will afford a splendid chance of proving that the Book trade really can co-operate, as indeed it must if trade is to be increased, or even maintained at pre-war conditions.

 YOU can most materially assist in shaping this new Trade Venture, and in making it a success by at once informing Mr. Wm. Poulten, Secretary, The Publishers' Association, Stationers' Hall Court, London, E.C., how many copies you will be able to use.

Spotted Fever

OUR printers move with the times, Spottiswoode & Co.'s boys, familiarly known as Spots, have recently been replaced by girls. By the courtesy of the Editor of The Ironmonger we give some verses commemorating the change:

SPOTS!

We've had lots;

Of many shapes and sizes—

Some really were surprises—

From lanky loons to sweet cherubic tots,

With shining morning faces,

And quaint plebeian graces

Beauty-Spots!

One wiped his nose before us,

By methods indecorous,

And grinned a dying drake's leer;

"Out," cried we (quoting Shakespear),

"Damnèd Spot!"

Exit an awed and ink-exuding blot
Like a shot.

Old Euclid was a mighty learned pot;

Defined a point—first cousin to a dot;

His theorems inveigle

Bernard Shaw and Mother Seigel,

And fascinate the gentle Hottentot,

What, what?

He died in peace—he'd never seen a Spot.

We could give points to Euclid, so to speak,

Before one blissful day the other week

(We trust you are not weary of this rot),

For until that joyous day

We could spot a Spot at play

And even, like the ointment, touch the

Spot—

But did not.

Such things are now, we hope, for ever past;

The Spots have faded—they were never fast,

And, if washed, they might have run,

And that never would have done—

They have vanished, and our gratitude is vast.

War has blessed us, we assert,

With a P.D. in a skirt,

And our copy-bags are punctual at last.

Mr. James Baker's War Lecture

THE lecture entitled: "The War, its Origin and the Countries devastated by it," which has been so well received in many cities throughout England, was given by Mr. James Baker, F.R.G.S., to some 1,500 of the men at Netley Hospital on August the 27th. The lecturer has been asked also to lecture at the Front for a month. His intimate knowledge of places devastated by the War, and the peoples so cruelly crushed and massacred, enables him to give personal vivid touches to the scenes described, which are illustrated also by pictures taken by the author and lecturer of the peasantry and their homes in times of peace. The whole proceeds of all lectures are given to the Red Cross funds.

Shadows of Flames

WE have pleasure in reproducing a portrait of Princess Troubetzkoy, who, under the name of Amélie Rives, has just published, through Messrs. Hurst & Blackett, Ltd., a new long novel entitled "Shadows of Flames." Her first novel, "World's End," was very successful and is now in its 10th edition and doubtless many thousands of readers will welcome the appearance of this new book. As in "World's End," a Virginian beauty is the heroine. Sophy is most unhappily married, but is loved nobly by a man separated from an unfaithful wife. The husband of Sophy dies, but her lover is not free, and ultimately Sophy marries again; but it is to once more meet with disappointment, her husband finding greater attraction in another woman.

PRINCESS TROUBETZKOY

Author of "Shadows of Flames," published by Messrs. Hurst & Blackett, Ltd.

At last, when she has freed herself, it is left to be understood that happiness will come to her with the lover who has waited so long. The scenes are laid in Italy, England and America.

The Actuary and the Publisher

THE public are apt to estimate life assurance at the value set upon it by the life offices themselves, and by certain practices the estimate thus set is a low one. Consequent upon the indiscriminate appointment of casual agents there has come into existence a practice of selling life assurance at whatever price can be obtained for it. Sometimes a company keeps up the fiction of appointing a man an agent before paying him commission on his own proposal, frequently even this pretence is dispensed with; and a man can not only obtain commission on his own proposal, but, if the policy is a large one, a reduction from the prospectus rate of premium as well. It would be regarded as useless to make the proposals to a publisher which an actuary accepts with no apparent sense of shame. A man does not ask a publisher to sell him a book published at 10s. 6d. net for less than half a guinea. The bookseller it is known receives a discount, but the book buyer neither receives it nor thinks he ought to have it. Too many of the life offices no longer regard the rates of premium published in their prospectuses as being the true value of the policy; they are prepared to cut the rates to the private policy-holder and pay him a commission into the bargain. The case is worse than that of a publisher selling to a private individual at trade rates, or less, because life assurance ought to be a process of mutual co-operation on equitable terms, and to discriminate between policy-holders is wrong in principle and thoroughly bad in practice. On the other side of the Atlantic the practice came into existence, but its evils were quickly recognised; it was stopped in the first place by the concerted action of the companies themselves, and is now prohibited by law.

If life assurance is to come into its own and, after the war, play an even larger part than now in benefiting the community, the companies must tackle this difficult problem of employing unqualified men as agents, of paying commission to private individuals, and of cutting their premium rates. If voluntary action by the companies cannot get rid of the abuse it might well be dealt with by legislation.—The Field.

The old Bookworms and Anglers of Paris in War time

OUT of the Luxembourg Gardens, down to the quays of the Seine; and here, too, the scene remains unchanged. The same interminable line of battered old book-stalls—and the familiar stooping form of the bookworms hovering about them. However, brand-new maps and war books have made their appearance amongst the chaotic collection of scientific, philosophical, and historical volumes, as well as caricatures of the Kaiser, and recently published poems and songs in honour of the glorious battle of the Marne. Below, on the river-bank, sits the incorrigible, retired bourgeois with his ridiculous fishing-rod. Twenty yards away a chocolate-coloured poodle is being shaved by one of the professional dog-barbers who hold a special police permit to pursue their singular profession on the banks of the Seine. "Sale Boche, veux tu rester tranquille!" cries the barber; the poodle whimpers and struggles. "I forbid you to call my dog a Boche!" exclaims the poodle's devoted mistress. "C'est bien dit, madame. The lowest of mongrels is worth more than ten Boches!" calls out the incorrigible angler with enthusiasm. But, as he speaks, a quantity of the poodle's shorn curls, carried away by the wind, fly straight into his face. Startled and blinded, M. le Bourgeois drops his fishing-rod. It slips into the Seine, it drifts away with the tide—whilst

M. le Bourgeois gesticulates despairingly, and the dog-barber rocks with laughter. Increased fury of the bourgeoisie. Shaking his fist at the barber, he cries out incoherently, "Boche—Spy—Traitor—Assassin!" Up walks a policeman: "What's the matter?" But just as the Bourgeois is about to explain, a French aeroplane appears high up above the river—and M. le Bourgeois, forgetting his grievance, pulls out his handkerchief, waves it wildly at the flying-machine, and putting both hands to his mouth, emotionally and lustily shouts out, "Vive la France! Vive la France! Vive la France!"—J. F. Macdonald in the Fortnightly Review.

Trade Notes

DEAR SIR,—I desire to inform you that this business at 79, High Street, Fremantle, carried on under the name of P. H. Anderson & Co. has been purchased by Mr. R. D. Hancock, who will take over the same from August 1st, 1915. All liabilities up to and including July 31st will be immediately settled by me. I can with every reliance introduce to you Mr. Hancock, who is well known in Fremantle, and I am confident that you will find him a sound business man. In relinquishing this business I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my thanks to you for the courtesy, attention and assistance that I have received at your hands during the past fourteen years, and I feel sure the same will be extended to my successor.—Yours faithfully, P. Authors for European Continental Circulation only."

MR. EDITOR,—We beg leave to call your kind attention to our enterprise, now fully started, and whose object is to destroy the Tauchnitz monopoly on the European Continent.

We have fully succeeded in securing for a term of years, the valuable assistance of the leading British and American authors now on the Tauchnitz list. We are issuing one work every fortnight. Have already appeared:—"Bealby," by H. G. Wells; "Delia Blanchflower," by Mrs. Humphry Ward; "Spragge's Canyon," by H. A. Vachell.

In September and October will come out "Nicky Nan, Reservist," by "Q."; "The Turmoil," by Booth Tarkington; "The Price of Love," by Arnold Bennett, and so on. As soon as the War ends we propose issuing five works a month.

The make-up of the volumes is equal to—if not better than—Tauchnitz's; price, the same.

In spite of present circumstances, we meet with a real, tangible success.

We shall be glad to have your esteemed paper mention this effort of ours, and with anticipated thanks, we remain,
Yours faithfully,

LOUIS CONARD.

[We do not think British and American authors will all be so anxious to "destroy" Tauchnitz, who for so long has done them such good service. We all want to destroy German military and naval power, but the honourable and fair relations which our authors and publishers have had with such houses as Tauchnitz are not so easily destroyed.—ED.]

War on the House Fly

DEAR MR. MARSTON,—In the PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of the 10th, I see a notice of Fitzsimons' House Fly appears. You will remember that I some time ago, assisted by a few friends, provided an edition of ten thousand copies of a brief pamphlet on the subject, which Mr. Fitzsimons was good enough to write for us free of charge. These I distributed amongst the troops operating in German South-West Africa, and I think the result of such distribution has been most satisfactory. The idea of distributing the pamphlet was with the view of minimising the risk of enteric, through which we lost many thousands of men during the Boer War. In the last campaign, including the Rebellion and the operations in German West, the official number of men who passed through our hospitals is given as 38,000, and of these the number who died of enteric represented 15. We, of course, presume that inoculation against enteric was responsible for this in a large measure, but we also think that the distribution of our pamphlet had something to do with it. I thought these facts might interest the readers of the P.C.—With kind regards, I am, yours sincerely,

T. MASKEW MILLER.

"An Austrian Army," &c.

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent will find the whole of "An Austrian Army," &c., mentioned in your paper June 26th, in "An Anthology of Humorous Verse," Hutchinson's Popular Classics.

Your correspondent will, no doubt, like the verses on pages 198 and 194. Both these deal with the Kaiser.—Yours faithfully,

G. S. WILKINS.

From Messrs. Andrew Melrose, Ltd.—

"War, Religion and Science," by J. B. Hunt, M.A., B.D. Though there is some careful and conscientious thinking in the nine essays Mr. Hunt has written, there is little in his book that has not occurred to most thoughtful men. Those, however, who are not accustomed to thinking for themselves will find some suggestive remarks and thoughts in this little book.

From Messrs. Sidgwick & Jackson, Ltd.—

"The War of All the Ages," by Evelyn Sharp. Practically all these short stories, one imagines, have been written since the War, for they deal with the effect of the War upon the lives of poor children and their mothers. In spite of the rather insistent note of propaganda running through the book, the stories are very bright, closely observed and entertaining. Miss Sharp has many gifts, not the least of them being her ability to portray child life with point and truth.

From the Society of SS. Peter & Paul.—

"The Religion of Russia," by G. B. H. Bishop. Mr. Bishop declares, no doubt with truth, that the average intelligent Christian in these islands knows absolutely nothing of the history, dogma, and present condition of Russian Orthodoxy, and he points out that at the present time it is more important than ever that efforts should be made on both sides to acquire a better understanding of our respective religious positions. The author recently spent five months in a remote district of Russia, about 1,000 miles from Petrograd. He does not claim to have gained anything more than a superficial knowledge of his subject in so short a time, but it is solely with the desire to interest others in a fascinating subject that he has collected his impressions of the Church in Russia, recently contributed to the Scottish Chronicle. His book has been written from the point of view of the Church in England, and deals with the history of the Russian Church, its public worship, faith and practice, the hierarchy, laity, &c. It is well and suitably illustrated.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

Is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind,
and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books,
from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each
Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints
and Arundel Prints are included.
The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best,
bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication
which gives the entire catalogue
of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest
help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

JACOB PEEK

Orange Grower. A Tale of Southern California. 6/-

By SIDNEY HERBERT BURCHELL, Author of "My Lady of the Bass," etc., etc.

Pall Mall Gazette (Aug 31st).—"Mr. Burchell has introduced us to one of the most amusing and engaging characters which any author has produced for some time."

Daily Telegraph (Aug. 27th).—"This delightful old man is a character worthy of Mark Twain and the most efficacious relief from depression we have encountered for some time.....It is the genuine humour in this book which makes it stand out."

Truth (Sept. 1).—"An eminently satisfactory novel."

Sunday Times.—"In writing 'Jacob Peek,' Mr. Burchell has deserted the XVIIth century for the XIXth and the life of Europe for that of Southern California. The experiment is more than justified and his new story rivals any of its predecessors in brightness and interest. Jacob himself is a triumph of character building."

Times.—"Written with discrimination and humour."

Field.—"A well-told tale of Southern California, characterised by clever character drawing. Incidentally the reader learns a good deal about orange growing and the tricks of the trade, but the book is really entertaining and makes a pleasant companion."

Morning Post.—"Mr. Burchell must know California well to give such an air of reality; the humour is delightful and the whole atmosphere is refreshing and original."

Observer.—"A very little reading cheered us up. The book is as absorbing as any tale of Piccadilly. The characters are live, convincing men and women. The problems that they have to face are the freshness of a comparatively unknown background, but the fears, hopes and loves of the actors are human and universal, and shown to us with a humour, sympathy and intelligence that make the book profoundly interesting."

Methodist Recorder.—"The principal character, whose name is the title, is a fine character study, rugged, shrewd, amusing, full of kindness—a walnut sort of man, outwardly difficult, but with an admirable kernel. One is puzzled by him at first, but ends with genuine admiration, he is so sensible and so helpful. Many of his neighbours and friends contribute to the interest of this straightforward, readable, attractive story."

UNWIN'S CORNER (10)

A NEW 'FIRST' NOVEL

'The Generation Between', the new volume in 'The First Novel' Library, is going to be a worthy follower of 'The Way of an Eagle' in this series.

This is the story of Thomasine Latimer who, typical of her generation in whom the old instincts and the new education are at war, sets aside all those duties which should fall to her as a woman, and goes forth gaily in search of a career. Almost at once she meets with love, marriage and maternity, thereby it seems, only adding to her chains. From these she breaks away and seeks what she desires—viz., liberty and enjoyment in the Women's Colony of Dyleshart, but finds at last that there is only one way of splendid life for herself since she is a woman, and so returns again to what is no longer a burden but the whole glory and crown of her womanhood.

THE GENERATION BETWEEN. By C. M. MATHESON.

The Soul of the English L'Âme des Anglais*

It is pleasant to know that now, when France and England are closer together than they have ever been in their existence, indeed are fighting for their existence together, that there should be in great demand in France a little book entitled, "The Soul of the English." The author comes nearer to understanding our nation than almost any foreign writer who has ever attempted a task so difficult and so delicate, and is well equipped for the task—or rather, we should say, for her labour of love. She is acquainted with our history and literature—and with history and literature generally—as she proves continually by most illuminating comparisons. She has lived in England and it is easy to gather that it is in large measure due to her own personality that she has succeeded so well in describing English life and character. In the accounts left us by early adventurers of their reception by the inhabitants of strange lands, there are innumerable arresting instances in which the natives, generally mis-called savages, met their strange visitors more than half-way, showing by all their actions that they felt, "Here are beings like ourselves only different, they appear friendly, let us be friendly." What tragedies for centuries lie behind that appearance of friendliness.

But in coming to England, not to spy out the nakedness of the land, to study us with preconceived dislike and to traduce us to the world, like Heine, this author came with the best of all introductions—her own charming personality which radiates from these pages and proved an Open Sesame not only to the houses—an easy matter, for we have never been accused of inhospitality—but also to the hearts of the English who have had the good fortune to meet her. She knows us, if not better than we know ourselves, at least better than we know each other. As she well says, we are too self-centred to endeavour to get at the real soul even of our best friends—our characteristic national reserve is really the expression of individual character. We do not, as the man who knew us best said, wear our hearts upon our sleeves. She contrasts this reserve with the boundless unreserve in this respect of the Latin races, which is summed up in the famous "Homo sum; humani nihil a me alienum puto." The author hints that her countrymen and women push this interest in other people's affairs to a point when it becomes, if not a vice, at least not much more of a virtue than our cold reserve.

We want to call the attention of booksellers and librarians to this delightful book about our noble selves, not only because it will interest, amuse and sometimes startle them, to see themselves through the penetrating, incisive, unflattering but always friendly eyes of this Anglophil French writer, but also because it is a revelation of French character: in weighing each English vice or virtue our author puts its French equivalent, if there is one, into the scales. By unflattering we do not mean she has no praise for the soul of the English, but that she does not pay vain compliments. It is impossible to read this book, by a writer of such fine perception and intellectual power, without feeling one's pride and confidence in one's country confirmed. Take, for example, the present position of our race after a year of such a war as the world has never known. The extremes of feeling are represented by pessimism on one hand and by optimism on the other, but the majority of us believe we shall win by holding to the via media. As Montesquieu said, we are "une nation impatiente, sage dans sa fureur même; et qui, maîtresse de la mer (chose inouïe jusqu'alors), mêle le commerce avec l'empire."

The writer of "L'Âme des Anglais" gives, as an apology for attempting such a work at all, that she was impelled to do it by reason of her good feeling towards us and desire to make her own people better acquainted with us. She says:—

"J'admire l'Angleterre—qui ne l'admire! jusqu'à ceux qui l'exècrent—mais surtout je l'aime. Je l'aime d'une tendresse familière, comme on aime ce qui a éveillé les premières rêveries." This book was written long before the War, and, as we said before, it is a happy circumstance that six editions of it should be circulating across the Channel—each copy carrying enlightenment about the soul of the English to the soul of the French. Then the style is so polished and luminous—reminding one of those gracious "Lettres d'une Péruvienne"—that the mere reading is a pleasure; especially is this so in the long chapter on English love of gardens, in which we get marvellous pen pictures of the surroundings of some famous ancestral halls—which have not always been happy homes by any means.

Booksellers who have no demand for French books could create one by recommending this work. It ought to be translated by some sympathetic mind; but the difficulty is that those who will want to read it will wish to do so in the original—and they will be right. The references to Shakespeare are so fine and comprehending that they are immortelles lovingly placed on his monument—like the praise of Hugo or Alfred de Vigny's verse, in which he tries to picture the soul of Shakespeare, and asks, "Quel fut jadis Shakespeare !"

Qui toujours passe en pleurs parmi d'autres figures,
Comme un pâle rayon dans les forêts
obscuras,
Triste, simple et terrible, ainsi que
vous passez,
Le dédain sur la bouche et vos grands
yeux baissés."

It is a fine tribute, more lasting than any immortelle; but it is incomplete. For it is impossible to believe that one who painted youth, love, beauty, life and the joie de vivre with such delightful gracious wit and humour, should be only the Shakespeare of Vigny. But his variety is so infinite that each one who tries to read his soul must get a different impression and be equally baffled in the end. We had intended to give at least some description of these chapters, but want of space forbids. There is a playful mockery in the title of at least one, e.g., "Notre ascétisme et leur sensualité." In her most daring chapter, that on "Religion," she preaches from the text provided by Mr. Edmund Gosse, in his terrible "Father and Son," which reminds one of the will, even the willingness, of Abraham to cut his son's throat in the name of his religion. The references to our authors are few and brief. Meredith, Hardy, Wells, &c.—just a rapid reference, but striking! Our authors create a character or set of characters, and the reading public ignores them or applauds. If the public likes them, then the author gives them more of what they like: the same people and things and scenes under different names. One would like to have had the opinion of an American who knew England on this French attempt, of course not always successful, to penetrate our soul—such, for instance, as that of James Russell Lowell.

Notes and Announcements

DR. GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM is publishing, through his firm, G. P. Putnam's Sons, a further volume of his reminiscences. Last year he brought out his "Memories of My Youth," the greater portion of which concerned itself with the American Civil War. Major Putnam has completed the writing of his later recollections, which will be put into volume form at once, and which will be really a continuation, not only of the personal record in his "Memories of My Youth," but of the record of the policies, and of the more important undertakings of the firm which were presented up to 1872 in Dr. Putnam's memoir of his father, George Palmer Putnam. The new book will, therefore, be the proper complement to the two earlier books. The forthcoming work presents what Dr. Putnam can remember of the men with whom he has come into personal relations, on both sides of the Atlantic, and of the events of which he has had knowledge, and of the movements with which he has had close personal concern. Dr. Putnam utilises this volume also for an expression of his opinions in regard to certain controversial matters in which he has taken part. These controversies cover such vital matters as Civil Service Reform (U.S.A.); honest money; free trade; the right of the bookseller to enforce his own regulations; copyright, domestic and international; national defence; &c. Mr. Putnam is including, as an appendix to the book, the many letters which he has, during the past few months, brought into print in England and America, in regard to the war of German aggression.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. will publish immediately a new novel entitled "The Romance of a Red Cross Hospital," by F. Frankfort Moore, author of "I Forbid the Banns," &c. The Red Cross Hospital of this romance is not situated in any part of that rather indefinite region of Europe known as "the Front," but in the heart of a typical English county, and the characters who are responsible for the romantic elements of the story are such as would be furnished by the locale chosen by the author. Mr. Frankfort Moore, while mindful of the development of the romantic elements associated with the hospital of his story, offers on almost every page his tribute of admiration for the splendid work done by the surgeons, the nurses and the voluntary helpers wearing the Geneva badge.

The first edition in English of the great Russian epic, "The Armament of Igor," is about to be published by Mr. Humphrey Milford, Oxford University Press. The editor is Mr. L. A. Magnus, LL.D., who has written a general introduction and gives a revised text, with translation, full notes, genealogical tables, &c. The poem, which describes a disastrous foray by Igor Svyatoslavic in 1185, forms part of the ordinary school course in Russia, and outside Russia is set for university courses in Slavonic; and the English edition is intended for both the student and the general reader.

The Daily Telegraph recently published four articles by Mr. Hall Caine, which "created a profound impression among readers of that journal." In response to an insistent demand, these articles are now to be issued in book form by Mr. William Heinemann. The book will be entitled "The Drama of 365 Days," and will be published at 1s. net. The frontispiece will be a photograph portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, which is reproduced from the latest portrait, by special permission of H.M.

the King. "The Drama of 365 Days" is dedicated to the young manhood of the Empire. "It is not a history of the period it covers, but rather a series of flashlights on the human side of the vast struggle, which are a revelation of the artist's insight into character and motive. It is, indeed, a clarion call to the young manhood of the Empire, and no man or woman can read it without feeling that they must throw in their last ounce of will and energy to help in the War."

"Salvation Sal" is the title of Mr. Horace W. C. Newte's new novel, which was published by Messrs. Chatto & Windus on September 2nd. The book describes the adventures of an innocent and religious girl amid the trials and temptations of a career in musical comedy, and takes the reader very much behind the scenes of theatrical life.

A new novel by Mr. Maurice Hewlett is a literary event. "The Little Iliad," which Mr. Heinemann will publish this month, is a departure from Mr. Hewlett's previous work in the direction of historical romance and the comedy of manners. It is rather, as its title suggests, a modern romance, with a Helen as its central figure.

Among other of Mr. Heinemann's autumn novels, "The Immortal Gymnasts," which is to appear shortly, strikes a refreshing note. It is a phantasy on the adventures of those three immortals, Pantaloon, Harlequin and Columbine, who, saddened by the death of the Comic Spirit, come to London, and take up their lives as common mortals.

Mr. Heinemann also announces a first novel by a new writer, Miss Gladys Parrish. It will be entitled "Carfrac's Comedy."

Mr. Owen Wister, the well-known American writer, spent some months in Germany immediately before the War, and he has now prepared a book in which he records his impressions of various aspects of the national life that came under his observation. The work will be entitled: "The Pentecost of Calamity," and will be published by Messrs. Macmillan early in September.

We are glad to learn that the first edition of "The Book of France," published in aid of French sufferers in the War, has been sold out, and that a second impression of the work has recently been issued by Messrs. Macmillan.

Mr. John L. Carter, author of "Peggy the Aeronaut" and "The Pilgrimage of Delilah," has completed another promising novel, entitled "Nymphet," to be published shortly by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

A new volume will appear on September 6th, in Mr. T. Fisher Unwin's First Novel Library. The title is "The Generation Between," and the author Miss C. H. Matheson.

"Midsummer Magic" is the title of a new romance by the author of "The Uplanders" (Walter Bamfylde), and may be expected during this month from the house of Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd. The American and Canadian rights have been secured by Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., have discovered another promising new lady author, who may ultimately, they think, attain to the popularity of a Mrs. Barclay. Her name is Miss Mary Thornton, and she has written a delightful story or romance of the early thirties of the nineteenth century, to be entitled "When Pan Pipes."

Our readers who have friends in the British Horse Artillery ought to see a fine spirited double-page picture in the Sphere for August 28th, 1915, entitled: "Rushing a gun through the deserted streets to a hard-pressed position on the British Front." It is from a drawing by Christopher Clark, "from material supplied July, 1915." It is one of the finest war pictures which even the Sphere has given us. The same paper, in the same issue, has a full-page drawing of the great twin-propeller "battle-aeroplane" of the German army, which our men call "Fritz." With its two machine guns able to fire in any direction, and its double engines, "Fritz" is, indeed, an ugly customer; in fact, the Sphere says our air-men have only one chance against him, i.e. to fly away home at full speed! It is not complimentary to our aircraft that they should let the Germans beat them in aerial cruisers as well as in air battleships. If it had not been for the patriotic energy and example of the Daily Mail, we should have had no air-fleet of any kind worth speaking of.

Mr. Horatio Bottomley has done good service to the country in many ways; his paper, John Bull, has a sale—we believe it is a sale, not a "circulation"—of over a million copies a week. He is an optimist, and we want some level-headed optimists on the Press. In his preface to a very useful little shilling book, "John Bull's Diary of the War" (Odhams Ltd., Long Acre, W.C.), is. net, Mr. Bottomley says it is "The plain tale of an Empire challenged and an Empire aroused. It is the diary of the dawn of a future which will eclipse all the glories of the past. That is why I call this volume the 'Diary of Destiny.' For reference, there is an index alphabetically arranged; and there, under each letter, you will find the name of every man and place, and all the events which really matter. It is the index of the world's fate."

Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton publish for the University of London Press, Ltd., at St. Paul's House, Warwick Square, London, E.C., "Wound Infections and some New Methods for the Study of the various Factors which come into Consideration in their Treatment," by Colonel Sir Almroth E. Wright, M.D., F.R.S., Consulting Physician to the British Expeditionary Force.

Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., have published at is. net, in cloth, "A Study of the Development of Infantry Tactics," by Colonel Beca; translated by Captain A. F. Custance, with a preface by Colonel Hackett Pain, C.B. No doubt it is, as the Army and Navy Gazette says, "an extremely interesting and thoughtful treatise." Curiously enough, so far as we have been able to find, there is no clear indication of the nationality of the author, Colonel Beca. Probably he is French, but he might be Italian or even German.

"A Manual of Home Nursing," by Louisa Emily Dobrée, just published at is. net, by Messrs. Allen & Unwin, Ltd., is described by the Queen newspaper as "especially useful to those obliged to undertake the duty of nursing without previous preparation"; and Mary Scharleib, M.D., says, "Miss Dobrée's book is just the one I should like to put into the hands of every intelligent and unselfish girl at the commencement of her home life."

"The native Scot is not the dull, dour, canny and cautious person that he is represented to be. This collection of stories will afford abundant evidence of the statement." So says the Rev. W. S. Bruce, D.D., in a is. net book, entitled "The Nor' East," just published by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. These stories are all about Scotland and almost all about the north-east corner thereof; and as Dr. Bruce very truly says: "The flavour is found in some Scottish phrase—the point and piquancy are lost when translated into English." Here is a sample of the stories, taken almost at random from the chapter on "Courtship and Marriage":—

"The methods of proposing are endless. There is a lovely story on Onside of a shepherd and his Highland lassie.

"'Maggie,' said Donal, 'I want you sair; but I've to speer this at ye first: What can ye dae without?'

"'What do ye mean, Donal?' Maggie asked, in surprise.

"'I mean, can ye dae without fine claes, an' fine dishes an' fine furnitur?'

"The loving reply was: 'I can dae without a' thing but yersel', Donal.'"

So large a portion of the wealthier part of the human race are interested in horse racing that "Tod Sloan, by Himself," will doubtless have a large sale. The book is a handsome demy 8vo., with thirty-two illustrations, published by Grant Richards, Ltd. It is edited by Mr. A. Dick Luckman, and, as a story, it is at once well told and worth telling. A good index would be a welcome addition to the next impression. Even the ordinary reader who cares little or nothing about racing will find this book interesting as a human document.

The long-distance record for advance notice of publication has been hung up by Frederick A. Stokes Co., who are announcing already publication in February, 1916, of "Mrs. Balfame," a mystery story by Gertrude Atherton. The Stokes Co. has also taken over from other publishers a number of other books by Mrs. Atherton: "The Conqueror," "Julia France and Her Times," "Tower of Ivory," "The Californians," "The Splendid Idle Forties," "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times," and "A Few of Hamilton's Letters."—N.Y. Publishers' Weekly.

The latest addition to the Sesame Library published by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., is Chamisso's famous work "Peter Schlemihl: The Man without a Shadow."

When "Naval Occasions," by "Bartimeus" appeared, it revealed the presence in our midst of a sailor-author who could interpret for us the spirit which lay behind that cheery mien of the men of the King's Navy. "Bartimeus" has just finished his second volume entitled "A Tall Ship," which will be published immediately by the House of Cassell. It consists of a collection of sea stories depicting in a characteristically humorous manner the hopes, joys, jollities and fears peculiar to the men who guard our shores.

"A Woman's Love," by Silas K. Hocking, is announced as being added next week to the Cassell's 2s. net, Novel List. It consists of the life stories of a man and a woman doomed to loveless marriages and whose lives link out evenly at the end.

The Robert Louis Stevenson romances are now to attain the dignity of Juvenile Classics form. Messrs. Cassell are about to issue as initial volumes in their Empire Library, handsomely bound and illustrated editions of "Kidnapped," "Treasure Island," "Catriona," and "The Black Arrow." The colour pictures in the case of each volume come respectively from the brushes of those well-known artists, W. R. S. Stott, John Cameron, A. C. Michael and Cyrus Cuneo. Rider Haggard's favourite, "King Solomon's Mines" is to be similarly honoured, the pictures being provided by Mr. A. C. Michael.

"G. K. C." invented that "joy" of detectives, Father Brown, whose first exploits are enshrined in "The Innocence of Father Brown," which had a big run on its initial issue. Messrs. Cassell are now adding G. K. Chesterton's masterpiece to their list of Famous Sixpenny Novels, and the new edition of "The Innocence of Father Brown" will be issued next week.

"The Belgian Cook Book," which Mr. Heinemann published on September 2nd, is a collection of recipes from Belgian cooks in England, collected and arranged by Mrs. Brian Luck, and published for the benefit of the Belgian Red Cross Society. The recipes are simple and mostly inexpensive and are, therefore, well suited for persons of moderate means. The dedication of this book has been graciously accepted by H.M. the Queen of the Belgians, whose autograph letter granting the permission and expressing her sympathy with the objects of the book, is reproduced in the volume.

Owing to the exceptional demand and dislocation—of labour and railways—in consequence of the War, publication of "Michael O'Halloran" must be delayed until next Tuesday.

THE NEW NOVEL "FRECKLES"
BY THE AUTHOR OF

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN

BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

512 pages, with 4 Illustrations in Photogravure, 6/-

'Mickey,' like 'Freckles,' is a character of unusual charm, possessed of Irish wit and sprightliness, and a joyous, happy nature. The work possesses, as with 'Freckles,' a deep feeling for Nature, and Human nature, and it has the charm of the woods, the flowers, and all living things.

Rumour that the Government is to crab Education

IF anything would encourage the Pan-Germans in the idea that Mr. Lloyd George was only bluffing when he boasted our silver bullets would beat the Germans, surely it would be that the Government Committee on Public Retrenchment recommended a serious reduction in money for national education, and Mr. R. C. Evans, editor of The Teachers' World, informs us that there is a possibility of such a recommendation being made. We can hardly believe it; it would be so disheartening to our people and so encouraging to the Germans to think their Kultur had done such irreparable injury to our national culture.

Mr. Robert Bowes Birthday congratulations

CONGRATULATIONS to Mr. Robert Bowes, the well-known bookseller and publisher, who was 80 on Sunday. Mr. Bowes is one of the grand old men of Cambridge, respected by all sections of the community alike for his personal character, his business integrity, and his public work. He was formerly a member of the Town Council, where his advice was always greatly valued, and he is still, I believe, a governor of the Old Schools and a manager of the Castle End Schools. In Mr. Bowes, the old Volunteer movement had one of its staunchest supporters and most enthusiastic officers, and he retired after many years of service with the honorary rank of Major.—From the Cambridge Daily News of August 28th.

Japan's Book Trade

JAPAN'S annual book trade is increasing, as a writer in The Japan Times notes with satisfaction, though he is pained to observe the subordinate place it still holds in commerce when compared with the traffic in alcoholic beverages of various sorts; and he casts an eye of envy upon the much larger sale of reading matter that this country can boast—larger per capita as well as in the total. Books of all sorts, except school textbooks, have a yearly sale in Japan amounting to about three million yen, or half as many dollars; magazines show an equal circulation; elementary schoolbooks are in demand to the extent of two million three hundred thousand yen; and textbooks for the intermediate schools call for an annual outlay of about half as much. What the high schools and colleges have to say in regard to textbook purchase is not recorded by the Times. This yearly disbursement of almost ten million yen for literature is creditable, though we must remember that Japan's population is fifty-six millions, so that an average of only fifteen sen is spent annually on reading matter by the Japanese man, woman, or child. Seven cents a year will not buy much of a library.—The Dial.

The Book Trade and the War

SERGEANT AUSTEN C. DENT, of the R.A.M.C., was born July 19th, 1892. He was educated at the Friends' Bootham School, York, and afterwards at Jesus College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. before he was twenty-one. He afterwards entered the publishing business of J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd., intending to take that up as his career, but when the War broke out he immediately enlisted. He chose to go into the Medical Corps rather than enter an ordinary fighting regiment because he had imbibed some of the horror of killing in his school education; but he took all risks, and died in fulfilling his duty. He was killed in Gallipoli while attending to the wounded, on his birthday, July 19th, 1915. Mr. Dent says:—"Though he had trained for the Officers' Corps in Cambridge, he preferred to go as a private, as did his brother, who was a student of Worcester College, Oxford, and who joined the 4th Seaforths because of setting an example to our own people, and it is somewhat strange that out of the sixty-six men who have left us for the Front our two sons should be the first to fall."

Mr. J. M. Dent and his family have the sincere sympathy of the book trade. This is the second son Mr. Dent has had killed.

Corporal James Rymer, R.A.M.C., the well-known representative of Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd., has been promoted to sergeant.

The September Windsor

SEVERAL important articles on themes from the War are lavishly illustrated from photographs and drawings in the September number of the Windsor Magazine. Under the title of "The Equipment of the Forces," W. G. Fitz-Gerald gives an interesting survey of the business aspect of war in the necessary supply of innumerable articles which now have to be made in enormously larger quantities than ever before, and with all possible speed. The extent to which our industrial centres are coping with such demands is shown with many interesting facts, and a further article by W. Leighton deals more particularly with the effects of the War upon our principal textile industries. Another timely article is an intimate study of the career of General Botha by Stephen Black, the well-known writer on South African matters. Mr. Black's close acquaintance with his subject gives especial authority to this article. An interesting account of Serbia and the Serbians is contributed by John W. N. Sullivan, who has but lately returned from Serbia with varied experiences of hospital and relief work there, in which he has been taking an active part. The article is accompanied by a number of good illustrations from recent photographs. A paper on "Civilian War Service," by S. L. Bensusan, the well-known writer on many aspects of country life, contains some interesting facts and suggestions concerning the various activities in war-time of civilians who want to do their share of whatever war service they can best render.

Despite the space given to these and other important war subjects, there is a notable collection of fiction by favourite authors, including a powerful complete story by H. de Vere Stacpoole, which recalls the finest work of that well-known author in "The Blue Lagoon" and the other books which established his reputation. E. F. Benson contributes a complete story of remarkable interest which no one should miss, and there is a fine romantic tale by Marjorie Bowen. F. E. Baily's new comedy story is charmingly illustrated by G. C. Wilmshurst, and other complete stories on varying themes, strenuous and entertaining, are contributed by Ralph Stock, Priscilla Craven, G. Villiers Stuart, Theodore Goodridge Roberts, and other authors of distinction. This notable programme of fiction is attractively illustrated throughout by leading black-and-white artists. Altogether this is a remarkably varied and important number.

Interesting American Copy- right decision affecting an English author

INDICATED.

An interesting case, Bentley v. Tibbals, appealed from the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, was heard before Judges Lacombe, Cox and Rogers, in the Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, on March 9th of the current year (223 F.R. 247). Judge Rogers handed down the decision.

The complainant, Bentley, an Englishman, secured in 1906 a United States copyright for a book, copyrighted also in England, "Bentley's Telegraph Cyphers." In 1907, he published and copyrighted in England a larger book, "Bentley's Complete Phrase Code," containing a substantial amount of the earlier book, and bearing the following notice on its title-page: "This Code includes the Telegraph Cyphers entered according to act of Congress in the year 1906, by E. I. Bentley, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D.C. All rights reserved. Entered at Stationer's Hall."

This larger book was not copyrighted in the United States, although he sold numerous copies in this country from type set up in London.

At the same time, defendant sold in the city of New York a book of the same size and colour of binding as the complainant's enlarged work, on the cover of which he placed the words, "Bentley's Complete Phrase Code," in gilt letters of the same size as are used in the English publication; it contained an exact and complete phrase code published by plaintiff, as to subject-matter, preface, specimens, and title page, with certain unimportant exceptions. It is this work which, according to complainant, infringed the copyright which complainant secured in this country in 1906 upon "Bentley's Telegraph Cyphers," the essential features of the "Cyphers" being embodied in the work.

The defendant, the American publisher, claimed that he had a perfect right to copy an uncopyrighted book, that complainant, by importing into this country "Bentley's Complete Phrase Code," and by selling it here, lost his right to be protected in this country on anything which it contained; that the publication of parts of a copyrighted book as parts of an uncopyrighted book involves an abandonment of the copyright.

While the Circuit Court of Appeals admitted that complainant violated the law of the United States in importing the phrase code into this country and selling it here, still it declared that "it is not sufficient to debar a suitor for relief that he has committed an unlawful act, unless that unlawful act affects the matter in litigation."

The court refused also to uphold defendant's other claim, that the publication of parts of a copyrighted book as part of an uncopyrighted book involves an abandonment of the copyright.

"The conclusion at which we have arrived," said Judge Rogers, in his decision, "is that the complainant is not entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant from publishing and selling 'Bentley's Complete Phrase Code,' as prayed for in the bill. We have arrived at this conclusion, not because he reprinted the matter in England without taking out copyright in that country. That he could do without impairing any of his rights in the United States. But his difficulty arises out of the facts that in his English publication of the Code he embodied the Telegraph Cyphers, or a substantial part of that work, and imported the same into the United States, and sold it here, without any notice in it by which the public could know by inspection the copyrighted from the uncopyrighted matter.

"In our opinion, one who so embodies copyrighted with uncopyrighted matter that one reading his work cannot distinguish between the two, has no right to complain if the book is republished by third parties. It is true that Bentley did insert the statutory notice in the Code by which he directed attention to the fact that the Telegraph Cyphers were included in the new publication, but the statutory notice was intended by Congress to apply to publications as a whole—where the author is copyrighting the work as a whole. It was not intended by Congress that, by inserting notice in an uncopyrighted work that it contains copyrighted matter, the author could thereby prevent the republication by a stranger of the uncopyrighted book."

The decree of the lower court, granting an injunction, restraining the defendant and awarding profits and damages, was reversed, and the bill dismissed.

Death of Mr. Willing, Junr.

ONE of the best-known advertising agents in London has passed away in the person of Mr. James Willing, who for many years has carried on a large business at 125, Strand, W.C. His father, who was the pioneer of the great extension of advertisements to private hoardings, died at the age of 89 in 1908; and up to that date, the son, himself approaching his seventieth year, was always known as "Willing, junior," or even "young Willing." At one time, Mr. Willing was joint proprietor with the late Sir Augustus Harris, of the Sunday Times. Although of a retiring disposition, his genial character gained him many warm friends.

Messrs. C. Arthur Pearson, Ltd., will publish next week a new sixpenny booklet by the Bishop of London under the title of "The Soul of a Nation." It contains the remarkable sermon which was preached by the Bishop from the steps of St. Paul's Cathedral, at the Drumhead Service a month ago.

The greatest book ever written by a woman

THE superlative statement is made of Emily Brontë's novel, "Wuthering Heights," that it is "the greatest book ever written by a woman." This opinion is advanced by Clement K. Shorter in his biography of Emily's sister, Charlotte, that appears in the series of "Literary Lives." Support seems to be given to Mr. Shorter's estimate in the progressive encomiums passed on the book, and quoted by him, since Sidney Dobell, a contemporary of the novelist, recognised its merits, and Matthew Arnold and Mr. Swinburne continued the laudatory comment. Praise could perhaps go no higher than Mr. Swinburne's in placing "Wuthering Heights" alongside "King Lear," the "Duchess of Malfi," and "The Bride of Lammermoor." Mrs. Humphry Ward and Maurice Maeterlinck, though unquoted, are cited as joining in the chorus of praise. "There are greater novels, doubtless," Mr. Shorter qualifies, "novels replete with humour and insight—qualities that it has not. But there is no book that has so entirely won the suffrage of some of the best minds of each generation since it appeared." Not to realise the high qualities of this masterpiece of fiction," says Mr. Shorter, "is to be blind indeed to all the conditions which go to make a great book." Accepting the dictum that the love for Milton's "Lycidas" may be taken as the touchstone of taste in poetry, he does not hesitate to advance the parallel statement that the "appreciation of the Brontë novels may be counted as a touchstone of taste in prose literature."—The Literary Digest.

"A Book of Belgium's Gratitude"

AMONG the thousands of refugees who have received help and hospitality from the British Empire are many of Belgium's most distinguished authors and artists, and their gratitude is finding spontaneous expression in a volume of international interest which is now in preparation. This is entitled: "A Book of Belgium's Gratitude" and is under the highest patronage. His Majesty King Albert is the patron; His Excellency M. Paul Hymans, Belgian Minister in London, is the president, and MM. Emile Cammaerts, Emile Claus, Henri Davignon, Jules Destree, Paul Lambotte, Baron Moncheur and Chevalier E. Carton de Wiart are members of the Committee. In addition to King Albert and most of the Committee the following have promised literary contributions: the Baron de Broqueville, Count Goblet d'Aviella, Count de Lalaing, MM. Vandervelde, Maurice Maeterlinck, P. Berryer, Emile Verhaeren, Professors Dejaire and Corbian, the Countess van den Steen de Jehey, and Mesdames Destree, Maton, Vandervelde and Carton de Wiart. Among the important subjects with which they deal are: the Neutrality of Belgium and the British Guarantee; the Belgian Relief Fund and the organisation of hospitality in this country; the help given to the Belgian Army and the work of repatriation; the support given by English Art to Belgian Art; the English bar as compared with the Belgian bar; the tributes paid by English poets and writers to suffering Belgium; Belgian refugees in London and other cities, at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, in the country districts and in the factories. Special sections are also devoted to the very material help given to Belgium by our Colonies, Australasia, Canada and Cape Colony, and last, but not least to the most generous assistance rendered by the United States of America through the medium of the Relief Commission and its president Mr. Hoover.

The book is also extraordinarily interesting on the artistic side, for the artists include E. Claus, V. Rousseau, A. Baertsoen, J. Delville, Ch. Mertens, A. Bastien, A. Chyuenaer, P. Paulus, E. Rombaux, and their work relates entirely to English subjects. English landscape will here be seen through Belgian eyes, while the numerous portraits include some of those who have identified themselves most fully with Belgium's cause.

The book will be printed in French and English and the list of translators will include many well-known English names. Mr. W. J. Locke has kindly consented to act as Translation Editor.

The book will be published by Mr. John Lane and the profits are to be placed at the disposal of Her Majesty Queen Mary.

Get rid of the "Stickers"

THERE is one sure, quick, easy road to commercial ruin, and every year sees thousands of retailers travelling that road. That is to "let stickers stick."

No buyer is so shrewd but that his stock will gather some slow-selling goods, but that's his own fault if they stay there.

Every one of the much-talked-about big city stores has an iron-clad rule which no buyer dare evade; seasonable goods must not be carried over, and no stuff dare be kept on hand beyond a certain time.

Watch the advertising of these houses. See how they knife the slow sellers. They don't call 'em stickers, of course, but you, who have been there yourself, can read between the lines. If laggard goods will not sell at one price, the knife goes in again and if need be yet again, until the desired result is wrought.

The first loss is the smallest loss. The longer you wait, the less goods are worth. A dollar invested in quick-turning stuff soon becomes two dollars. In stickers that linger on the shelf a dollar quickly shrinks to fifty cents and by and by to nothing.

Don't fool yourself. An article is worth not what it cost, but what it will bring. Goods that have outstayed their welcome never improve in value. Tied up money earns you nothing. Better have one dollar in stuff that turns over and over and earns you a profit at every turn than three dollars in shelf warmers.—The Keystone.

"Smacks of deliberate unfriendliness"

THE suggested action of the Publishers' Association, in connection with American authors and the Australian market, is thus referred to by the organ of the American book trade—The Publishers' Weekly, of New York:—

"Our friends and brethren the English publishers are taking an unfortunate method to emphasize their view that when they purchase English rights for an American book, they should have the Australian market ipso facto, by a joint agreement in the nature of a boycott. This is scarcely likely to mend matters. To refuse to deal with American authors, some of whom have great popularity and wide sale in England, except on a previously determined basis, to which only one side is a party, may prove to be cutting off one's nose to spite one's face. The Australian market, under the newer copyright conditions, in which home manufacture is not insisted upon, is of more importance than heretofore, and should be a growing market. It should be worked in the best interest of the author, whether through American or through English publishers; but the action suggested smacks too much of 'deliberate unfriendliness,' and we cannot but regret the attitude."

"Weeds of Literature"

As a reading nation we are filling up on the husks of periodical literature. The 3,000 booksellers in the printing trades industry twenty-five years ago carrying legitimate stocks of representative books are to-day less than 1,000, despite the fact that the country has increased greatly in wealth and full 50 per cent. in population. Germany publishes 354 books to the million inhabitants; France, 344; Great Britain, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, Sweden, Norway, rank after France in slightly decreasing ratio; and even agrarian Russia prints 85 books per million of its benighted people. The United States stands at the foot of the list with an issue of 81 books to the million. But we publish 60 per cent. of all the periodicals on the globe. British periodicals number in all about 4,900. At the rate of ten a day, including Sundays and holidays, for the last ten years new American periodicals aggregating 40,000 have been admitted to the mails. With a scarcely appreciable increase in the circulation of the higher class of magazines, the mails of the country are flooded with cheap periodical stuff whose chief end is to disseminate their padded pages of advertisements at the expense of the Post Office Department.

If people had to pay for their wars before they fought them there would be a reign of universal peace.—Chicago Daily News.

Centennial of the Author of "Two Years Before the Mast"

THE Dana Centennial, the hundredth recurrence of the day (August 1st) on which was born the author of "Two Years Before the Mast," has passed with some appreciative mention, here and there, of the early developed talent of the young man who, at nineteen, for his health's sake, shipped as a common sailor for the voyage round the Horn, and at twenty-five published, in what has proved one of the best and most popular books of its kind, a detailed account of this sea-faring experience. It is his one and sufficient claim to literary immortality, for neither his later volume, "The Seamen's Friend," nor his edition of Wheaton's "International Law," nor anything else from his pen, is ever mentioned in the same breath with his early masterpiece, which was in very truth "a voice from the fore-castle," presenting "the life of a common sailor at sea as it really is—the light and the dark together." This book, which has been reprinted no one knows how many times, and which only two or three years ago reappeared in two simultaneous and rather elaborate editions, was sold to its first publishers for $250, but brought considerably more to its author from its conscientious English re-publisher. Indeed, its success in England among persons of note in literature was most gratifying. Formal celebration of Dana's centennial will be held, somewhat belatedly, under the auspices of the Historical Society of his native town, Cambridge, on October 27th, with Mr. Joseph H. Choate, Professor Bliss Perry, and others as speakers, and Bishop Lawrence as presiding officer. About the same time there will be an exhibition of Dana relics in Harvard's new library.—The Dial.

From our "English Catalogue of Books" we find that the first English editions of this delightful classic of the sea appear to have been published in 1854, in war time, by Routledge, at 1s. 6d., and by Moxon, at 2s. 6d.

Maria Edgeworth and her nephew, Thomas Lovell Beddoes

'It is a strange, one may almost say unique, thing that upon a house in Clifton is a tablet, proclaiming the fact that three persons lived in that house over a century ago, and the work of all three of those people is to-day alive, working, influencing the people of this generation. They of the eighteenth century speaking to us of the twentieth. The names are Humphrey Davy, Maria Edgeworth, Thomas Lovell Beddoes. What was there in their work that gave it such vitality? That vitality is proved in the case of the poet Thomas Lovell Beddoes by the fact that a new and popular edition of his work has been issued.'—From an interesting article by James Baker, F.R.G.S., in The Schoolmaster for August 21st, 1915.

Will Compressed Air save War ships and other ships?

WE hope Messrs. Frederick Warne & Co. will have a large sale for the August number of St. Nicholas. It contains a most interesting well-illustrated article describing the inventions of an American engineer, William Wallace Wotherspoon, who has Scottish blood in his veins. He uses compressed air to drive the sea out of wrecked ships and refloat them; to fight fires; and so successful has he been that the U.S. naval authorities finally consented to let him experiment with the U.S. armoured cruiser North Carolina. When Mr. Wotherspoon's compressed air system was ready, he said "Pull out the plugs," and they opened four big valves in one of the under-water compartments, the sea rushed in, and the cruiser began to sink, heeling over to one side. Then, with the sea still rushing in through a hole a yard in diameter, Mr. Wotherspoon turned on his compressed air. It expelled the water instantly, and the ship resumed her normal position. In many cases, as in that of the Titanic, when the sea gets into a compartment and fills it, as there is only air at ordinary pressure on the other side of the steel wall, the sides bulge and finally give way, and so compartment after compartment gets filled, as in the case of the Titanic, so Mr. Wotherspoon fits his air pipes so that he can fill the compartments next to the injured one with compressed air and thus counteract the pressure on the other side. In the same way he uses his system for forcing fire-suffocating gases, such as carbonic acid gas, which can be drawn from the smoke stack of any steamer, and mixed with a small quantity of another gas effectually smothers fire and does not injure cargo as salt water does. Messrs. Warne would do good service if they sent copies of this issue to Mr. Fred T. Jane, Southsea, and to the editors of The Navy (13, Victoria Street, S.W.), Land and Water, and other Naval service and Merchant service papers.

Baits to catch book buyers

"THE DOUBLEDAY, PAGE BOOKSHOP in the Pennsylvania Terminal, New York City, has put up inside the shop a large bulletin board with a glass front; across the top is painted the legend 'A Word from the Authors.' Inside the frame are displayed autograph letters from Joseph Conrad, Stewart Edward White, Gene Stratton-Porter, Harry Leon Wilson, Colonel E. D. Swinton, Walter Prichard Eaton, Montague Glass, and Arthur Train. The letters give a pleasant little touch of intimacy to the Bookshop, and they are exciting considerable comment. Publishers are generally glad to supply autograph letters from their leading authors for such display purposes."

This extract from our excellent contemporary The Publishers' Weekly, of New York, is interesting. The special window display is losing its attraction because it is over-done, and the book-buying public is getting fed up on being treated as though it were hardly out of school. Real cotton wool in the window to represent the Polar regions, with a model of Dr. Cook; real sand and children's seaside spades and buckets to call attention to holiday literature. So some other bait has to be tried. Messrs. Doubleday, Page & Co. will have quite a crowd around their framed glass bulletin board, with real holograph letters from celebrated authors, which, as the Publishers' Weekly says, "give a pleasant touch of intimacy" and pass the time while you wait for your train at the "terminal." But where is this thing going to end? Next we shall hear of a pleasant touch of intimacy being provided by the exhibition of the pen and ink which the great explorer wrote his book with, and the pants which he never took off while in the frozen regions—but there would be nothing novel in that. Dr. Nansen's pants were on view in London when he was lecturing here on one of his Polar expeditions. Is not the way the word "terminal" is used in the quotation a comparatively new one? Even the latest greatest American Webster does not give terminal as a term for a railway station at the end of a line.

The American Books

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. are to be congratulated on the American Books Series, of which four volumes have already been published. The object of the series is to present a popular authoritative discussion of typical American problems and movements. The four initial volumes are "The American College," by Isaac Sharpless; "The American Navy," by Rear-Admiral French E. Chadwick; "Municipal Freedom," by Oswald Ryan; and "American Literature," by Leon Kellner. These volumes seem to be written judiciously and to be free from the note of a stupid "optimism" which so often mars a work of this kind. The books are of good appearance and are well printed. Price, 60 cents. net each. The Argonaut.

MESSRS. ALSTON RIVERS, LTD., write:—"You will doubtless remember that in December, 1913, we informed the trade, through the medium of your journal, that our Mr. J. M. Edkins was retiring on a pension at the end of that year. In view of the fact that Mr. Edkins is still calling upon the London trade for other publishing houses, we have again given him our commission, at the same time continuing the pension we arranged in 1913."

Boston has long considered itself to be the hub of the universe; now, according to the New York Sun, San Francisco claims to be the navel of the world.

NOTICE TO THE TRADE

149, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

Not a German

I, OTTO MARIUS KLING, of 54, Great Marlborough Street, in the County of London, Music Publisher, do solemnly and sincerely declare as follows:—It having come to my knowledge that certain evilly-disposed or thoughtless persons have spread abroad rumours alleging that I am of German nationality, and, further, that I am at the present time connected with a German firm, I, in order definitely to put a stop to such base and unfounded rumours, append overleaf a phototype reproduction of my birth certificate showing clearly that I am of French-Swiss nationality, having been born at Geneva."

Mr. Kling has no difficulty in proving that he and his father are of Swiss nationality. He makes his declaration before Mr. T. C. Fenwick, a Commissioner for Oaths, of 16, Berners Street.

Answer to Correspondent

MR. A. MCGOFF, Liverpool.—The famous "Address to the Mummy in Belzoni's Exhibition" was written by Horace Smith (1779-1849) and has been published in collections of his verse by Mr. John Murray, and in many general collections of verse and recitations.

Notices of Books

From The Cambridge University Press.—"The North-West and North-East Passages, 1576-1611," edited by P. F. Alexander, M.A., is the first of the Cambridge Travel Books, a series designed to illustrate the history of geographical discovery by means of selected voyages and travels. These manuals will, undoubtedly be of service in schools, as readers, or as an aid in teaching geography.

From Messrs. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd.—"The Black Watch," by L. Cope Cornford and F. W. Walker (in the Wayfarer's Library), gives a most interesting account of this famous regiment, from its founding in 1725 to the present time. It is a stirring record, and should be widely read at the present time.

From Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton.—"The Secret Seaplane," by Guy Thorne. An exciting story of seaplanes and Zeppelins, with battles in the air and death and destruction galore. Possibly before the War is over we shall see some such production as that conceived by Mr. Thorne—an aerial Dreadnought; if so, the Zeppelin menace will be rendered more remote. The great secret about Mr. Thorne's seaplane is that it is noiseless when in flight—a most desirable point, and one that has not yet been satisfactorily solved by any nation. Unfortunately, Mr. Thorne does not tell us how to do it.

From the Same—"The Blazed Trail Novels," by Stewart Edward White, include "The Riverman," "Conjuror's House," "The Westerners," and "Blazed Trail Stories," all breathing the essence of the forests Mr. White knows so well. Lovers of the wild, out-of-doors life should not fail to read this author's books.

From the Same—"The Long Labrador Trail," by Dillon Wallace, is a story simply yet forcibly told of an expedition into the heart of Labrador, with its fearful hardships and tragic ending.

From the Same—"The Sword Hand of Napoleon," by Cyrus Townsend Brady. A long war novel dealing chiefly with the French invasion of Russia and the terrible retreat of the French army from Moscow. A thin thread of love-making runs through the story, which is never dull and which presents a vivid story of the fighting of a century ago. Readers will be interested to know that Mr. Brady proposes to issue a second book, "The Eagle of the Empire," which will be a continuation of the first.

From the Same—"The Adventures of Lieut. Lawless, R.N.," by Rolf Bennett (W. Marten). If a lieutenant of one of H.M. torpedo boats had the courage (or temerity) to act like the hero of this book he would assuredly be court-martialled and dismissed the service. Lieut. Lawless, however, seems to bear a charmed life and his exploits are as astonishing as they are varied. When reading a sea story one naturally expects to have to consume the proverbial grain of salt, but Mr. Rolf Bennett's readers must be prepared to swallow a barrelful!

From The Temple Press, Ltd.—"Light Car Manual." This is the second and revised edition and, like all the publications issued by the Temple Press, Ltd., is thoroughly dependable. The subject is treated exhaustively and hundreds of illustrations elucidate the text when required. Light cars are coming into use in ever-increasing numbers, and booksellers should be on the look-out for the business that is to be done in publications in this direction.

BOOK-AUCTION RECORDS

is the Youngest and the Most Vigorous publication of its kind,
and the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had. Each year it gives 15,000 Records of books,
from the invention of printing to the present day, for 5s. 3d. per quarter, being a lower price than publications which give a much smaller number of Records. Each
Part is in one alphabet, and an Index is given with Part 4. Each part has an illustrated article of value to booksellers. Baxter Prints
and Arundel Prints are included.
The Dublin, Edinburgh, and Glasgow sales are also recorded. The Clique says:—"It is the best,
bar none." "It is the most comprehensive, the cheapest, and the most-easily-referred-to work of its kind." "It is the only publication
which gives the entire catalogue
of the great Douglas sale of Cruikshankiana." "It is not an idle boast for the publishers to advertise that it is the greatest help the dealer in books has ever had." Send a postcard for a part on inspection.

A FINE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN NOVEL

The author of "The Furnace of Iron" is not the tourist of a season, but during a long residence in Egypt has had opportunities of gaining some insight into the workings of that complex quantity, the Oriental mind, and she traces out with intimate knowledge the paradoxes, humorous as well as deeply tragic, of the life of an Englishwoman married to an Oriental. The result is a remarkable and fascinating story.

THE Publishers' Circular

Prof. Fleming's Symposium of Wireless Telegraphy

WHAT would have been said if twenty years ago a publisher had put forth such a book as "The Wireless Telegraphists' Pocket-book," by J. A. Fleming, M.A., D.Sc., just issued from the Wireless Press, Ltd., Marconi House, London, at 6s. net? But nineteen years have gone by since the young Marconi landed with his little black box of apparatus on the shores of England. Now that little black box has developed into a vast world-wide system of primary importance to men of every nation, and the appearance of this little volume of Dr. Fleming's brings dramatically home to us that radio-telegraphy has established its right to rank as an exact and practical science. In the early days all adjustments and improvements had to be effected by trial and experiment. These empirical methods were slow, laborious and costly. For many years past investigators have been accumulating formulæ and methods of calculations leading straight to the desired goal, with a minimum of labour, and leaving nothing to chance. Dr. Fleming has collated all of these formulæ likely to be useful for practical wireless operating, and set them forth with all the clarity of diction for which he has attained a wide reputation. The distinguished author's earlier volume, "The Principles of Electrical Wave Telegraphy and Telephony," constitutes a standard work on the subject, and finds an honoured place on the bookshelf of every serious student of the science.

For the benefit of those who have allowed their mathematical knowledge to "rust," the mathematical notes to which the first chapter is devoted will prove of great assistance. Without diving too deeply into the "science of figures and formulæ" this chapter gives exactly what is necessary for the intelligent appreciation of the more peculiarly radio telegraphic chapters which follow. Next in order we find a section devoted to units, dimensions and systems of measurement. All the units and every kind of measurement needed by the wireless telegraphist, engineer, or investigator, are carefully and clearly set out, whilst the instruments themselves and the principles on which they are based come in for treatment both valuable and interesting. Even amongst those who are not closely concerned with radio-telegraphy the book is likely to find a ready market; for it is most useful to have such a handy volume for ready reference. Features of all systems are dealt with:—e.g., the arc system of wireless transmission, the Goldschmidt high-frequency alternator, the Fessenden heterodyne receiver, and so on.

Chapter III—one of the most valuable in the book as far as wireless engineers are concerned—deals in masterly style with high-frequency resistance and inductance measurement. The difference between high-frequency resistance and steady resistance, the calculation of high-frequency resistance of wires, self and mutual inductance with its calculation and measurement—all these form subjects of the greatest importance, whilst the numerous formulæ provided will be found of the greatest use. Further chapters, the contents of which are so valuable that we regret our lack of space for their enumeration, treat of high-frequency current and voltage measurements, capacity measurement and predetermination, methods of measuring wave-lengths and decrement, and numerous other vital subjects.

The "energy balance sheet," a feature of particular interest, figures on page 221. It shows the losses in particular parts of an experimental installation. No less than twenty-two pages of the book are devoted to receiving circuits and detectors, the formulæ to be used in their calculation, and descriptions of receivers of every type. That the information is right up-to-date is evident from the inclusion of the Goldschmidt tone wheel, a detector for continuous oscillations which has a number of points of interest.

Wireless operators will welcome the practical information on the maintenance of apparatus in chapter XI, and all interested in radio-telegraphy will find much help from the excellent glossary of terms which appears in the same chapter.

Chapter XI, which is occupied with practical information for wireless operators, has much practical information for many other people as well, including as it does the Continental and American Morse codes, instructions for the charging and maintenance of accumulators, the care of wireless apparatus; and last, but by no means least, a carefully compiled glossary of terms. The final chapter of some sixty pages contains a fine collection of mathematical and physical tables, which are of great value not only in wireless telegraphy, but in almost every other application of electricity.

Professor Fleming is to be congratulated on the amount of valuable information which he has managed to compress into so small a book, and the publishers deserve a word of praise for the compact and elegant form in which they have issued the volume.

Notes and Announcements

"THE PENTECOST OF CALAMITY" is the title of a new book by Mr. Owen Wister, the eminent American author, which Messrs. Macmillan will publish early in September. The author spent some months in Germany immediately before the War, and records in favourable terms his impressions of various aspects of the national life that came under his observation. The tone of this estimate throws into sharp contrast his strong condemnation of Germany in the present War. Mr. Wister's reflections on the position of America in the present crisis will also be read with special interest at the present time.

The Queen has sanctioned the publication in the October number of The Girl's Own Paper and Woman's Magazine of an authoritative article giving detailed particulars of the articles Her Majesty will require for the wounded during the coming winter.

H.R.H. the Princess Mary has accepted from Miss Flora Klickmann a copy of the thirty-sixth annual volume of The Girl's Own Paper, just completed. Her Royal Highness has intimated that she is interested to possess this volume.

His Majesty has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of "The Wonder Book of Empire," the latest addition to Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co.'s popular "Wonder Book" Series. The new volume is designed to convey to children in all parts of the Empire some idea of the wonder and value of their heritage, and having regard to the splendid assistance the Dominions are rendering the Mother Country at this critical time it should be sure of warm welcome and appreciation. There are 15 coloured plates and over 300 excellent illustrations. As the text is edited by Mr. Harry Golding we may be sure it is all right. Booksellers all over the Empire can very safely order this fine volume, price 3s. 6d. It is about the size of that old standard favourite Chatterbox volume. The fine coloured picture on the front board of the cover will sell it anywhere and everywhere, for the sixty millions of our whites and the hundred of millions of our dark skin fellow subjects are all resolute in defence of the Empire.

The new Agnes and Egerton Castle volume is just announced by the House of Cassell. "The Hope of the House," which is the title of their new novel, has its setting laid among the Welsh hills, the period being the opening phases of the War. Self-sacrifice is its leading theme, and among the characters will be found three Belgian refugees, one of whom fills a big place in the story.

It is some indication of the public tension and the desire for the mental relief one seeks in the pictures, comic and otherwise, to find the cinematograph shows "booming" throughout every part of the country. With it has come a desire to know more about the technical side of the business, and to meet that demand Messrs. Cassell announce for immediate publication "The Cinematograph Book," in which the editor of Work has drawn together a number of leading experts, who tell in simple language those photographers who are anxious to become cinematographers, and those men and women who want to be cinema operators, everything about the business. The principles of motion pictures are explained, the cinema camera described, the developing, the projector, the optical system, the management of the illuminant, what to do if the film fires—indeed, everything that is needful to become a cinema expert.

The War has brought about many changes in the toy business, among them a big incursion of British labour into this busy market. It seems opportune then that Messrs. Cassell should announce the latest addition to the Work handbooks as being a volume on "Toy-making." The handbook will deal with the making of a variety of toys within the compass of the average handyman and worker. Toy wagons, horses, signals, scales, engines, dolls, cradles, cannon-forts, entrenchments, and all the architecture and impedimenta of grown-ups will be freely and practically illustrated for miniature reproduction.

Messrs. Nelson have just published in their shilling cloth series a new edition of "True Tales of Mountain Adventure," by Mrs. Aubrey Le Blond (Mrs. Main), which was very favourably noticed in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR when it was first published in 1902. The writer is one of the most intrepid of Alpine climbers, is also a good observer and knows how to write good English with a touch of humour, e.g., her tale of the loss of her skirt in an avalanche. In one of her chapters the authoress mentions what doubtless many people must have noticed but what we do not remember ever to have seen referred to in print, i.e., the peculiar, slightly pungent smell of burnt gunpowder when rock strikes rock, or even when a stone is thrown with force enough to make sparks and hum in striking other stones on the road. Mrs. Main warns people with weak hearts or other unsound vital organs not to undertake long and difficult climbs. Since other lives depend on theirs they ought to be tested and passed by a doctor before being allowed to take the extra risk. There are risks enough in Alpine climbing in any case.

"Practical Bayonet Fighting with Service Rifle and Bayonet," by an Officer, is a little illustrated sixpenny manual published at the Bazaar Office, Windsor House, Bream's Buildings.

The Church Monthly for September, under "News of the Month," says:—"Alderman Keay has recently retired from the post of superintendent of the Sunday School of Holy Trinity, East-bourne. It is just forty years since he took up work as a teacher there, and after five years became superintendent. Although he has been Mayor of East-bourne on six occasions, and has many other calls upon his time, he continued throughout to carry out his duties as superintendent. He has been for many years President of the Associated Booksellers of Great Britain and Ireland and is well known for his keen support of all that may further the best interests of the book-selling trade." There is an excellent portrait of Mr. E. W. Keay, J.P., with the note.

"Indian Memories" is the title of Sir Robert Baden-Powell's new book with which Mr. Herbert Jenkins will open his autumn publishing season on September 15th. During the years that he was in India, Sir Robert filled many notebooks with his impressions and illustrated them with sketches. Thus his book has the virtue of being practically written and illustrated on the spot. It will contain twenty-three illustrations in colour and over 100 in black-and-white by the author.

Among volumes added recently to Messrs. Nelson's admirable "Collection Nelson" (sold here at 1s.) are "Pierre Nozière," by Anatole France, and "Stello" by Alfred de Vigny.

"The Blinded Soldiers and Sailors Gift Book" is the title of a volume which is shortly to be issued by Messrs. Jarrold & Sons, in aid of the Blinded Soldiers Fund, of which Mr. Arthur C. Pearson is secretary. Many of the leading authors and artists have contributed to the book, which will consist of a miscellaneous collection of short stories, poems, essays, &c. Most of the pictures are in colour, and an interesting feature of the book will be photographs of the Blinded Soldiers' and Sailors' Hostel, at St. Dunstan's, Regent's Park, and of the blinded heroes at work and at play. The inclusion of such names as H. G. Wells, Robert Hichens, Arnold Bennett, G. K. Chesterton, Sir Gilbert Parker, Frank Brangwyn, Sir Luke Fildes, Hugh Thomson is sufficient guarantee of the quality of its contents.

The result of the report of Mr. Frederick Palmer's visit to the Grand Fleet, and his arresting description of its doings, has evidently had a lively effect not only on the public, but upon the book trade. "A Tall Ship," the new volume by "Bartimeus," the sailor-author of "Naval Occasions," was announced for publication by Messrs. Cassell this week, but so enormous, they inform us, has been the demand for the work that the first large edition was oversubscribed and Messrs. Cassell have been compelled to print off an enormously larger edition. So that trade demands may be met simultaneously the publishers have decided to postpone publication until the 16th inst.

Mr. Mark Sieff, a well-known teacher of Russian in London, has sent to press with Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trubner & Co., Ltd., "A Manual of Russian Commercial Correspondence," which will be issued in the early autumn.

Mr. Albert C. White, whose enthusiasm for Irish causes is well known, has found time in the midst of recruiting work all over the country to bring together "A Little Book of Irish Verse," which will be published immediately by Messrs. Heath, Cranton & Co., and sold for the benefit of the funds for providing additional comforts for Irish troops. The contributors include Katherine Tynan, W. B. Yeats, Sir A. Conan Doyle, Patrick MacGill, J. H. Cousins, Louis McQuilland, Stephen Gwynn, Dr. Arthur Lynch, Shane Leslie and others.

Professor Emile Durkheim's famous work, "The Elementary Forms of the Religious Life," is at last to be made available to English readers. It has been translated from the original French by Mr. J. W. Swain, and is to be published by Messrs. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., on the 13th inst.

We understand that "the extraordinary interest which was aroused by the publication in The Daily Telegraph of Mr. Hall Caine's articles, 'The Drama of 365 Days,' has been even exceeded by the announcement that Mr. Heinemann is about to re-issue them in book form at the price of 1s. net. The volume will have, as frontispiece, the latest portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, which is reproduced specially for this work by permission of H.M. the King. 'The Drama of 365 Days' is not a history of the period it covers, but a series of flash-lights on the human side of the vast struggle. It is dedicated to the young manhood of the British Empire, and its thrilling pages should act as a clarion call to the nation."

T. Werner Laurie, Ltd., are just publishing, fully illustrated, "Anne Hyde, Duchess of York," by J. R. Henslowe. The book gives from various sources the story of that first wife of James II who stood in the unique position of being the mother of two successive reigning Queens of England. As the daughter of Clarendon, the great historian and Chancellor, her life is bound up with one of the most eventful periods of English history. The biography sets forth not only the events of her career, which was a brief one, but the estimation in which she was held by her contemporaries, and traces the strange story of her marriage, which had such far-reaching results. Her early youth in Flanders is illustrated by contemporary letters and leads up to her subsequent life in England as Duchess of York.

"Of Walks and Walking Tours: an Attempt to find a Philosophy and a Creed," is the title of a new illustrated book about to be published by T. Werner Laurie, Ltd. It is by Arnold Haultain, the author of "Goldwin Smith, his Life and Opinions." He endeavours to do for walks what Maeterlinck has done for the bee.

Messrs. Galloway & Porter, of Cambridge, announce a limited edition of "Rubāiyāt of Omar Khayyam," illustrated by Mera K. Sett.

The Book Trade and the War

MY DEAR MR. MARSTON,—We have on our staff fourteen single men of military age—one a Hollander, one a Dane, and the remaining twelve British subjects. Out of these ten endeavoured to enlist in our Overseas contingent! I am sending you a copy of this week's Cape Times. It will give you some details of our recruiting week. I understand that our first contingent is going to Egypt for training, and this may mean the Dardanelles. Our fellows are not very particular so long as they can get to grips with the enemy, though they would prefer the Hun to the Turk. You see they owe a debt to the Hun for the tricks played on us in West Africa.

Should our fellows go to England for training I will give one or two of them a letter of introduction to you.

The news we get of Russian reverses is somewhat depressing. I expect the Allies' policy now is to force a winter campaign, which Germany would prefer to avoid.—With very kind regards, yours sincerely,

J. MASKEW MILLER.

The Admiralty and "Fighting Ships"

MESSRS. SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LTD., announce another public edition of "Fighting Ships," by Fred T. Jane, 1915, which is in the press, and another change will be made. In this issue the Admiralty authorities will allow the names of the British ships and the information regarding them to stand; only the plans, photos and identification marks will be omitted. The first edition minus the entire British section will be withdrawn.

Tobacco for our Wounded

A note from Cape Town

DEAR MR. MARSTON,—With further reference to your kind letter of July 5th, on Mrs. Wathes' behalf I wish to thank you for the time and trouble you have taken with the view of ascertaining particulars of her son's death in the Festubert fighting. Mrs. Wathes is very grateful to you for all you have done in this matter, and she has asked me to send you a cheque for £10, which she wishes you to devote to your Tobacco Fund. In addition to this I am sending you my own cheque for £3 3s. I would like to send you more, and had hoped that Darter's and Jutta's would have joined me in a further shipment of tobacco, but owing to the great calls made on Cape Town commercial people during the present week they have asked on this occasion to be excused, and one can hardly blame them. Just now the recruiting spirit is in the air, and Cape Town is all agog with recruiting sergeants, the squealing of bagpipes, and the beating of drums, with, I am glad to say, very satisfactory results as far as this city is concerned. On the other hand, the men who cannot go to fight have been asked to contribute towards a fund for the equipment of the troops and the support of the dependents. During the week a sum in the neighbourhood of £50,000 has been guaranteed for this purpose. We are losing several members of our staff who are joining the contingent. I will send you a list of the names later, as you might care to notice this in THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR. With kind regards, and again many thanks, I am, yours very sincerely,

J. MASKEW MILLER.

August 13th.

P.S.—I am enclosing herewith a letter from Mrs. Wathes.

[My old friend Mr. J. Maskew Miller asked me some time ago if I could find out anything about the son of a friend of his, Mrs. Wathes, who came over from Rhodesia and was killed in the terrific fighting at Festubert. I was able to send Mrs. Wathes information as to where her son is buried, and the esteem in which his comrades held him, and Mrs. Wathes has, as will be seen, sent £10 for our Fishing Gazette Tobacco Fund. Mr. Miller, in addition to a lot of Cape tobacco,* sends £3 3s., making £5 5s. with the £2 2s. sent last October. I am telling Mrs. Wathes her kind help has enabled our fund, to which some readers of THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR also kindly subscribed, to pass the £1,000 mark. Mrs. Wathes says, "I expect many a wounded man has blessed you for being able to enjoy a smoke." But it is the readers of the Fishing Gazette who deserve the blessing. I enjoy a smoke so much myself that it is a great boon to be able to help to spread the enjoyment.—Ed.]

The E13 and the German outrage

IN view of the barbarity displayed by the German naval officers when they shelled the defenceless crew of submarine E13, which had grounded in neutral waters, it is interesting to recall the considered speech of the Kaiser's Plenipotentiary, given at the Hague on the 9th October, 1907. This we extract from Mr. A. A. Roberts's "Poison War," the author of which was visiting the Hague at that date.

His Excellency, in an impressive oration, stated that:

"Conscience, sound judgment, and the feelings of duty imposed by principles of humanity will be the primary considerations of naval officers, and will give a sure guarantee against abuses. The officers of the German navy, I say it proudly, will always be guided by the unwritten laws of humanity and civilization."

"The Poison War" is published by Mr. Wm. Heinemann.

Not lost with Lusitania

To the Editor of The Standard.

SIR,—IN THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR of recent date appeared an article in which it was stated that Mr. Feldman, of B. Feldman & Co., had been "murdered by the Germans on the Lusitania." This report has been copied into various other papers, causing consternation amongst Mr. Feldman's many friends at home and abroad, and considerable annoyance to the firm of which he is the head. We shall be glad if you will extend to us the courtesy of your widely read paper to state that Mr. Feldman was not on the Lusitania, and is, in fact, in perfect health at the present time. We are, Sir, yours truly,

B. FELDMAN & Co.

[We much regret the mistake and are at the same time very glad to find that our information was so entirely wrong.—ED. P.C.]

"The Devil's Spawn"

IT seems to be taking the Devil's name in vain to call the Pan-Germans his "spawn," as Commendatore William Le Queux, of the Order of the Crown of Italy, does in his new work, entitled "The Devil's Spawn: How Italy will Defeat them," which has just been published at 1s. net by Messrs. Stanley Paul & Co. Mr. Le Queux has the pen of a ready writer, but he does damage to his own contentions by his own exaggerations. He says: "A large section of the Italian Press is openly declaring that Great Britain will never be able to bear her proper part in the fierce struggle for existence which we must now expect in the near future without compulsory service." When Italy has done a tenth part as much as Great Britain has done already, she may have the right to talk in that way; but we doubt if she will use it. Mr. Le Queux himself admits it is doubtful whether the policy of Italy is based on the desire to save the human race from the curse of Hun-over-all-ship, or the wish to get a bit of her own back. He says (p. 103): "The key to the riddle of Italy's future course of action lies in the exact position which she has taken up in relation to her Allies. Is she in this War simply and solely for the direct recovery and liberation of unredeemed Italy, or as a member of a great confederation, linking up her strategy and tactics with those of the Entente Powers?" In face of the solemn announcements of her representatives, which he quotes, it seems a little ungracious for such a friend of Italy to postulate such a "riddle." Mr. Le Queux is, as we all know, quite rightly down on spies; he has hurled the thunderbolts of his indignation at our Government for permitting the "Spy Peril" to exist. But, if it is true, as seems probable, that Germany has spent vast sums in getting secret information as to matters in this country and in Italy about which she wanted to be informed—what good has it done Germany? She professes to having been amazed at our instant declaration of war, and amazed at Italy's "perfidy." As Mr. Le Queux says, "How the Germans have been deceived by their own diplomats!" Yes; and their spy system has proved their ruin, not ours or Italy's! Mr. Le Queux knows Italy well, and his little book is well worth reading. He is very severe—and, apparently, with good reason—at the way British Governments have starved our representatives in Italy; also given responsible offices to "arrogant Englishmen," who had "influence"—and even to foreigners, who transacted business in a chronic state of alcoholism! Mr. Le Queux ought to know, as he has had personal experience as consul of the little Republic of San Marino, in the centre of Italy. His conclusion is that "British Consular Service in Italy is a tragedy which must one day be revealed." What we do not understand is, if things are in the state described by our author, why a man of such character and position as Sir Rennell Rodd has not made such a protest as would have shaken the Home Government—if it is true that "Our consular service in Italy, and, indeed, all along the Mediterranean, has been a disgrace to the nation."

A book of national import

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD & SONS have nearly ready a book of national importance, entitled: "My Police Court Friends with the Colours," by Robert Holmes, a Police Court Missionary and Probation Officer.

In twelve strong concentrated chapters we have recorded the splendid patriotism of twelve hundred and sixty-seven men and lads, who, having appeared in the Police court at some time within the past seventeen years, had passed through the missionary's hands to settle in steady, honest employment. Good, clean-living fellows, they sprang from the four corners of the earth to every branch of national service at the first blast of the great call to arms. On mine-sweeping trawler, fleet supply boat, battle cruiser, in mercantile marine, and Royal Naval Division; with British Expeditionary Force, Canadian Contingent, Australian troops, Territorials, and in the new armies—we find the heroes everywhere. All deserve to rank with the best. Their worst state was seldom their own fault. The honourable condition their country's crisis found them in was largely of their own creating. To a man, they entered the struggle thinking of no reward, but just of the honour and welfare of our Sovereign and his dominions. The short biographies of seventy-two brave fellows finely illustrate the merits of all.

Those who have engaged in promoting Territorial efficiency, or in extending the work of boys' brigades, boy Scouts, and kindred movements, will read with much pleasure many striking tributes to the effect of discipline in the development of character. The immensely impressive value of the work the author has achieved is unconsciously revealed in his sympathetic sketches of the lives he has helped. It is a good book, and it does one good to read it. We doubt not that Britons the wide world over will be grateful for the excellent work it tells of, excellently done.

It is the most eloquent appeal by facts to the nation to use, instead of to lose, the young life in our British slums.

The volume runs to 100,000 words, and would in the usual course be published at 10s. 6d. net, but the publishers think so well of it, that they have decided to put it on the market at a price which brings it within the reach of all—2s. net.

The Australasian Navy

IN view of the splendid part which Australasia has already played in this war, both on sea and land, we are very glad to have from Messrs. Alston Rivers, Ltd., a new and cheaper edition (at 3s. 6d.) of "Flagships Three," by C. E. W. Bean, with illustrations by the author, which we noticed favourably on its first appearance in 1913. The author may with justice claim that in this work and in his other writings he has assisted in laying the keels of that British-Australasian Navy which has already made such a great beginning. The first flagship—briefly described—is the Norse and Danish galley which brought over "the sea-peoples who went to the making of our race." Then Mr. Bean takes a header into the ages and emerges on the deck of our old friend the cruiser Powerful when she was flagship of the British Squadron in Australian waters in the winter of 1908, when she slipped her moorings in Sydney harbour and started out to meet and do the honours to the great American fleet which visited Australia that year. The bulk of the book is taken up with the author's experiences of the British cruiser on her visit to Auckland with the other ships of the Squadron and then to Fiji and Norfolk Island. It is a moving picture of "the incessant preparation that is going forward night and day on every British warship in every ocean for some vague future battle." The shorter third part of the work describes the building of the first Dreadnought of the Australian Navy, the Australia. The political and geographical conditions which made an Australasian war fleet necessary are well set forth by Mr. Bean, and his book is worthy of a place in every naval library and in the library of all who are interested in sea power. Its sale has undoubtedly been limited by its title, from which one would gather that it is just another of those books about the gallant deeds of the British Navy which appear every Christmas season. It is a great deal more than that.

Mr. James Baker's Lecture on Scenes of the War

It was an impressive, embarrassing, and almost unnerving scene for a lecturer to face—the large church of the hospital at Netley, filled with officers and men from all the divisions of our army—from Flanders, Egypt, and the Dardanelles. In a few words, the Rev. Hazledine, one of the chaplains, referred to the lecturer—Mr. James Baker—and his knowledge of all the frontiers and places where this awful War is working its devastation; and remarked upon the fact that he had met the speaker's father in Moscow, at the coronation of the Tsar. Being in a church, there was no applause during the lecture; but now and then a subdued murmur ran through the large audience; and once or twice laughter even broke forth at certain sarcastic descriptions of Berlin's aims and pretensions. When the lecturer compared Nietzsche's force worship and his awful parody to the glorious gospel of the Sermon on the Mount, the intent strain was most impressive; and the pictures that followed the lecture, thrown on a screen at the east end of the church, especially the happy peasant scenes in places now ravaged and destroyed, were received with a low ripple of satisfaction; but at the end of the lecture a burst of applause came from the whole assembly. The chaplain, the Rev. G. W. Kerr, said the applause gave him a shock, but it was a tribute to the lecture. Some hymns were sung before and after the lecture, and the Rev. G. W. Kerr concluded with prayer; after which "God Save the King" was sung wholeheartedly; and the Rev. G. W. Kerr took the lecturer down to the west corridor, to speak to the men as they came out; and many a hearty handshake he received, and they were eager for copies of the song, "Here's to the Men in the Trenches"—but there were not enough copies for all.

U.S. leads World in Exports

For the first time in its history the United States leads the world as an exporter. Occasionally we have surpassed the United Kingdom in the exportation of domestic products, but it was only in the fiscal year ended June 30th, 1915, that our total exports, domestic and foreign, exceeded those of the United Kingdom.

Our total exports in the fiscal year 1915, according to an official statement of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, aggregated $2,768,600,000, as against $2,170,100,000 for the United Kingdom, the figures representing in the case of the United States an increase of 17 per cent., and in the case of the United Kingdom a decrease of 30 per cent. when compared with last year.—The American Stationer.

Our Autumn Announcement Number

DEAR SIR,—May we venture to suggest to you that you issue your Autumn Announcement Number earlier than usual this year. We always look to this number as the last word in Autumn announcements, as it reaches us just in time to order by return mail and get new books for Christmas. Without wishing to flatter you in any way, we do most certainly think that this and similar numbers of your paper are of greater value to the Colonial booksellers than any similar publication. The reason we suggest an earlier publication this year is that, owing to shipping difficulties, it is now taking from ten to thirteen weeks to get goods, where, prior to the War, we could rely on getting them eight weeks from date of order on this side. You will readily see that, if your number reaches us, say, at the beginning of November, as it usually does, it will this year be useless for the purpose of ordering book to be here by Christmas. If it is not possible to issue your regular Autumn Announcement Number earlier, perhaps you might make a special issue of early Autumn announcements for the export trade.—Faithfully yours,

T. W. GRIGGS & Co.

[We should be glad to publish the Announcement Number earlier, but the fact is the bulk of the publishers are not ready earlier.—ED.]

The nationality of Colonel Beca

DEAR SIR,—None of your guesses in regard to the nationality of Colonel Beca, author of "A Study of the Development of Infantry Tactics," was correct. Actually, he happens to be a Portuguese. His book was so highly thought of that it has been translated into nearly all the European languages.—Yours faithfully,

GEORGE ALLEN & UNWIN, LTD.

Ruskin House,
40, Museum Street, W.C.
Sept. 8th.

[In a note on the book, we referred to the fact that, so far as we could see, although the book was described as a translation of a work by Colonel Beca, there was nothing to show his nationality. We said "probably he is French, but he might be Italian or even German." In any future edition, we think that the fact that he belongs to the Portuguese Army should be stated; it adds so much to the interest of the military or other reader to know the standpoint of the author in a war in which he is concerned.—ED.]
